Hon. EDWIN WARFIELD

President-General

EDWIN WARFIELD,

PRESIDENT-GENERAL NATIONAL SOCIETY.

Edwin Warfield, son of Albert Gallatin Warfield and Margaret Gassaway (Watkins) Warfield, was born at "Oakdale," Howard County, Md., May 7, 1848. Richard Warfield, the immigrant and progenitor of the Warfield family in America, came to Maryland in 1662 from Berkshire, England. The Warfields were prominent in Colonial affairs, and participated in the patriotic movements which led up to the Revolution and the independence of the Colonies.

The subject of this sketch has descent from many other noted immigrants who settled in Maryland prior to 1700. Among them were Colonel Nicholas Greenberry, "Keeper of the Seal" and Acting Governor under Copley, 1692; Captain John Worthington, Member of "The Quorum," Member of the House of Burgesses, and Captain of Severn Militia; Colonel Nicholas Gassaway, Member of the Upper House of Lord Baltimore's Council and Deputy Governor; Colonel Henry Ridgely, Justice of the Provincial Court, Member of Lower House, Captain of "The Foote;" Matthew Howard, who was of the Norfolk Howards; John Bowies, Sr., progenitor of the Bowie family in Maryland; William Griffith, immigrant ancestor of the Girffiths of Mayland; Captain Thomas Claggett, Captain of British Navy; Major-General John Hammond, Justice of Provincial Court, 1667, Member of the Council, 1698, Member of the Court of Admiralty; Major John Welsh, Member of "The Quorum," 1671, High Sheriff of A. A. Co., 1676-1678; Colonel Edward Dorsey, Judge of High Court of Chancery, 1695, Member of House of Burgesses, and others. He has double descent from a majority of these immigrant ancestors.

Edwin Warfield's great-grandfather, Benjamin Warfield, was commissioned Captain of the Elkridge Militia in 1778. His mother's father, Colonel Gassaway Watkins, was a distinguished Revolutionary soldier, who served seven years and nine months in the "Old Maryland Line." He entered the army at Long Island in January, 1776, as Sergeant, and was mustered out at the close of the war in 1783 with the rank of Captain. He was in nearly every hard-fought battle of the war. In a sketch of his services, written by himself (the original preserved), he refers specially to Long Island, White Plains, Germantown, Monmouth, Camden, Guilford Court House, Second Camden, Ninety-Six and Eutaw Springs, and says he was toasted by General Greene at a public dinner on the High Hills of Santee for his bravery, and that he was frequently in the vanguard and was often sent by General Greene on important scouting tours. After the war he lived the life of a planter at "Walnut Grove," Maryland, but responded a second time to the call of his country during the War of 1812. He was then made Colonel and assigned to command at Annapolis. He was at the time of his death, July 14, 1840, President of the Maryland Society of the Cincinnati, and the last surviving officer of the "Maryland Line," "The Bayonets of the Revolutionary Army."

Edwin Warfield received only an academic education. His collegiate course was cut short by the Civil War, which resulted in the loss of his father's slaves and the means necessary for college expenses. He qualified himself for teaching, which he began at the age of eighteen years, and at the same time took up the study of law. He prosecuted both successfully, and found time to take an interest in public affairs. In 1874 he was appointed Register of Wills of Howard County, to fill a vacancy, and in 1875 was elected for a full term of six years. This was one of the most responsible offices in the gift of the people of his native county. He declined a renomination and began the practice of law, and was, in 1881, elected State Senator. In 1882 he bought "The Ellicott City Times," which he edited in connection with the practice of law. He was re-elected to the Senate in 1883, and was made President of the Session of 1886. Mr. Cleveland appointed him Surveyor of the Port of Baltimore in 1886, which position he held until May, 1890, when he organized the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland, of which he is still President. It is the largest Surety Company in the world.

He has always taken an interest in public affairs, and has been prominently identified with the Democratic party of Maryland; was a Delegate-at-Large to the National Convention in 1896.

Mr. Warfield is connected with many institutions in Maryland. He is a director of the Maryland Penitentiary, the Board of Trade of Baltimore, the Continental Trust Company, the Central Savings Bank, the "Daily Record" Company, the Maryland Dredging Company, the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank, all of Baltimore; The City Trust Company of New York and the Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Montgomery County, Maryland, and other business corporations in the City and State.

He is a member of many patriotic, professional and social associations, such as the Maryland Historical Society, the Maryland Society Sons of the Revolution, the Maryland Society S. A. R., the Society of the War of 1812, the American Bar Association, the Baltimore and Maryland Bar Associations, also a member of the leading social clubs and organizations in Baltimore.

He married, in 1885, Emma Nicodemus, a daughter of a leading merchant of Baltimore, whose ancestors settled in Cumberland Valley, Pennsylvania, about 1700. They have four children—Carrie, 1887; Louise, 1888; Edwin, Jr., 1891, and Emma, 1899.

CONSTITUTION

NATIONAL SOCIETY OF THE SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

ARTICLE I.—Name.

The name of this Society shall be "The Sons of the American Revolution."

ARTICLE II.—Objects.

The objects of this Society shall be to perpetuate the memory of the men who, by their services or sacrifices during the war of the American Revolution, achieved the independence of the American people; to unite and promote fellowship among their descendants; to inspire them and the community at large with a more profound reverence for the principles of the government founded by our forefathers; to encourage historical research in relation to the American Revolution; to acquire and preserve the records of the individual services of the patriots of the war, as well as documents, relics and landmarks; to mark the scenes of the Revolution by appropriate memorials; to celebrate the anniversaries of the prominent events of the war; to foster true patriotism; to maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom; and to carry out the purposes expressed in the Preamble to the Constitution of our Country and the injunctions of Washington in his Farewell Address to the American people.

ARTICLE III.—Membership.

Section 1. Any man shall be eligible to membership in this Society who, being of the age of twenty-one years or over, and a citizen of good repute in the community, is the lineal descendant of an ancestor who was at all times unfailing in his loyalty to, and rendered actual service in, the cause of American Independence, either as an officer, soldier, seaman, marine, militiaman or minute man, in the armed forces of the Continental Congress or of any one of the several Colonies or States; or as a signer of the Declaration of Independence; or as a member of a Committee of Safety or Correspondence; or as a member of any Continental, Provincial or Colonial Congress or Legislature; or as a civil officer, either of one of the Colonies or States or of the National Government; or as a recognized patriot who performed actual service by overt acts of resistance to the authority of Great Britain.

Section 2. Applications for membership shall be made to any State Society, in duplicate, upon blank forms prescribed by the General Board of Managers, and shall in each case set forth the name, occupation and residence of the applicant, line of descent, and the name, residence and services of his ancestor or ancestors in the Revolution, from whom he derives eligibility. The applicant shall make oath that the statements of his application are true, to the best of his knowledge and belief. Upon the approval of an application by the State Society, to which it is made, one copy shall be transmitted to the Registrar General of the National Society, who shall examine further the eligibility of the applicant. If satisfied that the member is not eligible, he shall return the application for correction. And in case of such return the State Society shall, on failure to satisfy the Registrar General of the eligibility of such applicant, drop his name from membership.

SECTION 3. The official designation of the members of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution shall be "Compatriots."

ARTICLE IV.—NATIONAL AND STATE SOCIETIES.

SECTION 1. The National Society shall embrace all the members of the State Societies of the Sons of the American Revolution now existing or which may hereafter be established under this Constitution.

SECTION 2. Whenever in any State or Territory in which a State Society does not exist, or in which a State Society has become inactive or failed for two years to pay its annual dues to the National Society, fifteen or more persons duly qualified for membership in this Society may associate themselves as a State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and organize in accordance with this Constitution, they may be admitted by the General Board of Managers to the National Society as "The ———— Society of the Sons of the American Revolution," and shall thereafter have exclusive local jurisdiction in the State or Territory or in the District in which they are organized, subject to the provisions of this Constitution; but this provision shall not be construed so as to exclude the admission of members living in other States.

SECTION 3. Each State Society shall judge of the qualifications of its members and of those proposed for membership, subject to the provisions of this Constitution, and shall regulate all matters pertaining to its own affairs. It shall have authority to establish local chapters within its own jurisdiction and to endow the chapters with such power as it may deem proper, not inconsistent with this Constitution. It shall have authority, after due notice and impartial trial, to expel any member who, by conduct unbecoming a gentleman, shall render himself unworthy to remain a member of the Society.

SECTION 4. Each State Society shall submit to the Annual Congress of the National Society a report, setting forth by name the additions, transfers and deaths, and any other changes in the membership and progress of the State Society during the preceding year, and make such suggestions as it shall deem proper for the promotion of the objects of the whole Order.

SECTION 5. Whenever a member in good standing in his Society changes his residence from the jurisdiction of the State Society of which he is a member to that of another, he shall be entitled, if he so elects, to a certificate of honorable dismission from his own State Society, in order that he may be transferred to the State Society to whose jurisdiction he has changed his residence; provided, that his membership shall continue in the former until he shall have been elected a member of the latter. Each State Society shall, however, retain full control of the admission of members by transfer.

SECTION 6. Whenever the word "State" occurs in this Constitution, it shall be held to include within its meaning the District of Columbia and the Territories of the United States.

SECTION 7. A Society may be formed in any foreign country by fifteen or more persons who are eligible to membership under this Constitution, which shall bear the same relation to the National organization as the State Society, subject to the provisions of this Constitution.

ARTICLE V.—OFFICERS AND MANAGERS.

SECTION 1. The General Officers of the National Society shall be a President General, five Vice-Presidents General, a Secretary General, Treasurer General, Registrar General, Historian General and Chaplain General, who shall be elected by ballot by a vote of the majority of the members present at the annual meeting of the Congress of the National Society, and shall hold office for one year and until their successors are elected; Provided, that the President General and five Vice-Presidents General shall not be elected for a second consecutive term.

The General Officers, together with the Presidents of the State Societies ex officio, shall constitute the General Board of Managers of the National Society, which Board shall have authority to adopt and promulgate the By-Laws of the National Society, to prescribe the duties of the General Officers, to provide the seal, to designate and make regulations for the issue of the insignia, and to transact the general business of the National Society during the intervals between the sessions of the Congress. Meetings of the General Board may be held, after not less than ten days' notice, at the call of the President General, or, in case of his absence or inability, at the call of the Senior Vice-President General, certified by the Secretary General. SECTION 3. An Executive Committee of seven, of whom the President General shall be chairman, may be elected by the Board of Managers, which Committee shall, in the interim between the meetings of the Board, transact such business as may be delegated to it by the Board of Managers.

ARTICLE VI.—DUES.

Each State Society shall pay annually to the Treasurer General, to defray the expenses of the National Society, twenty-five cents for each active member thereof, unless intermitted by the National Congress, provided that the National Board of Management may increase said dues at any time, not to exceed fifty cents in all, by a two-thirds vote, when the necessities of the National Society so demand. All such dues shall be paid on or before the first day of April in each year for the ensuing year, in order to secure representation in the Congress of the National Society.

ARTICLE VII.—MEETINGS ANE ELECTIONS.

SECTION 1. The Annual Congress of the National Society for the election of the General Officers and for the transaction of business shall be held on the 30th day of April or on the first day of May in every year. The time, hour and place of such meeting shall be designated by the Board of Managers.

SECTION 2. Special meetings of the Congress may be called by the President General, and shall be called by him when directed so to do by the Board of Managers, or whenever requested in writing so to do by at least five State Societies, on giving thirty days' notice, specifying the time and place of such meeting and the business to be transacted.

(3) One delegate at large from each State Society.

(4) One delegate for every fifty members of the Society within a State and for a fraction of twenty-five or over.

SECTION 4. State Societies shall be represented at meetings of the National Society only by members of their own State Society, or by members of other State Societies who may be designated by the regularly appointed delegates from such State Society who may be present at any meeting of the National Society; and the delegates representing any State Society, as provided herein, shall be authorized to cast the entire vote to which such State Society is entitled, each delegate or representative present being authorized to cast his proportionate vote, or fraction thereof.

ARTICLE VIII.—AMENDMENTS.

This Constitution may be altered or amended at any meeting of the Congress of the National Society, provided that sixty days' notice of the proposed alterations or amendments, which shall first have been recommended by a State Society, shall be sent by the Secretary General to the President of each State Society. A vote of two-thirds of those present shall be necessary to their adoption.

PROCEEDINGS

HELD AT WASHINGTON, D. C.

April 30 and May 1 and 2,

OFFICIAL MINUTES OF THE CONGRESS

PROCEEDINGS

OF THE

National Congress Sons of the American Revolution

HELD AT WASHINGTON, D. C.

April 30 and May 1 and 2, 1902

OFFICIAL MINUTES OF THE CONGRESS

WEDNESDAY MORNING SESSION.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The National Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution is now in session.

CHAPLAIN-GENERAL WARFIELD (opening prayer): Almighty God, the Creator and preserver of all things, we come into Thy presence this day with thanksgiving in our hearts, and as we look round about, upon this beautiful scene that is presented to us, we rejoice that Thou hast made us to be the Lords of this thy creation in which we dwell.

God of the nation, we rejoice that Thou hast given us so great a place in the sisterhood of the nations of the earth. We rejoice in the influence that this our country exercises on earth, and among men; and we rejoice to believe that it is permeated by that truth of Thine which Thou hast revealed unto men. God of our fathers, we rejoice this day in the memory of the men who so gloriously served Thee in those great days when they, in their courage, in their fortitude, in their faith, achieved the liberty of this Republic. God, Father of man, source of light and of all truth, we ask Thee that Thou would'st send forth Thy spirit this day to enlighten us and make us to realize that if we are to transmit to posterity the glorious truth that our fathers learned of Thee, then we must be ready to sacrifice all things in Thy service for the glory of our own nation and for the glory of our God.

We pray Thee to bless this society; to bless all the meetings to be held at this time; to fill us with a deep realization of the responsibility that rests upon us as the representatives of a great cause. May we look down the centuries, as well as back over the past, and may we seek by all that in us lies to hand down to the generation following those principles which we love and which we seek to perpetuate. May Thy blessing now be upon us and upon all our meetings together. We ask this in the name of Thy Son, Our Saviour. Amen.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: We meet here as the guests of the District of Columbia Society; and it gives me great pleasure to introduce to you the Honorable Noble D. Larner, President of the District of Columbia Society.

HONORABLE NOBLE D. LARNER: Mr. President-General and Compatriots of the National Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution: It is with very great pleasure that I have the honor on this occasion to extend to you on behalf of our society a hearty welcome to this, the most beautiful city, and the capital city, of our country. I welcome you here to-day, not because you are the representatives of any particular State or Territory, but as representatives of our glorious Union as a whole—a Union that owes its existence to the self-sacrifices and irresistible actions of the noble old patriots from whom we claim the privilege of calling ourselves "Sons of the American Revolution."

Some nine or ten years ago we had the pleasure of entertaining our National Congress in this city. Then our local society was small in numbers as well as in influence. Since that period the spirit of patriotism has been largely on the increase in our city, and to-day we are proud to say that instead of being classed as among the smallest of the societies we have so far advanced as to be recognized as one of the largest branches of the great Tree of Liberty. The fire is freshly burning in our midst, and we are bold enough to express the hope that the day is not far distant when we will be able to say to our compatriots from New England, where the efforts of our Patriotic Fathers first began, that we no longer march in the rear of any other society. Therefore it behooves all of you to keep your eyes open and watch well your colors.

When we extended to you an invitation to hold the meeting of the Congress of 1902 in this most beautiful city of the greatest, most glorious and most prosperous country of the world, we promised to do the best we could to make your stay among us such that the day would never come when you should regret that you had accepted our invitation. We have no battlefields or other historic places of the Revolution to show you, but we have many things far more beautiful and important to an American than any battlefield can be, whose beauty is the result of the great and self-sacrificing efforts of our patriotic ancestors upon historic battlefields. We are proud of our National Congress, and our great aim is to so conduct the affairs of our society as to insure the friendship and good wishes of all our compatriots, no matter with what society they may be connected.

We may be pardoned for saying a little in relation to the city of Washington, and that is that it is not only the most beautiful city of our country, but the most unique and extraordinary as to its mode of government. For many years our city and the District of Columbia was governed like all other cities in our Union; that is, by the people, exercising the right of franchise. This, however, has been changed. Years ago the Government of the United States, through the Congress, assumed the duty of legislating for our people, thereby relieving them of all responsibility as to city and District affairs, which are now directly managed by a board of three commissioners, appointed by the President of the United States. Under these circumstances we have considered it proper upon this occasion to present to you, as the most apropriate one to extend to the members of our National Congress a welcome to our city, the President of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia. I feel particularly gratified in being able thus to present to you one whom I have had the pleasure of knowing for many years, the Hon. H. B. F. Macfarland, the President of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, who will now address you:

HONORABLE H. B. F. MACFARLAND: Mr. President and Members of the National Congress: I am very proud to stand before you to-day to offer the greeting and the congratulations of the National Capital. I congratulate you upon this remarkably large attendance—the largest, I am told, that you have ever had. And also upon the weather, which the Committee of Arrangement has thoughtfully provided for the occasion. (Laughter.)

This, gentlemen, is our inauguration weather; not the kind we have been furnishing on the 4th of March—that blustering and stormy and dangerous day—but the kind we expect to furnish on the last Thursday of April, when we shall have succeeded in amending the Constitution of the United States so as to change the day. (Applause.) As you are all aware, the Senate has already passed unanimously Senator Hoar's resolution, proposing an amendment of the Constitution to that effect, and it is now being considered by the House Committee on the Judiciary, and the National Committee, composed of the Governors of forty-five of the States and Territories, all cordially approving the proposed change, and of fifteen residents of the District of Columbia. It is very hopeful that the House will concur with the Senate in submitting to the people through their Legislatures at this session this proposed amendment of the Constitution. (Applause.)

We invoke your assistance in this undertaking; we know that men of such influence and standing in your respective States will be able to stir up the pure minds of your people by way of remembrance of the necessity for this change. Then, when you return here to the inauguration of Compatriot Roosevelt in 1905 (applause), you will not come at the peril of your lives, but to enjoy such weather as we see to-day; to see the capital at its height of beauty, with the trees and the parks and the hills in all the splendor of the spring.

This is the 113th anniversary of the inauguration of the Father of the American Revolution as the first President of the United States. It is most fitting that the Sons of the American Revolution should assemble in national congress on this day in the national capital, in the city planned by George Washington, and which bears his name. For there would have been no national capital if George Washington had not carried through to success the American Revolution, and the adoption of the Constitution of the United States. Because that mighty spirit and the other Revolutionary patriots, men and women, small and great, established independence and wrought a perfect union, we are here to-day, and the American flag is floating in blessing the world around.

Here is the home of that flag, for the national capital has never owed allegiance to any other. Here is the home of the National genius, distinguished by the capitol and the White House, the unparalleled monument to Washington, looking down to his home and the tomb at Mount Vernon, and all the beauty flowering from Washington's plan for the Federal City at its best time of the year. Here is the home of the national government, with all its glorious history and all its glorious promise, and the memories of its great men, its heroes, saints and martyrs, which make Washington a greater than Westminster Abbey. Here is the official residence of the President of the United States, now a Son of the American Revolution, exhibiting the noble qualities and the patriotic principles of our revolutionary ancestors. Here is the official residence of Congress, the greatest legislative body on earth, now as always characterized by high intelligence and integrity. Here is the official residence of the Chief Justice of the United States, and his associates of the Supreme Court of the United States, the most august and powerful tribunal the world has ever known. The latest immigrant coming to Washington fresh from the steerage must feel on such a day as this the thrill of the significance of his surroundings. How much more must they stir the hearts of men with your proud heritage of American patriotism and American glory. You who have the blood of the men and women who founded the Republic, and who poured out their lives that it might live, must feel an interest in the National Capital, a desire for its improvement and advancement, far greater than that which even the average American feels. If a visit to it exalts the just pride of every American, it must raise your spirits to the point of tears. It must move you to exclaim, as you think of all it represents:

"Oh, beautiful my country!
What were our lives without thee!
What all our lives to save thee!"

In the name of the government of the District of Columbia, I bid you welcome to the National Capital, to your capital, the capital of all the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution, and of all those who have found on this continent that freedom of which their ancestors had vainly dreamed, and that opportunity which only such freedom could give. (Applause.)

President-General Logan: Mr. President and Mr. Commissioner: I thank you on behalf of the Sons of the American Revolution scattered throughout the land for the cordial welcome and kindly greeting that you have given their representatives who are here assembled to-day.

We are proud to hold our National Congress here in the District of Columbia, as the guests of the District of Columbia Society, which we regard as one of the brightest jewels in our now many jewelled crown. We are proud and happy to hold our National Congress here in this beautiful city, the site for which was selected by the great Commander and the plans for which were largely drawn and altogether approved by him. We are proud and happy to meet here in this beautiful hotel, with its modern conveniences and its sacred memories of old. We are proud to meet here on the banks of the Potomac, the river which Washington loved so well, and in sight of whose flowing stream he lived and died.

Washington is not altogether a strange place to the Sons of the American Revolution. There is a milk-white mansion just beyond the Treasury that for many years past has been occupied by a succession of members of our Society. (Applause.) In 1909 or 1913, or at the end of whatever succession of terms President Roosevelt will consent to accept, the Sons of the American Revolution will be ready to present another candidate as a tenant for the White House. (Applause.) If the other States are too bashful or modest, the Empire State will always be ready. (Applause.) If you wish for a Republican, we offer you our distinguished compatriot who is now the Secretary of War. (Applause.) If you will have a Democrat, I propose to you the Congressman from Westchester and the Bronx, who is now the Treasurer-General of our Socity. (Applause.) If by that time the parties are changed, we are sure we will have some compatriot that will fill any bill you may need. (Laughter.)

The army is full of our members. The Commanding-General and the Inspector-General—both distinguished and honored members of our Society —have added lustre to American arms as well as performed distinguished services to this Society. (Applause.) All through the ranks you will find the members of our Society doing duty for their country in the Philippines or in Porto Rico, in the Orient or the Occident, wherever they may be sent. The navy is equally full of Sons. The great Admiral, the man who one Sunday morning studded old Manila Bay so thick with Spanish hulks that they had to clear it for the benefit of commerce, is now a member of our Society. And the navy is as full of them as the army.

Both Houses of Congress are running over with members of our Society, and many of them are sitting here as delegates to-day. (Applause.) We are proud to welcome them. In all the departments of the civil government of the United States which is concentrated here in Washington, we find Sons of the American Revolution. There are many of us at home who are keeping our ear industriously to the telephone waiting for our country's call (Laughter); and even though there be a salary attached to the office, we still consent to serve. (Laughter.)

Mr. President and Mr. Commissioner, we are yours. You can do with us what you will. The round of gayeties and festivities that you have prepared for us we have prepared ourselves for. (Laughter.) Sons of the American Revolution, whether they come from Maine or the Philippines, are men of sturdy stomachs and strong physiques as well as of great intellectual qualifications.

During the last year our chain of Societies has been moving around the world. A few years ago one of my distinguished predecessors was sent to France on a little business for the United States, and he sent us back in a few months the French Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. (Applause.)

When we left Pittsburg last May, my immediate predecessor started for the Philippines, to inspect the army there. He brings us back to-day the Philippine Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. (Applause.) To-day, to go from our Society that is farthest East to the Society that is farthest West, you don't go through the United States at all; you go the other way. We stretch two-thirds of the way around the globe. I don't know whether we are not going to add China and complete the chain.

Mr. President and Mr. Commissioner, I repeat that we are ready for you. If you have anything to eat, we bring you sturdy appetites; if you have beverages that must be consumed, we bring you a sun-dried thirst.

(Laughter.) If you have fair patriots and moonlight walks, we are with you. (Laughter.) If you have anything in the way of labor or of luxury, we are here to receive it.

Mr. President and Mr. Commissioner, I thank you for your cordial welcome and hearty greeting. (Applause.)

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The next business in order is the appointment of a Committee on Credentials.

MR BATES (Mich.): I move that a Committee of five be appointed on credentials.

Motion seconded and carried.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: I will appoint as the Committee on Credentials:

Capt. Samuel Eberly Gross, of Illinois;
Mr. Charles Waldo Haskins, of New York;
Mr. Leon L. L. French, of District of Columbia.
Mr. George W. Bates, of Michigan;
Judge Morris K. Beardsley, of Connecticut.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: I have the honor of introducing to you the President of the Society of the Philippines, General Joseph Breckinridge. (Applause.)

GENERAL BRECKINRIDGE: If you want to know anything about that Philippine Society, I can only tell you that it is like all the other State Societies that you have already organized, except for the quality that exists there among the people of our color. Over there we are all exiles, and we do not stay there. Every person on the Committee, when I organized the Society, has since reached the United States or is going to reach the United States before the year is out; so, how the thing will continue we cannot very well tell. But there were twenty-six members, and there were about the same number outside who put their names in. There is a great deal of enthusiasm of the type that you know so well, and a great deal of need for just such principles as we represent. For instance, I was invited to a large entertainment out there, and I have not time to tell you just what a fine lot of fellows I met, both white and brown. But the American flag was the table upon which our overcoats were laid; the American flag was in the place where you went to wash your face; and the American flag was in that condition that makes the flesh of the Sons of this Society creep.

There is an absolute lack of any knowledge whatever of a government of institutions out there. This thing of being ruled by a constitution instead of a grip behind the neck, and told to do this and that, is a thing that the Filipinos do not understand; and if we cannot teach it to them, if the people with the interest as deep as the Sons of the American Revolution have it in them cannot teach it, I don't know how they are going to learn it. Therefore, I say, as a missionary society, there never was since the foundation of the world a greater need of those who are authorized to express our sentiments to be on the field and express them—and that with fearlessness.

A little story that flashes through my mind may be worth relating. I have a colored cook who has been with me about thirty years; I picked her up in old Virginia. One day, to try how art affected the colored sister, I took her down to Corcoran's Gallery to see the display. She said not a word; she walked before that collection, but never a word did she utter; an Indian chief could not be more self-restrained. But after I got her home I said: "Now, Lucy, what did you think of the Corcoran Art Gallery?" "Well," she said, "I don' know so much about the art; but they young ladies looking through those horns at them other thing I thought were very courageous." (Laughter.) Then she asked me: "General, will you please tell me, did the gentleman that made that art just think they looked like that, or did somebody sit for them?" Of course they had models," said I. "Well, if you want to know what I thinks about it, I am very glad there is none of my color among them." (Laughter.)

Now I don't know why some of the gentlemen down South do not start a Sons of the American Revolution Society down among them, and see if you cannot get them educated up to high art. I don't think that there is anything in that far Orient that would interest anybody particularly that I could relate here. You might be interested, however, to know that that country over there is marvelously sightly. I was agreeably disappointed to see how handsome it is. There is a productiveness about it, too, that I fancy all Americans must be interested in knowing exists, if they do not already know it. For instance, in the question of hemp in which I am somewhat interested, coming from a region in Kentucky where my hereditary farm I rented out for fifteen dollars, a farm for raising hemp. There, in Manila, they raise about five times better hemp than we can in this country, of a fibre that is exquisite in texture, and they make their garments of it so nice a sheen that you are apt to think it is silk. Of course it is not hemp at all, but a fibre that replaces it, and as far as I could see, should dominate the markets of the world in hemp.

The backbone of that island is a range of mountains, producing fine water power; and it looks as if you were going to have a wondrously built system of electrical railroads before you get through. The native is an interesting phenomenon to us. He is about 5 feet 4 inches tall and weighs about 120 pounds, and he has got all the kind of courage that a pirate has. I am not telling you much of the Society out there, for they are all army and navy men, and you don't care about them. (Cries of "Oh, yes we do!")

The thing most interesting which I saw out there was in China, at the place where Riley was killed in one of the most gallant assaults on good high walls, alongside that fine old hero Chaffee, who is representing America out there on the fighting side; a place where any American might feel proud. Every nationality out there glorified in giving commendation to the persistency of the assault of the Americans right up to the sacred and Forbidden City. As gallant as Japan was, as absolutely self-abnegated and heroic as she was, even she recognized the American soldier as the one on earth that she claimed as brother, because he was always alongside at the front. (Applause.) An incident to show this occurred when the American Ninth was ordered to support a Japanese detachment of about seventy men; it being of course expected that the Japanese would be wiped out, and that the Ninth would be mostly wiped out, but that their success would assure the capture of Tien Tsin. When the petard placed against the gates—which was the method the Japanese chose to enter the city—failed, they tried it again, and again and failed. The Ninth stood in the road taking the fire; but now something had to be done after another failure of the petard to burst. If the 150 men were to be wiped out the gate must be blown up. What would happen to them after they got in was a matter of indifference; but what happened to the outside force meant ruin to the whole plan. But Liscum, with that gallantry which he had already displayed beyond all measure of care for his own life, saw that he had to detract the fire of the wall from the Japanese or that they would not get there. The Japanese saw that they had to be regardless of human life, or they would not get there. So Liscum went close up to the walls and drew the fire, which he did to his own death; and a Japanese officer said to one of his men: "You go see that that petard blows up." And he did; and they went up together and he was never seen again. That man is no Christian, but he is just a good soldier,- that little brown man, as any American need wish to shake hands with.

I fancy that, with equal discipline, our new compatriot under the flag out there in the Philippines can be made an equal soldier. I think that in dexterity of hand, in quality of mind, he is as capable of fine development. But, whether he is capable or not, the duty is on us, and Americans have to walk this globe in a different attitude hereafter than they have ever done before. For the first time in the history of America we have gone beyond the imagination of Washington and Thomas Jefferson, and are carrying Old Glory into a realm that they never knew, and higher than they ever conceived. (Applause.)

The Report of the Committee on Credentials was read at this point, and on motion, duly seconded, was approved.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: A little while ago I tried to catch the Governor of New Jersey, but he escaped me. He is now here in the hall, and everybody, I am sure, wants to see him on the platform. (Applause. Mr. Franklin Murphy ascends the platform.) I want to introduce to you the noblest Roman of them all, Hon. Franklin Murphy. (Applause.)

HON. FRANKLIN MURPHY: Mr. President-General and Compatriots, I feel sure that you won't expect me to say anything.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: A handsome man like Governor Murphy speaks for himself.

REPORT OF SECRETARY-GENERAL, read by Mr. A. J. Fisher.

Your Secretary-General has the honor to report to the National Society a year of general progress and continued prosperity among nearly all State, territorial and foreign branches of the Sons of the American Revolution. Many of the chapters have moved along the even tenor of their way, doing their appointed work quietly, participating in many forms of patriotic effort, and have added a normal and healthy increase to their membership rolls. Others have taken a new and more vigorous impetus, enlarging the scope of their labors and making great and unusual gains in membership and in awakening and strengthening local interest in affairs appertaining to our organization. In a few instances States show gains in membership of fifty or sixty per cent. A few others show slight net losses consequent upon the dropping of all delinquents from their rolls. As a whole, the year past has been a satisfactory one and by no means uneventful.

The meeting of the General Board of Managers, which was called to meet at Saratoga, N. Y., on September 19, 1901, was postponed on account of the death of Compatriot President William McKinley, to meet at the office of President-General Logan, in New York City, on October 14. A large delegation of the National Society participated in the obsequies of the lamented President held in Washington.

The chief business before the postponed meeting of the General Board of Managers, held on October 14, was the selection of the place for the holding of the present Congress, invitations from many State Societies from Connecticut to California and from Minnesota to Lousiana having been received. A resolution was also adopted endorsing the report of the National Publication Committee with reference to the printing of a National Register of all the members of our organization, and calling on the State Societies to urge their membership to make individual subscriptions for the work and otherwise assist in its distribution.

One of the principal matters of progress which can be recorded by our organization for work accomplished in the year that has passed is a work which has been carried on abroad as a result of the personal sacrifice and effort of a few members in order to establish in France branches of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. for which purpose it was necessary to know the names and services of the French officers and men of the land army and navy who fought for American independence.

Upon the initiative of Mr. Paul Wentworth Linebarger, the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution therefore made, last year, an inquiry at the War Department in Washington. The result was the ascertaining that there did not exist any records of those French combatants, with the exception of a small list of officers in Heitman's Historical Register. The Ministry of War expressed the desire to obtain such records; whereupon the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution requested Mr. H. Merou, Consul of France in Chicago, and honorary member of the Illinois Society, Sons of the American Revolution, who was interested in the movement from the beginning, to address his government on that subject.

During a vacation of six months, beginning with July 1, 1900, Mr. Merou did what he had been requested to undertake. He obtained the establishment of a Franco-American Committee of Research, appointed by His Excellency M. Delcasse, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, on the proposition advanced by United States Ambassador Gen. Horace Porter. He obtained also two secretaries from the Ministry of War and two from the Ministry of the Navy of France, for the work of compiling and copying the records in the French archives.

Having been appointed Chairman of said Committee. with Mr. Edward P. McLean, United States Vice-Consul in Paris, as its Vice-Chairman, and with Col. Chaille-Long and Major Huntington as members, Mr. Merou devoted the time of his vacation to the work; the first three months to organizing and to obtaining the necessary official help; the last three months to the work itself, which he prosecuted in the archives of the Ministry of War. After his return to the United States, in January last, the work was continued on the lines established by him under the supervision of Col. Chaille-Long and M. Lacour-Gayet, the latter Professor of History at the Ecole Superieure de la Marine, of Paris, in the archives of the navy; and in the archives of the War Department by an intelligent secretary, assisted by the administration of the war archives. Mr. Merou presented, on the 15th day of December, 1900, his official report to the Minister for Foreign Affairs. The work in the archives of the War Department, with reference to the land army, was finished in April last; and the work in the archives of the navy in August last. About 6,000 to 7,000 officers and soldiers of the land army and more than 50,000 officers and men of the navy have thus been found, with Christian and family names, with dates and places of birth, and with observations proving their participation in the War for American Independence.

On behalf of Consul Merou, your Secretary-General submitted this matter to the members of the National Sons of the American Revolution Executive Committee to take such action as they might deem appropriate in encouraging and assisting in the great work so satisfactorily prosecuted by Mr. Merou, and so generously and effectively co-operated in by the various departments of the French Government. The Secretary-General's report of the matter to the Executive Committee stated that Consul Merou had requested his government to publish this important work at the State's expense; but that being now far from France, and being unable to take any personal steps in Paris toward the desired fulfillment, as soon as possible, of the publication of the now completed work, he would be thankful if the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution would take the matter in hand in the requesting of the United States Ambassador, Gen. Horace Porter, to do what he may deem appropriate in order that the proposed publication be not delayed. The report set forth that such a French publication would be extremely useful in France in ascertaining the descendants of the fighters; and that if, afterward, a translation into English could be made and published by the Government of the United States, universities, students and investigators in this country might be greatly profited thereby, as well as the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

After having received this report, the National Executive Committee took the following action:

WHEREAS, The report made through Secretary-General Gross by Mr. Henri Merou, French Consul in Chicago, honorary member of the Illinois Society S. A. R., and General Horace Porter, ex-President of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution and Ambassador of the United States to the Government of France, shows that an exceedingly advantageous and effective work has been accomplished by their conjoint efforts, assisted by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and of War and Marine in France, in ascertaining the names and services of 50,000 French sailors and over 7,000 French soldiers who assisted the colonists in the War of the American Revolution; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the National Executive Committee of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution hereby tenders its appreciative congratulations and warm thanks to the gentlemen mentioned for their untiring efforts in the direction stated, and likewise to the French Ministers of Foreign Affairs, of War and Marine, in so ably seconding their efforts in aiding them to secure the information desired; and, be it further

Resolved, That this body requests Ambassador-General Horace Porter to use what influence he may, which shall not be inconsistent with the duties of his diplomatic office, to secure the printing, on the part of the French Government, of the complete lists of the French soldiers and sailors who rendered service in assisting to establish the independence of the American colony in the War of the American Revolution.

These resolutions were signed by all the members of the National Executive Committee.

Consul Merou has recently had word from the French Minister of Foreign Affairs and from the French Minister of War that the French Government has granted the requests made through the various channels herein indicated, and is now engaged in the full publication of the entire list of about 60,000 French soldiers and sailors who participated in the Revolutionary War, together with a brief of their services and other information obtained, which will soon be ready for distribution. It remains for this National Society to determine whether it will take any action urging upon our own Government the undertaking of translating and publishing an English version of these lists for use in this country when the French Government shall have completed their publication in France. It would seem that such a translated work placed in the leading libraries of this country, and accessible to all seeking Revolutionary descent, would be of incalculable value to the building up of our organization.

Another great advance which our organization has made in the foreign field has been the organization of a flourishing chapter of the Society in the Philippine Islands, which result is attributable chiefly to the earnest effort in this behalf of our ex-President-General, General J. C. Breckinridge. Oklahoma has also been added to the list of State and territorial societies, providing their list of charter members passes the scrutiny of our Registrar-General and the Society is accorded a charter. Of these two new acquisitions, you will doubtless learn more fully from the report of the Registrar-General.

As a comparatively small number only of the State societies have sent in their annual reports, and as many of those which have been sent in are somewhat voluminous, it has seemed wise to omit the customary summary of these State reports from this Annual Report, and to let them appear in the annual year book for the year, when all shall have been received, under a separate heading of State Society reports.

Save for the irreparable loss of its honored compatriot, President William McKinley, the National Society, Sons of the American Revolution, has had occasion to mourn the loss of a much smaller proportion of representative members than for a number of years past. A committee was appointed by President-General Logan to draft resolutions in respect to the death of President McKinley. This committee consists of Judge Whitehead, Judge Hancock, Charles W. Haskins and General Francis Appleton.

A communication received by your President-General from the Pennsylvania Society announces that that State Society proposes to erect an equestrian statue of Major-General Anthony Wayne, for which purpose they already have a fund of over $5,000, and they respectfully invite the assistance of national organization for the accomplishment of this object.

An amendment has been proposed to the National Constitution this year by the Pennsylvania Society, copies of which have been duly forwarded to the various State societies, in accordance with Article VIII. of the Constitution. The proposed amendments will come up for action thereon in the due course of these proceedings.

Once more your Secretary-General extends his thanks to the executive officers of the National Society, as well as to all State officers, for their aid and co-operation in the prosecution of matters coming within the scope of the office with which you honored him. Very respectfully submitted,

SAMUEL EBERLY GROSS, Secretary-General.

REPORT OF STATE SOCIETIES.

ARKANSAS.—Nothing of special interest transpired during said year in the events of this society, but we have been somewhat encouraged by the addition of five new members to our number, and are advised of others engaged in perfecting details as to lineage with a view of applying. Our Anniversary meeting, February 22, was a highly successful and enjoyable affair, well in keeping with others heretofore held by us.

FAY HEMPSTEAD, Secretary.

CALIFORNIA.—A steady and satisfactory growth has been experienced. The number of members at last report was 323. Thirty-four new members have been added since; 10 have died and 2 were dropped from the roll of membership—making a net gain of 22 during the year and a present membership of 345, with 7 applications in hand; 29 of these belong to the Southern California Branch located at San Diego.

Two banquets have been held—one on the 17th day of October, 1901, to commemorate the Surrender of Burgoyne, and the other on February 22 of this year, which were largely attended and greatly enjoyed. The addresses will be published.

To promote closer social intercourse among the members, it has been decided to hold frequent meetings of an informal character to discuss some notable event or personage of the Revolution. The life, character and exploits of the naval hero, John Paul Jones, was the subject of a paper read at a meeting held November 25, 1901, when some 50 of the members participated in the discussion that followed.

Another meeting of a similar character has been appointed for April 19, 1902, when a paper will be read and discussed upon the life and character of Captain Parker, one of the heroes of Lexington.

An association called the American Rifle Club, composed solely of members of the S. A. R., has been organized as an adjunct of this Society, and has had its first annual shoot, at which a badge of the Society constituted the prize. It will be conducted on purely American lines, and particularly encourage the use of Government arms and ammunition.

The reception to President McKinley by this Society during his visit last year marked an event in our annals that may perhaps never be equaled in importance. His feeling words and kindly presence endeared him to all, and his untimely death, only a few weeks later, by the hands of a vile assassin, evoked resolutions expressive of horror at the act and sympathy for the bereaved family and nation.

The California Society more than a year ago undertook for the first time in its history the publication of a Register, similar in character to those of other State societies. The enterprise was fully commenced before the project of a National Register took definite form; hence it was found impossible to give the support to that publication as would have been given otherwise. Eight copies have been subscribed for to distribute among the libraries.

EDWIN BONNELL,
Secretary.

COLORADO.—The past year has been a most prosperous one for the Colorado Society, Sons of the American Revolution. The first meeting of the year was held August 23, when an informal reception at the Albany Hotel was tendered President-General Walter S. Logan, who was in Denver at the meeting of the American Bar Association. The members of the Society greatly enjoyed the words of greeting and encouragement which Mr. Logan gave. He was presented with a valuable album of Colorado views as a souvenir of his visit to the State.

The regular September meeting was adjourned out of respect to the memory of our beloved compatriot, the late President McKinley. The Society joined in the memorial parade and exercises. This was the first public appearance of the Society, and it has received many words of commendation for the splendid showing made under the command of Col. A. W. Corliss.

The regular monthly meetings began in October and continued until March. These consisted of papers and addresses upon the part taken by the several original States in the War of the Revolution, and were exceedingly interesting and instructive. Much credit is due Mr. Chauncey Curtis, Chairman, and the other members of the entertainment committee for the excellent programmes presented.

The growth of the Society has been very gratifying, and we may confidently look forward to another year of prosperity.

HAROLD C. STEPHENS,
Secretary.

CONNECTICUT.—The most important work accomplished by this Society is the removal and restoration of the Nathan Hale school house, at New London, Conn., which was completed on the 17th of June, 1901, with appropriate ceremonies, including a street parade, in which the Putnam Phalanx a naval corps, and three companies of the Connecticut National Guard joined with members of the Society and guests. The literary exercises included an oration by the President-General and a historical address by Professor Henry P. Johnston, of the College of the City of New York. The amount of money involved in the entire undertaking of purchasing, restoring and dedicating this historic building is over $6,000, of which about $4,500 was contributed by members of the Society or taken from the Society's funds.

The thirteenth annual celebration of Washington's birthday took place at New Haven on the 22d of February, 1902, and was attended by about 250 members, notwithstanding a severe storm, which made it impossible to reach New Haven from remote parts of the State.

Seven hundred and thirty markers for graves of Revolutionary soldiers and patriots have been issued by the Society, upon the regular form of application, and duly placed on the graves, as permanent memorials.

The present membership of the Society is 1,017, 34 new members having been admitted to the Society during the year. C. G. STONE,
Secretary.

DELAWARE.—I report an active and prosperous year. The meetings of the Society have been well attended and twenty new members have been admitted.

Flag day, June 14, was celebrated by a meeting of the Society in Wilmington, with an address by Lieutenant John M. Dunn, recently returned from service with the army in the Philippines.

On August 30 the Society presented to the Wilmington City Park Commission two cannon to be used in decorating Washington Heights, on the Brandywine, overlooking the ground occupied by General Washington's army during his occupancy of Wilmington just before the Battle of the Brandywine.

On September 3 the Society, with the assistance of the other patriotic societies of the State, unveiled the monument at Cooch's Bridge, marking the spot where the Stars and Stripes were first unfurled in battle, on September 3, 1777. The exercises included addresses by President-General Walter S. Logan, of the National Society; Gen. James H. Wilson, U. S. A.; Hon. John Hunn, Governor of Delaware, and Robert G. Houston, Esq. The historical address was by Henry C. Conrad, Esq., which has since been published.

The annual meeting of the Society on December 7 was largely attended, with usual interest.

On December 7 the Society presented a silver loving-cup to Mrs. Elizabeth C. Churchman, State Regent of the D. A. R., in recognition of her patriotism and her valued assistance in securing the Cooch's Bridge Memorial.

Washington's Birthday, February 22, was celebrated with a successful and largely attended dinner in the Hotel Wilmington, with addresses by Governor Hunn, Gen. James H. Wilson, U. S. A.; ex-United States Senator Anthony Higgins and Hon. John Biggs. Before the dinner a silver loving-cup was presented to ex-President Howard DeHaven Ross, in recognition of his generous and successful administration as President of the Delaware Society.

The Society begs to thank the officers of the National Society for their prompt and courteous co-operation in the work of the year.

D. Brainerd Ferris, Jr.,
Secretary.

Florida.—Two members have died and one new member has been admitted during the past year, making membership at the annual meeting, February 22, 1902, 34. One new member has been elected during the current month, which makes present membership 35, same as reported last year.

The sixth annual meeting, February 22, was well attended and the interest manifested gave much encouragement for the future.

The Florida Society has subscribed for one copy of the National Registrar for each of its members and one for each library in the State, believing this to be one of the best ways of creating an interest in the Society and of calling attention to its objects; also aiding many in obtaining proof of eligibility.

We hope to have a full representation at the National Congress in Washington. W. O. H. Shepard.
Secretary.

France.—The only event of special interest in connection with our Society during the past year was the very impressive ceremony presided over by General Horace Porter at the tomb of Lafayette, in the Cemetery of Picpus, at Paris, on Decoration Day, May 30, 1901. In the last annual report mention was made of the searches in the French National Archives to establish the list of names of the French soldiers and sailors who assisted in the War of American Independence. This difficult work, undertaken by a committee of our Society, has now been accomplished. The lists are completed, and it may be of interest for the National Congress of the Society to know that the publication of these lists, containing thousands of names, is expected to be made at an early date. E. P. MacLean,
Secretary.

Illinois.—The report of this Society for the year now ending shows a net loss in membership. Two deaths in the ranks removed two men whose fathers fought in the war for liberty, P. M. Blodgett and Henry K. Elkins, and but two of these distinguished members remain.

Five meetings were held during the year, all of which were interesting to the members, made so by lectures, papers on historical subjects, etc. April 19 and October 19, 1901, were celebrated with banquets.

Arrangements are being made for the erection of a granite boulder over the grave of the last survivor of the Boston Tea Party, who now lies buried in Lincoln Park—David Kennison.

In conjunction with the Daughters of the American Revolution, money has been appropriated for the placing of a minature statue of the Minute Men in one of the schools and a copy of the Declaration of Independence will be placed in all schools. John D. Vandercook,
Secretary.

Iowa.—The number of members at the date of the last report was 147

A steady, though small, gain in membership annually, made in the face of considerable losses, is a source of satisfaction to our compatriots.

A chapter has been organized within the year at Wapello, Iowa, and is in a healthy condition. Five chapters have been organized in Iowa, and they are promoters of prosperity wherever the members are active and earnest. Ben Franklin Chapter, of Des Moines, is the most active, as well as the largest. It has a membership of forty compariots, and meetings have been held in October, November, December, January and March, at which papers of much merit and more than passing interest were read upon such topics as "The Surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown," "The Campaign for the Conquest of Canada," "Valley Forge," "Battle of Cowpens," "Jesuit Explorations and Discovery of Iowa." The compatriots are urged to bring ladies, and they come gladly. By giving these meetings at the houses of compatriots a social character, their popularity and success are assured and "eligibles" are interested.

A bi-monthly bulletin has been started by the Secretary, called "The Old Continental," of which four issues have been circulated. The expense has thus far been borne by the Society. News items having relation to the Society in general and the Iowa Society and its compatriots in particular have been published in each issue, with the Revolutionary Records of each ancestor referred to in the new applications, with selections touching upon Revolutionary topics. "The Old Continental" is believed to have demonstrated its usefulness.

The preparations for the annual meeting and banquet, to have been held February 21, were practically complete when the action of the Board of Health in reference to smallpox rendered it necessary to postpone the meeting, and the date for the same was fixed for April 17, that date being substituted for April 19, or Lexington Day, for the convenience of the compatriots from distant points.

The efforts of the D. A. R. to secure from the Legislature of Iowa an appropriation to buy ground hallowed by the ashes of a Revolutionary soldier and to erect a monument over his unmarked grave have been seconded by this Society, and the appropriation has been secured.

The Iowa Society fervently cherishes our motto of "Libertas et patria," and commends it to all compatriots.

ELBRIDGE D. HADLEY,
Secretary.

KENTUCKY.—No meeting was held from stated meeting in 1900 to stated meeting in 1901. I enclose list of officers elected at that meeting. For first time in several years, the Treasurer's report showed a nice cash balance.

December 26, 1901, the Society met to commemorate Battle of Trenton. After an enjoyable evening an amendment to by-laws was offered to lay over that in lieu of one meeting annually. The Society met 17th of January —Cowpens; 19th April—Lexington and Concord; 17th June—Bunker Hill, and 19th October—Yorktown. A motion prevailed that we observe these days until October, when by-laws can be acted upon. Also to change by-laws of Society to vote on petition in lieu of committee. Secret ballot.

The Society met January 17. A petition coming with meeting. Proved a very pleasant occasion and created interest. Met again 19th April. Two petitions, and find interest growing, and believe will have largest attendance of delegates at Washington the Society has as yet sent.

PHIL T. ALLIN,
Secretary.

LOUISIANA.—The Louisiana Society has held its own during the past year, and it would not be throwing bouquets to say that it has progressed in more ways than one—for instance, an increase of nearly twenty-five per cent. in our active membership; a closer fraternization among compatriots, as shown by the majority of our members to the call of the banquet committee on the occasion of our annual dinner, held to properly celebrate Washington's Birthday, when we had quite a love feast, besides the honor of hearing an address from the Mayor of New Orleans, who remained with us all the evening, having declined several other important invitations simply because we were the first in the field and would not divide the honors with any others.

The adoption of a "work" in harmony with the national spirit of our National Society, and most congenial to the taste and feelings of our fellow members, the marking of the grave of a Revolutionary soldier who we heard was buried in the old St. Louis Cemetery, and long since, like the majority of the graves of our Revolutionary soldiers, abandoned and left uncared for. A committee has been appointed to look after this case, and that of three graves of ex-soldiers of the War of 1812 which also remains neglected and almost unknown.

In this latter case we intend to take the matter up with Department at Washington, and request permission to remove the remains of these brave men to the beautiful burying place of ex-United States soldiers—Chalmette.

Finally, we have also resolved to do a little missionary work for the upbuilding of the National Society and its increase of membership, and that is: the Louisiana Society has voted heartily to second the efforts of one of its most influential and distinguished members—Judge McCaleb, delegate-at-large to National Congress—to influence his large circle of acquaintances in the State of Mississippi to come in and join us, and that after we have secured a sufficient number of eligibles from that State we will take further steps to organize a Mississippi Society.

We have been looking over the outlook for Alabama also, and hope by the next Congress to send on a favorable report of the reward of our patriotic efforts. Mississippi and Alabama should both have a State Society, and as they are sister States, it won't be the fault of the Louisiana Society if they are not represented in the National Congress of 1903.

Wishing the present Congress every success and all the pleasure that has been promised the delegates, I remain, THOMAS DABNEY DIMITRY,
Secretary.

MAINE.—The Maine Society has had a prosperous year. Our present membership is 355. During the year our Historian, Mr. Nathan Goold, has been requested to prepare a list of the Revolutionary soldiers buried in Maine, with such facts concerning the place of burial, inscription on tombstone, etc., as it is possible now to obtain. Already he has quite a large list. When he has made it as complete as it can be made, it will be published by the Society. The Society, at its annual meeting, February 22, 1902, voted to publish a new roll of members during the present year. The last roll was published in 1897. Since then more than 100 names have been added. The annual meeting was held in the Casino at Riverton Park, Portland. The after-dinner speakers were the President, Col. Horace H. Burbank, of Saco; Hon. Frederic E. Boothby, Mayor of Portland; Hon. Charles F. Libby, Portland, and Rev. Francis B. Denis, of Bangor. It was an exceedingly delightful occasion. H. S. BURRAGE,
Secretary.

MASSACHUSETTS.—We report a slightly increased membership, the total being 1,421, of which 21 are really sons of soldiers who did actual service in the Revolution. The youngest among these veterans is 63 years of age; the oldest, Mr. Roby Fletcher, of Fitchburg, is 99.

The Society has thirteen chapters in the larger cities of the State—local organizations, strictly of members of State Society, which have had an important influence in strengthening the organization and in arousing patriotism.

Besides the annual meeting on the 19th of April, held in the historic old South Meeting House, and followed by a banquet, the Society has held a field day on the Lexington Battle Grounds, on the anniversary of Cornwallis' surrender, and also celebrated the birthday of Washington at the Hotel Vendome. At all of these gatherings patriotic remarks were made by distinguished speakers.

The Society has during the year published a Year Book of about 300 pages, together with a volume containing the names and burial places of about 4,500 soldiers in the Revolution. These are in the State and elsewhere, all designated by the authorized motto of the National Society, placed there by the vote of cities and towns or by individual contributors.

The Society is about to place a granite boulder, with a bronze tablet, at the grave of Brigadier-General John Greaton, who is buried in the Eustis Street Burying Ground at Roxbury. His honorable and arduous service throughout the entire war induced the disease from which he died in 1783.

The Society not only gave to each member a copy of its last Year Book, but has distributed its Year Books of 1899 and 1901 freely among the other State societies, to the 350 city and town libraries of the State and to many other libraries and historical societies throughout the country.

During the year the Society, at the urgent request of certain of its chapters, gave a rebate of part of the annual dues to members of the parent body who were in good standing. The State Society desired in this way to give encouragement to the chapter in order to induce them to put forth fresh exertions for the spread of our principles.

The Board of Managers have held all meetings at its headquarters, and is constantly alert to advance the interest of the body.

FRANCIS H. BROWN,
President.

MICHIGAN.—The Michigan Society continues steadily to increase in numbers, twenty-six new members having been added to the roster during the year. The Western Michigan Chapter, with headquarters at Grand Rapids, is in a flourishing condition, and assurances are given that the membership of both the State Society and the Chapter will be considerably augmented as a consequence of the interest taken in that part of the State through the exertion of the officers and individuals of the Chapter.

The most important event of the year for the Society was the unveiling of a handsome bronze tablet to the memory of General Anthony Wayne, U. S. A., on the afternoon of October 19, the one hundred and twentieth anniversary of the Surrender of Yorktown. The tablet, bearing in bas relief the portrait of the General, was unveiled with impressive ceremony. A lineal descendant, little Miss Evelyn Warren, pulled aside the flag and exposing the very handsome art work, which fittingly and conspicuously decorates the south pylon of the portico, at the main entrance to the magnificent new Wayne County Building in the City of Detroit. The tablet bears the following inscription:

> "This tablet is erected as a tribute to Major-General Anthony Wayne, U. S. A., to whom the British surrendered this region July Eleventh, Seventeen Hundred and Ninety-six, and in whose honor Wayne County was created and named, August Fifteenth, Seventeen Hundred and Ninety-six. This county, as then established, embraced nearly all of the present State of Michigan and portions of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, including the sites of Chicago and Milwaukee and parts of Fort Wayne and Cleveland."

Appropriate speeches by Compatriot Hon. John B. Corliss, Member of Congress, and Hon. R. E. Frazer, one of the Circuit Court Judges for Wayne County, concluded the ceremonies, after which the Society entertained a large number of distinguished guests at an informal luncheon at the Russell House.

The annual banquet was held in the Russell House on Washington's Birthday, and the Society was exceedingly fortunate in having for their guest Lieutenant-Commander F. W. Bartlett, U. S. Navy, a Detroit boy, a graduate of the Naval Academy, and who, during the war with Spain, rendered conspicuous service on the dynamite cruiser "Vesuvius."

HENRY S. SIBLEY,
Secretary.

MONTANA.—The past year has been without much of especial interest to report. Three new members have joined the Montana State Society and others have commenced correspondence which we hope will result in their becoming active members before the season is over.

The annual meeting of the Society was held on February 22, at which meeting new officers were elected and delegates were chosn for the National Congress.

A social session was also held on this date, and the entire city membership of the Society was present. Toasts were read and delivered suitable to the day which we have chosen to hold our annual meeting. A grandson of a Revolutionary soldier was present as a member, and took an active part, having ridden horseback over the mountain for sixty-five miles to be present at the meeting.

FRANK H. CROWELL,
Secretary.

NEBRASKA.—During the year the Society conducted a course of study of the Revolution, which is fully set forth in the Year Book, which I attach. These meetings have brought about a livening interest in the work and object of the Society, and have shown good results in bringing in new members and a number of inquiries of prospective members who are endeavoring to prove their eligibility. The total number of new members admitted during the year is thirteen, and since the annual meeting we have received a number of applications. The course of entertainments has been continued to cover the present year, and I enclose the Year Book of the Society, which has just been published.

P. B. ALEXANDER,
Secretary.

NEW YORK.—Your Secretary takes pleasure in herewith submitting his annual report of the proceedings of the Society for the past year, to wit: from February 27, 1901, to February 26, 1902, for your consideration.

Total deductions for the same period	361
Membership as above stated, February 26, 1902		1,286

During the past year five regular meetings of the Society have been held. On February 26 last the annual election of officers took place at the annual meeting and was followed by a collation.

At the March meeting action was taken and a committee of five appointed to consider the advisability of having a series of lectures on patriotic subjects during the Exposition at Buffalo, and the sum of $250 appropriated for the furtherance of the same. After due consideration in regard to the same, the Chairman of the committee decided that the plan was not feasible and the matter was dropped. Mr. Spedon entertained the members present at this meeting by drawing sketches and accompanying his work with remarks of a humorous character.

At the meeting in May, upon the invitation of our President, Walter S. Logan, the members and their ladies met at the Marine and Field Club, Bath Beach, Long Island, on the afternoon and evening of the 21st. After dinner the party was addressed by President Logan, after which Compatriot Rev. Jesse L. Hurlbut was presented with an insignia of the Society, the presentation address being delivered by Compatriot Edward Payson Cone. The Society was then entertained by recitations of a mirthful nature and addresses which were interesting and instructive as well as patriotic.

On May 28 last the Society lost by death one of its most esteemed compatriots, General Thomas Wilson, whose loss is much regretted. A committee was appointed, of which Compatriot Stephen M. Wright was Chairman, who prepared a set of resolutions on the death of General Wilson. The same was adopted by the Board, handsomely engrossed and bound, and forwarded to the family.

The meeting of the Society which was held at Saratoga on September 19 last was postponed, as we were called upon to mourn the loss of another of our compatriots on September 14, that of William McKinley, President of the United States. A special meeting of the Board was called and resolutions adopted, the Chair appointing Compatriots Walter S. Logan, Hon. C. A. Pugsley, Charles W. Haskins, William H. Wayne, Louis H. Cornish and Charles B. Provost to attend the funeral. The meeting was addressed by Mr. Farnham, of the Saratoga Business Men's Association, who was most cordial in his invitation to have another meeting appointed, to be held at Saratoga. This matter was left in the hands of the Entertainment Committee.

The October meeting was held at Grant City, Staten Island, N. Y., where a game dinner was enjoyed by the members present. At this meeting $500 was appropriated by the Society toward the expenses which would be incurred at the Fort Washington celebration. On November 16, 1901, the Empire State Society, S. A. R., in co-operation with the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society, erected a tablet on the site of Fort Washington, on the property of James Gordon Bennett, through whose generosity the cost of the memorial was defrayed. The erection of this memorial and the exercises during the entire day were a complete success, and did more toward making the Society known than many are aware of.

At the December meeting the Society combined with the order of Founders and Patriots and held a joint meeting at Sherry's. At this meeting the budget of estimated expenditures for the fiscal year was presented by the Chairman of the Finance Committee to the Society, and the same was adopted.

At the February meeting of the Society, held at the National Arts Club, Compatriot Louis H. Cornish very kindly delivered his lecture entitled "Things Puritanical in New England," which was enjoyed by all present. The annual report of the Treasurer was read and received, as was also the report of the Nominating Committee. There was present at this meeting a uniformed detail of the Washington Continental Guard.

During the past year the Board of Management has held ten special and regular meetings, all of which have been well attended.

Two petitions for the formation of chapters have been received—one in Fort Edward, Washington County, to be called the Adirondack Chapter, and one in Herkimer, Herkimer County, to be called the Mohawk Valley Chapter. With the addition of these last two, we will now have nine local chapters.

In closing this report, your Secretary wishes to thank our President and the Board of Management for the universally kind consideration shown him, and to offer to the Society his best wishes for continued success and growth in the membership, and that the future will show a still greater influence for the fostering of patriotism in this, the Empire State Society.

EDWIN VAN D. GAZZAM,
Secretary.

OHIO.—The Ohio Society has had a very quiet but prosperous year. The membership has been materially increased. We have lost by death twelve members and by transfer to other societies six. A large number of graves of Revolution soldiers have been located and steps taken to have monuments placed over them. The annual meeting was well attended, and the banquet held in the evening was a most enjoyable affair. Much interest is being taken in the working of our Society, and the membership promises this year to be very large.

R. M. DAVIDSON,
Secretary.

PENNSYLVANIA.—The Pennsylvania Society reports a year of most gratifying progress and success.

During the year, from February 22, 1901, to February 22, 1902, 112 new members were added to the Society.

The total active membership at the end of the year was 354.

The great and distinguished event of the year for our Society was the meeting of the National Congress at Pittsburg. The pleasure afforded to us by that opportunity of entertaining our compatriots from the length and breadth of the land lingers with us, and will long linger in most delightful memories of the occasion. Not only so, but the presence of the Congress in our midst furnished a stimulus to our interest in the work and objects of the Society which has been most beneficial, and the effects of which will not be lost until our turn to entertain the Congress comes round again.

Our members have been more actively interested in public patriotic work than ever heretofore. We took part, together with the Grand Army of Republic and other patriotic societies, in public celebrations of Memorial Day and Flag Day. A systematic effort has been begun to identify and mark graves of Revolutionary soldiers within our jurisdiction. We have also engaged in several enterprises of a local character, which have not yet borne their fruits, but which we hope to report as successfully accomplished in the future.

THOMAS STEPHEN BROWN,
Secretary.

May 30, 1901, Memorial Day, members of this Society accompanied the Farragut Association of Naval Veterans of the Civil War to the statue of Admiral Esek Hopkins, at Hopkins Park, in this city, decorated the monument with a floral anchor, and placed a grave marker of the S. A. R. in front of the monument.

June 6, Nathaniel Green Day, established by act of Legislature of the State, was observed at the Mathewson Street Church, in this city, by the Daughters of the American Revolution of Gaspee Chapter, and the Sons of this Society. Asa Bird Gardiner, President of the Rhode Island Society of Cincinnati, delivered an address, and several interesting papers were read by members of the Greene family relating to General Nathaniel Greene.

June 14, Flag Day, the Society presented a portrait of George Washington to the Hope Street High School, Providence. The address was made by Compatriot William Elisha Dyer, and patriotic songs were sung by the scholars.

July 4 the Declaration of Independence was read by Compatriot Captain John R. Bartlett, U. S. Navy, retired, before the Brigade of Rhode Island Militia assembled at the Dexter Training Ground, in this city. Many members were present, and the Brigade bands, united, played the "Star Spangled Banner" and "America."

September 19 this Society in a body attended the State memorial service in memory of our late compatriot, William McKinley, at the First Baptist Meeting House, Providence, the service being most impressive.

October 11, 1901, our late President, George Allen Buffum, departed this life, honored and respected. Many members attended his funeral.

November 16 Captain Richard Hobson lectured at Sayles' Memorial Hall, under the auspices of Pawtucket Chapter, D. A. R., members of this Society being invited.

The Society has presented an American flag and flag staff to the Rhode Island Historical Society, of this city, to be put upon their building.

The Legislature of Rhode Island, at its last session, passed an act relating to the desecration of the American flag. I will send you a copy of this bill soon.

CHRISTOPHER RHODES,
Secretary.

TEXAS.—This Society has experienced so much difficulty and so many obstacles within the last year, as also in former ones, in increasing its membership, owing to the trouble, and in some cases impossibility of obtaining satisfactory record of service during the Revolutionary War, that its numbers are very slightly increased; being at present thirty-five. It is believed, however, that with the publication of the National Register many past difficulties of the nature specified will be removed. But it is here urged that the Register will not answer for all, and that in cases where applicants depend upon the records of Virginia, for instance, to show service in the colonial troops from that State, it is often found that, owing to the destruction of most of these records, many who are eligible to membership in this Society are excluded therefrom. And it is therefore urged that other than record-evidence of service should be accepted when it is made to appear that no records of such service exist but satisfactory evidence of another kind can be obtained.

But if the Texas Society is small in numbers, it is enthusiastic. At the annual meeting of this Society, held at Galveston, Feb. 22, 1902 (the first in two years; for owing to the storm of Sept. 8, 1900, at Galveston, where most of the members of the Society are gathered, no meeting was held in 1901), the attendance was very gratifying, and encouraged all present to advocate from now on the organization of chapters of the S. A. R. in various localities of the State. This will, it is believed, stimulate a keener interest in the objects of the Society and be productive of closer relation among the members, and an increase of importance in the membership throughout the State.

Appropriate resolutions upon the death of Col. John William French, U. S. A., and Lucian Miner, of Galveston, were presented at the annual meeting and entered upon the minutes of the Society. Both of these members were a great loss, and it was accentuated by the further loss, through removal from the State, of H. B. McGavock and Chas. Walter Preston, both of Galveston. The Society of this State lost these members within the last two years.

The address of the President of the Society at the annual meeting reflected the work of the National and State societies, and was particularly interesting by reason of its discussion of the benefits which are likely to accrue to all State societies from the publication of the National Register.

The annual election of officers of the Society resulted as follows: President, Hon. Ira H. Evans, of Austin; First Vice-President, William F. Beers, of Galveston; Second Vice-President, W. H. Young, of Palestine; Treasurer, Edward R. Girardeau, of Galveston; Registrar and Historian, J. T. Huffmaster, of Galveston; Secretary, Clay S. Briggs. Together with the officers already named, Robert G. West and William G. Bell, both of Austin; Newell Kane, of Palestine, and E. D. Dorchester, of Velasco, were elected to serve on the State Board of Management.

Clay S. Briggs, of Galveston, was elected delegate at large from the Society to the National Convention to be held at Washington, D. C., April 30, May 1 and 2, 1902.

CLAY S. BRIGGS,
Secretary.

VERMONT.—The Vermont Society has suffered a great loss since the meeting of the National Congress last year by the death of General Julius Jacob Estey, our honored President and compatriot. He was a pioneer in the organization of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution in Vermont, and from the first was an active and influential member. He filled most acceptably the various offices to which he was elected, and as a member of the Board of Managers, Vice-President and President of the Society and a delegate to the National Congress four years materially advanced the interests of the S. A. R.

General Estey was elected President of the Vermont Society at the annual meeting in November, 1900, and re-elected in 1901. During the sixteen months of his administration the Society enjoyed a new lease of life, and experienced a marked degree of prosperity, and some twenty representative descendants of Revolutionary ancestors were added to the register of the Society. One of the last acts on the day before he was called from earth was to affix his signature to a dozen certificates of membership received from the National Registrar.

General Estey rendered valuable service to the Society, as well as to the State, in inaugurating and successfully executing a plan for locating the graves of soldiers of the American Revolution buried in Vermont. He secured one or more persons in each town and city to assist in the work, and as a result nearly three hundred graves have been located and the names secured of this number of heroic dead of the American Revolution who rest beneath the soil of the Green Mountain State.

The Society will carry out the plan of the late President and cause the graves to be marked with appropriate tablets and the names of the honored dead to be published for the use of the Society and the people of Vermont.

The Vermont Society has taken much interest in the publication of the National Register. General Estey heartily favored the proposition from the first, and advocated the resolution which was unanimously passed by the Society at its last annual meeting providing for the purchase by the Society of a sufficient number of copies of the new National Register to supply each public library in Vermont, and also the libraries of schools and colleges with a copy. The number required for this purpose will be a little less than one hundred copies. In addition to this order placed by the Society, individual members have ordered copies.

The vacancy in the office of President caused by the death of General

Estey will be filled until the next annual meeting by the Vice-President, Hon. Fletcher D. Proctor, as acting President.

The Board of Managers have passed memorial resolutions upon the death of its late President, which are given below:

RESOLUTIONS ON THE DEATH OF JULIUS JACOB ESTEY.

WHEREAS, It has pleased Divine Providence to remove from us Julius Jacob Estey, President of the Vermont Society of the Sons of the American Revolution; and

WHEREAS, It is fitting that a recognition of his life and usefulness and his many virtues should be made by those who had the privilege of coming within the bright sphere of his manly and helpful influence; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Board of Managers of the Vermont Society of the Sons of the American Revolution express their sincere sorrow and sense of loss in the death of General Estey. He was one of the first members of our Society and was devoted to all its interests.

As President of the Vermont Society he won our increasing admiration and sustained our highest regard. We hold him in affectionate remembrance for his Christian character, his integrity, his patriotism, his genial personality, his wide influence and his intelligent and devoted loyalty to this organization. It is with most unusual sorrow that we bring ourselves to think of his departure from us, and we cannot too strongly express our estimate of the loss sustained by our organization.

We extend to his family our sincerest sympathy, and count ourselves among those who mourn beside his grave. As the world is poorer for his death, so it is permanently richer by reason of his life.

CHARLES S. FORBES,
Secretary.

FLETCHER D. PROCTOR,
Acting President.

A copy of these memorial resolutions has been forwarded to each State Society, and can be had upon application to the Secretary.

In view of the meeting this year of the National Congress, it is not out of place to mention the fact that a number of distinguished Vermonters, who have permanent or temporary residences in Washington, are members of the Society. The list includes Admiral George Dewey, Hon. Redfield Proctor, United States Senator; Hon. William P. Dillingham, United States Senator; Hon. Kitredge Haskins, Representative from the Second Congressional District; Hon. C. H. Darling, Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Col. Myron M. Parker, and Hon. John .W. Titcomb, of the Department of Fisheries.

WISCONSIN.—Our Society has had a prosperous year. Its increase in numbers has not been so great as we might have desired, for although we have admitted a number of new members, this gain has been nearly neutralized by our losses through death and by demission to other State societies.

At present we have two hundred and twenty-eight (228) active members.

Our annual meeting, held at the Hotel Pfister in this city on May 29, 1901, was well attended, and in the evening the annual banquet of the Society was given in the same place. It was a thoroughly enjoyable affair, and the participants were entertained with good music and responses to appropriate toasts.

In December an informal "Smoker" was tended to the members of the Society by the President, and the evening was given over to story telling and a general good time.

The finances of the Society are in a flourishing condition, as there is money in the treasury and no outstanding indebtedness.

FREDERIC B. BRADFORD,
Secretary.

REPORT OF THE FRENCH SOCIETY, read by Colonel Chaille-Long.

Colonel Chaille-Long preceded his report by the following remarks:

Although I have come 3,000 miles, I am accustomed somewhat to the charge of being a Frenchman. In order to set your minds at rest on that score, and to be perfectly at home with you, I may say that I am a member of the Maryland Society and that I was born in the classic regions of the Eastern Shore. Permit me to add a word in addition to the report of our Secretary-General.

Mr. President-General and Compatriots: I have the distinguished honor of presenting you my credentials as a delegate from the Society in France, S. A. R., of which the United States Ambassador to France is the President and Gaston de Lahune de Lafayette is the Vice-President.

It will be recalled that this branch of the National Society was founded in Paris on the 16th of September, 1897, the original date of annual meeting having been fixed for the 6th of September to commemorate the birthday of Lafayette.

The action of our Society was limited for a time to serving as the intermediary of the societies in America, and among these Lafayette Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, which sends each Decoration Day wreaths to lay upon the grave of General Marquis de Lafayette. Lafayette, it will interest you to recall, was buried in a remote spot of Paris in the cemetery of the quaint little convent of Picpus, which takes its name from the following composition, piquer, to bite, and puce, fleas; flea-bites, an epidemic which afflicted the people in the vicinity about 1797, or thereabouts. Victor Hugo, the author of "Les Miserables," has placed in this cemetery one of his most touching episodes. This singular, solitary, desolate spot is known as Cuncture au Guillotines, and contains more than 1,300 victims, whose epitaphs bear the such distinguished names of Gamache, Sombreuil, Rohan, Chabot, Grammont, Beauharnais, Pascher da la Pagerie et al., who fell under the blade of the guillotine, set up in the ancient barriere du Trone.

The horizon of our Society in France has been greatly extended within the space of one and a half years with the view of multiplying friendly relations and intercourse with France—create a reciprocal movement in France and America in all departments of education, literature, art, politics and commerce. A committee was appointed by our President to prepare lists of all French officers, soldiers and sailors who took part in the war for American independence. The committee appointed by Gen. Porter consisted of M. Merou, Consul of France; Mr. MacLean, Deputy Consul-General United States at Paris; Major Huntington and myself. In the month of October, 1900, through the active sympathy and courtesy of M. Delcasse, the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of France, and his colleagues, the Ministers of War, Marine and Public Instruction, the committee proceeded to work, and were given access to the archives of the war and marine, which in this case were located in the Archives Nationales in the Franc Bourgeois. Two attaches of the War Department and two ship writers of the Navy Department were placed under the orders of the committee, and proceeded to overhaul the records, which had remained in the dusty, dingy garrets where they had been dumped after the return to France of Count Rochambeau, d'Estaing and Count de Grasse.

It is a part of the incidents attending the arduous labors of the committee, and significant of the character of the work, to say that my two assistants were frequently ill, and that I, although much less exposed, contracted three separate cases of grippe, which may have been contracted from contact with the virus which had lain concealed in the dusty log books of the fleets of d'Estaing and de Grasse. In this connection I desire to bring to your notice and ask, Mr. President-General, that you accord them the favor of your thanks, the following gentleman: Primo, M. Lacour-Gayet, the eminent and sympathetic Professor at the Ecole Superieure de la Marine, who generously and devotedly gave our committee the benefit of his erudition and vast experience. M. Lacour-Gayet, it so happens, was engaged in making researches in the log books of the squadron of d'Orvillier in the preparation of the pamphlet recently published, entitled "La Campagne Navale de la Manche la 1779."

Secundo, Messrs. Michel and Laplanche, the ship writers to whom I have alluded.

You may have some idea of the labor imposed upon these gentlemen when you consider that there are 15,000 names of the army and navy, among other inscriptions, to be deciphered with care from the defaced and sometimes doubtful chirography.

The lists were finally completed in October, 1901, and were placed in the hands of General Porter for transmission to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs for publication in book form.

In the course of my correspondence with the French Ministry, I seized the occasion to signal the excellent services rendered the committee by M. Lacour-Gayet, Michel and Laplanche, adding that I ardently hoped that the character of the work accomplished would contribute in the largest measure to bind in close bonds of friendship the two great sister republics.

The committee decides not to include for the present the squadron of d'Orvilliers which was engaged in the War for American Independence in French waters as extending immeasurably the proposed publication. This work was abandoned with some reluctance because one of the captains of the fleet—de Bessey de la Vouste, killed in a severe battle with the British—was a descendant of the family Chaille, and the incident is all the more interesting because the ball that killed him wounded the Marquis du Chaffault, Division Commander, whose descendant, Count Gabriel Charles Patrice Billebaut du Chaffault, is a member of our Society in France.

In a communication from the Secretary I am instructed by General Porter to say that the lists of the officers, soldiers and sailors of the French army and navy who participated in America in the War for American Independence are to be published conjointly by the French and American Governments.

Mr. President-General, with fifteen to 20,000 names on these lists, whose descendants are citizens to-day both of France and America, the Society in France expects to create a great society, which, by its numbers as well as its Franco-American character, will contribute in the largest sense to bind the two republics in a union political, scientific and commercial in the interest of both.

On motion, duly seconded, the two reports above referred to were unanimously approved and directed to be placed on file and printed.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The compatriot who has just given us this interesting report has asked that we extend a vote of thanks to those whose names he has mentioned there. I think I will consider that as a motion. (Motion seconded and unanimously carried.) The vote of thanks reads as follows:

Vote of thanks for the services of M. Lacour-Gayet, Professor at the Ecole Superieure de la Marine, for his sympathetic aid to the Committee of the S. A. R. in the preparation of the lists of the French officers, soldiers and sailors who participated in the war for American independence. Also the secretaries and attaches, MM. Michel and Laplanche, for their arduous labors in the preparation of these lists under the supervision of the Committee of the Society in France of the S. A. R., and that a copy of this resolution be communicated to the Ambassador of the United States, General Horace Porter.

Mr. Miller (Illinois): Referring to the report of the Secretary-General just read, I would like to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by the President-General to bring the matter to the attention of the Congress of the United States in such a way as, if possible, to induce our Government to undertake the publication and distribution of these lists which our compatriots, Consul Merou and Ambassador Porter, aided by the French Government, have been to such labor in preparing.

Motion seconded and carried.

REPORT OF THE TREASURER-GENERAL, read by Hon. Cornelius A. Pugsley.

Mr. President and gentlemen of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution: The Treasurer-General, in presenting his annual report, desires to record his appreciation of the promptness with which the treasurers of the several State societies have met the obligations due the National Society. The Treasurer-General also takes great pleasure in calling the attention of the Congress to the liberality of the Hon. Howard De Haven Ross, former Vice-President of the National Society and Chairman of the National Committee on Publication, who has forwarded to him receipted bills amounting to $201.31, the amount of same having been contributed by Mr. Ross for the purpose of illustrating the National Register.

Hon. Walter S. Logan, President-General,

National Society, Sons of the American Revolution.

Dear Sir:—We, the undersigned, having made an examination, at your request, of the books and accounts of Cornelius Amory Pugsley, Treasurer-General of the National Society, Sons of the American Revolution, for the period from May 1, 1901, to April 30, 1902, hereby certify that the accompanying statement of cash receipts and disbursements and the details of receipts by States and disbursements by items are correct; that regularly approved vouchers are on file for all expenditures, and that the balance of cash on hand, viz., $3,099.73, agrees with the balances as shown by the bank books of the Westchester County National Bank, Peekskill, N. Y., $2,406.58, and the East River Savings Institution, $185.61 and $507.54.

J. M. Shipley,
Treasurer, Peekskill Savings Bank,
Robert S. Allen,
Cashier, Peekskill Savings Bank,
G. A. Ferguson,
Cashier, Westchester Co. Nat'l Bank,
Peekskill, N. Y.

On motion, duly seconded, the report of the Treasurer-General was ordered placed on file and printed.

President-General Logan: Before we adjourn I want to introduce you to the other Logan, Colonel Logan, of Pittsburg, who did so much to make our last Congress a success.

Colonel Logan (Pittsburg): I will not interfere with the programme of the day, and in view of the short time there is before the adjournment of this session, I will simply say that I am very glad to be here with you and to see so many gentlemen present who were with us in Pittsburg last year. (Applause.)

Adjourned to Thursday morning, May 1, at 10 o'clock.

THURSDAY MORNING SESSION.

Meeting called to order at 10 o'clock.

Chaplain-General Warfield (prayer): We thank Thee, our Heavenly Father, Thou God of light, that Thou hast caused Thy light to shine upon the earth, and that Thou hast brought the beauty of the morning to cheer and gladden our hearts. We pray Thee that Thou mayest send forth into our hearts Thy love, which Thou hast sent abroad into all the world; and we have met here this day, may the spirit of brotherhood, may the spirit of service which animated our ancestors, be present in all our meetings.

We thank Thee that we are permitted here to meet together, and we pray Thee that as we meet it may be in a deep sense of the obligation that rests upon us as the representatives of the great spirit of liberty and truth. May we be blessed of Thee in all our meetings together, for Christ's sake. Amen.

Mr. Warren (New York): We have missed from our gatherings here at this Congress our compatriot, General E. S. Greeley, Vice-President of the Connecticut Society. I know he is here with us in spirit, but he is attending to a greater duty than attending this Congress; he is watching at the bedside of his sick wife. Therefore, I move that the Secretary-General transmit the following telegram, and that it be spread upon the minutes of this Congress:

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 1, 1902.

GENERAL E. S. GREELEY, New Haven, Conn.

DEAR SIR:—We deeply regret that you are unable to meet with this Congress. Your compatriots all send cordial regards and best wishes. Furthermore, they extend their sympathy, praying for the speedy recovery of Mrs. Greeley. SAMUEL EBERLY GROSS, Secretary-General, Sons of the American Revolution.

MR. CHANDLER: I desire to second the motion, and am happy to say to the members of this Congress that Mrs. Greeley's condition is now improving.

Motion carried.

COLONEL GRIFFITH: While you are on that business, I move that a committee of three be appointed to draft and engross and send to the widow of Lieutenant-Commander Cresap, of the United States Navy, who died during the past year, suitable resolutions. Compatriot Cresap was the first Secretary-General of this organization, and continued so for years. I move that the Chair appoint a committee to take charge of the matter.

REGISTRAR-GENERAL CLARK: As the Second Secretary-General of this Society, I would like to second that motion.

Motion carried.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: I will appoint Colonel Griffith, Mr. Warren and Mr. Bunker on that committee.

MR. BUNKER (Cal.): I have a preamble to offer.

Mr. President and Fellow-Compatriots: We Californians, we modest Californians, ask your kind attention. We want nothing for ourselves. We have no Revolutionary sites, no historic spots, no noble monuments, no hallowed battlefields, no mountains, meadows or valleys where the buds of freedom first burst into beautiful bloom. Our inspiration flows from the fountain of patriotism raised by our forefathers far from our golden land. Reaching sublime heights and given supreme power, this fountain sprays our loftiest peaks, our lowliest valleys, our fertile plains and even the distant islands of the Pacific; ever freshening liberty, ever nourishing progress, ever stimulating robust Americanism; rich in every result and rivalling the rainbow in the variety and splendor of its hues.

From that fountain, sir and compatriots, we draw our inspiration; from that inspiration came our own, the first State Society of this order, and from that inspiration we speak to-day. We have no local signs of '76, no remnants of Colonial days, no halls and homes of song and story. And yet our patriotism is pure as the gold from our placers, and strong and enduring as our mighty mountains. Favored by Nature beyond our deserts, stirred by the beauty and grandeur of our scenery, lifted to a lofty plane, our patriotism equals your own, and our aspirations are equally praiseworthy.

And this is why we ask you to take a new step. This is why we ask you to safeguard the symbols of our banner in a distant country. This is why we come three thousand miles to speak for a monument nearly seven thousand miles from the Golden Gate. We do not speak for a church. We speak for a sentiment, a glorious God-given sentiment, the tangible, fibrous sentiment of freedom.

The amount we ask is trifling. We could give it ourselves and never miss it from our fund. But the honor of giving is priceless. We would share that honor with you. We want every Son of the American Revolution to act his part in a new departure.

Let me talk of church and monument. The old and disused church called Holy Trinity of the Minories blocks a blind street in eastern London. On its north wall is the Stars and Stripes monument. Hence its claim on us. Measured by sentiment the monument is ours, for it marks the burial place of a Washington and bears the emblems of our flag. Thanks to the church authorities, we may use that monument as a silent monitor. Thanks to the church authorities, that little church in a sombre business setting shall shine by day and night in the glory of its past, present and future, through centuries to come, and the American wandering afar shall in the presence of those stars and stripes recall his native land and the principles of liberty. In the presence of that monument he can never be a man without a country. As he gazes on the time-stained marble he must, he shall, rise to the spirit of the occasion. There is an irresistible suggestion in these stars and stripes. I had almost said that even the rector of the parish feels more than proper pride in the monument. He is as anxious as any American for its preservation and the most enthusiastic of cicerones. Though the building is loved as a link in English history, its greatest value, even in foreign estimation, is in the Stars and Stripes monument. The narrow and quaintly carved pews, the ancient vaults and fine and rare plate, the musty air, and all the relics of a strenuous past, are as nothing when one stands with bared head before that simple slab on the northern wall and marks those mute heralds of our own approaching freedom.

Since the thirteenth century the site has been sacred to the cause of religion. Here stood the Abbey of St. Clare. In the vault below the church, two hundred years after his death on Tower Hill, was found the mummified head of the Duke of Suffolk, father of Lady Jane Grey. But let us on to the monument. The student may easily fill the historical gap. The church is severely plain. The building is only sixty-three feet long and twenty-four feet wide. The distance from the paved floor to the scanty skylight is thirty feet. The north wall is built of flint and mortar, and though dating back to 1563 shows no signs of decay. As if for a providential purpose it has bravely defied time. The builders built better than they knew. On the inner side of that wall, a few feet from the pulpit, is our monument, our Stars and Stripes monument, the monument in which the church authorities, with the rector in the lead, kindly, aye generously, admit we have a consuming interest.

The monument is a marble slab about three feet by six; it is in memory of Elizabeth, niece of Lawrence Washington, the latter a direct ancestor of our own immortal George. On a shield surmounting the marble are the Washington arms: the eagle and the stars and stripes. There is the genesis of the American flag. From the five-pointed stars and the broad red stripes came our starry banner.

What memories that monument recalls! Look through the avenues of time and see what you will. The horizon is boundless. The crest stood high in 1530, in the days of Henry VIII., but the proudest of those who then bore it had no thought of its final mission. How strange that these emblems of class distinction should have been fitted to republican use! The deeds these emblems have since inspired—courage, self-sacrifice and martyrdom—the human mind can scarcely compass, and no man can do them justice. Our stars marked a new constellation that has grown brighter with the passing years. That constellation stood, as it always shall stand, for the highest form of human progress; not for lust or rule, not for mere material prosperity, but for the moral and intellectual improvement of the world. What avails our wealth unless wisely used? A popular impression is as potent as a fact; a sentiment is stronger than a law. Admit for the sake of argument that we are borne on by sentiment. Then what? Is it not a noble and exalted sentiment?

We Sons of the American Revolution, sons of men who staked life, fame and fortune on the last cast, men who fought, bled and died that liberty might live, we who would brighten the world's horizon with patriotic fires, we, I say, in Congress assembled, the very phrase echoing words of the patriotic past, may felicitate ourselves, the nation and the world that to-day, through the kindly and thoughtful courtesy of an English rector, we may in the very shadow of the shaft to his honor pay one more tribute to the father of his country and the benefactor of mankind. (Applause.)

Motion introduced by Mr. Bunker: WHEREAS, The Stars and Stripes monument in the church known as Holy Trinity of the Minories, London, England, bears the Washington arms—the eagle and the stars and stripes—and the five-pointed stars and red stripes are presumed to have suggested the design for the American flag; and

WHEREAS, This monument marks the burial place of Elizabeth Washington, of the family from which George Washington directly descended; and

WHEREAS, The maintenance of this monument is of deep interest to the Sons of the American Revolution and it should be most carefully safeguarded; and

WHEREAS, Reverend James F. Marr, rector of the parish, has written that an annual expenditure of $250 is necessary for the maintenance of the monument and the accommodation of American visitors to the church, and has also announced that the co-operation of the Sons will be gladly accepted; therefore be it

Resolved, That the President be and hereby is requested to appoint a committee of three on the Stars and Stripes monument, with full power to act, whose duty it shall be to inquire into the conditions of church and monument, and who shall, if the inquiry prove satisfactory, arrange for subscriptions from the State societies to the aggregate amount of $250, with the understanding that the money will be forwarded to Reverend J. F. Marr, or the church authorities, for use in the maintenance of the monument and the accommodation of American visitors to the church.

General Appleton: I take great pleasure in seconding this motion, that it be referred to the committee for consideration.

Motion carried.

Mr. Richardson (Cleveland): The duty has been delegated to me by my colleagues of the Ohio Society to make an announcement and to offer a motion at this time. It has seemed fitting that the delegation from the State where he was born, and in whose service he spent his life, and where his ashes lie, should announce to this Congress that since our last meeting together our most loved and distinguished and honored compatriot, William McKinley, has passed from earth; and inasmuch as Ohio gave this compatriot to the country, and his deeds and his life and his great public service is the priceless heritage of all compatriots in all States, I make the following motion:

Resolved: That a committee be here appointed by the President-General, consisting of one compatriot from each State Society entitled to representation in this Congress, the Societies of Hawaii, the Orient and France, whose duty it shall be to prepare and engross a suitable memorial and present the same to the family of our late compatriot, William McKinley, and to furnish a copy for publication in the records of this National Society.

Judge Whitehead: At a meeting of the Executive Committee a committee was appointed for the purpose of drafting resolutions, of which you did me the honor to appoint me chairman. I have in my pocket the resolutions that I have prepared for the purpose of meeting my duty in that respect, and which at the proper time I intended to bring before this convention; but as my feeble effort would not perhaps meet with the approbation of my friend from Ohio, I will second the motion of the resolution now before you.

Mr. Richardson: We should be glad to have Judge Whitehead appointed on that Committee.

President-General Logan: If I am President long enough, Judge Whitehead shall be on that Committee.

General Joseph Breckinridge: I will not intrude on the time of the Congress; but I had the opportunity to share in the religious ceremonies in the Far East on the occasion of the obsequies of our compatriot, and cannot let this opportunity pass without expressing the feeling, not only that the loss of this compatriot is one in which all the nations of the earth sympathize with us, but that all good order was arrayed against those whom our children are to contend with, when the lines of cleavage which are now growing will certainly come to a collision of arms. Those in the East shared with with us in every respect the admiration for this great man, and I fancy that very few resolutions have ever been presented to this Society of more solemn moment than the present. I therefore request that the motion be accepted as of unusual moment, and that we accept it unanimously by a rising vote.

Motion carried.

A DELEGATE: I desire to have the resolution amended by the addition of the name of the delegate from France.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The French Society is one of the constituent societies, and there will be someone selected from France. I think there is only one man who will be likely to be selected.

REPORT OF THE REGISTRAR-GENERAL, read by Mr. A. Howard Clark.

COMPATRIOTS:—Since the Pittsburg Congress of 1901, your Registrar-General has had the busiest year of the ten terms that he has had the honor to fill this office. Eight hundred and thirty-seven application papers have been approved and registered and 730 certificates of membership have been engrossed. The present number of active members enrolled in thirty-nine societies is 10,351, as follows. Massachusetts stands first, with 1,424 members, followed by New York, 1,295; Connecticut, 977; Illinois, 488, and next the District of Columbia, 477.

Arizona	28	Missouri	127
Arkansas	37	Montana	25
California	350	Nebraska	81
Colorado	114	New Hampshire	295
Connecticut	977	New Jersey	420
Delaware	75	New York	1,295
District of Columbia	477	Ohio	418
Florida	33	Oregon	122
France	23	Pennsylvania	356
Hawaii	62	Rhode Island	256
Illinois	488	South Dakota	24

A provisional organization has been formed in the Philippines called the Society in the Orient of the Sons of the American Revolution; but the great distance of applicants from home records causes some delay in proving the claims of the thirty persons declaring their eligibility. There is also a preliminary Society in North Dakota and one now organizing in Oklahoma.

The roll of members deceased since the Society was organized aggregates more than a thousand; two hundred of them being in Massachusetts, a hundred and fifty in Connecticut, and nearly a hundred in the District of Columbia. The necrology roll since the last Congress includes our honored compatriot, William McKinley, who became a member of the Ohio Society while Governor of that State, and who always manifested a deep interest in this patriotic work. Another honored member has recently deceased, Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, who had joined the Society only a few weeks before his death, and whose eloquence we hoped would rouse many to patriotic deeds.

There will soon be dedicated in this city a statue of Rochambeau, whose active aid did much to make the War of the American Revolution a success. Eminent Americans and Frenchmen will participate in the dedication, and it is certain, as Compatriots Henry Cabot Lodge and Horace Porter on that occasion extoll the deeds of Rochambeau, Lafayette and of other Frenchmen in the American cause, that the fraternal spirit between America and France will be quickened and general interest aroused in our Society in France, with Ambassador Porter as its President, and with its Vice-President a great-grandson of the beloved and valiant Lafayette.

By resolution at the Detroit Congress in 1899, medals of honor and diplomas were ordered to be presented to members who, inheriting the spirit of their forefathers of 1776, had rendered service in the regular or volunteer army or navy of the United States during the war with Spain. The New York Congress in 1900 voted to confer these medals also upon new members who may be entitled to them. During the first year 436 medals were awarded, members were thus honored, including the hero of Manila Bay, the next year 109, and since the Congress of 1901 there have been awarded 29 medals, making a total of 574.

The full list to April, 1901, was published in the last National Year Book, the twenty-nine new medallists being as follows:

One of the objects of this Society is the preservation from possible loss or destruction of the manuscript rolls of soldiers and other records of the American Revolution. Ten years ago but few of these rolls were printed, and in several States the archives were inaccessible. Compatriot Proctor, Senator from Vermont, a few years ago secured the enactment of a law under which such muster rolls as the Government possesses have been arranged and fully indexed, and it is hoped that under this same law, or by additional legislation, the mass of data filed in Revolutionary claims in the Pension Bureau may become more accessible for public reference. The question of printing the rolls has been discussed by the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, but the publication is delayed by the expectation of securing further records believed to exist.

The State of New York has just issued a supplementary quarto volume full of most interesting data in regard to civil and military affairs of the Revolution, including lists of prisoners, of State pensioners, of recipients of bounty lands, and valuable commissary and equipment statistics.

Connecticut has printed a volume of names of several thousand soldiers not recorded in the work published by the Adjutant-General some years ago; and each year, as new data is discovered, Pennsylvania adds to its published series of Revolutionary archives.

The Daughters of the American Revolution have done a good work in compiling the rolls of the soldiers of Georgia, and the list was recently made public in their Third Report to the Congress of the United States.

Massachusetts has added two volumes to its monumental work on "The Soldiers and Sailors of Massachusetts in the Revolutionary War," making nine volumes thus far completed and carrying the roll through the letter "L."

The Society in France of Sons of the American Revolution has achieved a most valuable work in securing from the Government archives of France a roll of the twelve to fifteen thousand Frenchmen who participated in the War of the American Revolution.

There is still sad lack of accessible records of the soldiers of Rhode Island, Vermont, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina, and it is hoped that the Governments of those States may soon be aroused to put in permanent form the rolls of their Revolutionary patriots.

It would be interesting to know the number of soldiers in the War of the Revolution, but the data available is hardly enough to give an approximate aggregate, though it may be roughly estimated that 300,000 men, or one-tenth of the population of the colonies, were active participants in the war. Massachusetts records show some 90,000 enlistments by probably 60,000 men; New York had some 45,000 soldiers, and other colonies in proportion.

The National Register of this Society now being issued is surely a monumental work in genealogy, containing as it does the names of parents, grandparents and great-grandparents of about 11,300 members, through each generation back to ancestors who aided in the establishment of the United States of America, these ancestors including thirty-three of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The preparation of printer's copy for this work was certainly a gigantic task, and nothing but the strongest interest in the Society could have induced your Registrar-General to undertake its supervision, spending hundreds and hundreds of hours in revision of copy and proof. The book is a mine of valuable historical and genealogical information, and will no doubt be delved into by thousands eagerly searching out their ancestry.

As a matter of genealogical importance in which this Society must be vitally interested, the following resolutions are presented, which it is hoped may be acted upon at once, as the question is to-day before the Senate of the United States:

WHEREAS: In the bill for an act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government, which is now on its passage in the Senate, a provision has been incorporated looking to the destruction of the whole or a part of the census schedules, which contain the names of the inhabitants of this country at each decennial period since the year 1790; and

WHEREAS: There is danger that these records of inestimable value may be destroyed, for want of appreciation of their importance, unless expression is given to public opinion upon the subject by parties interested in their preservation; and

WHEREAS: The Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, whose fundamental principle is reverence for the patriotic deeds of our sires and pride in their achievements, is the only body now in session which can enter a timely and, it is to be hoped, an effective protest against this proposed legislation; therefore

Resolved: That we place upon record our sense of the inexpediency and impolicy of any disposition of the records in question other than their permanent preservation at the national capital, either in the permanent census office or elsewhere. They are a treasure-house of original information as to identity of individuals and families, from the point of view of the genealogist, and not infrequently an aid to the judicial settlement of controversies as to property rights by inheritance. They shed light which can be procured from no other source upon the social, political and economic relations of the people of the United States during the past hundred years. Their value to the antiquarian and to students of history will continually increase in proportion to their age. The people have paid many millions of dollars for them, and if destroyed they cannot be replaced, if scattered they can never be reassembled. Science and sentiment unite in the demand that this contemplated outrage on both shall not be consummated, and in their name we appeal to the patriotism of Congress to prevent its consummation.

Resolved: That a copy of this action by this Society be furnished to the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Appropriations, Senator Allison, of Iowa, with a respectful request that he will call the attention of his colleagues in the Senate to our views and this expression of them.

In 1892 your present Registrar-General served the Society as Secretary-General and performed the duties also of Registrar-General, and in 1893 he was elected to the latter office. To-day, in closing the first decade of his administration, he thanks the officers of the State societies for their uniform courtesy and aid to him in keeping the records of the Society up to the highest standard.

Respectfully submitted,

A. HOWARD CLARK,

Registrar-General.

Smithsonian Institution,

Washington, D. C., April 30, 1902.

On motion, duly seconded and carried, the Report of the Registrar-General was approved and ordered printed.

MR. UNDERWOOD (Wisconsin): I would ask to have the name of the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Census added to the Committee.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: We will do so.

REPORT OF THE HISTORIAN-GENERAL, read by Mr. Bates.

The Council of the National Trust for Places of Historic Interest and Natural Beauty is the only organization in this country that stands for the safeguarding of the historical associations of the English-peaking people as a whole and amenities of life that are constantly threatened by modern commercialism. This work, so far as it pertains to places of historic interest connected with the American Revolution, is secured through the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution and stands for history. It is true that there is a certain narrowness in the historic point of view, which is often the means of our frittering away our energies in doing comparatively trifling things, but to these patriotic societies is due for the most part that practical demonstration of history which has been said to be so valuable in municipal æsthetics. The placing of a tablet in itself is of little consequence as a factor in the education of the people, unless it is so related to other events as to "visualize the past" and thus be of service not only to the scholar but of great influence in the education of the democracy. This council is designed to unite all organizations in different States devoted to such purposes as a means of education for the public. Concord was the first town in America to form a local organization to preserve objects of historic interest. The saving of the house of Carlyle in Chelsea, and its associations with Ralph Waldo Emerson, doubtless had much to do with this. Germantown is only second to Concord in preserving its many historic sites. The saving of the Van Cortlandt mansion by the Colonial Dames is an instance of the work being done in this direction. In Frankfurt there is the Goethe house; in Florence, the house of Michael Angelo, the sculptor; in Edinburgh, that of John Knox, the reformer; which are all preserved and maintained as historical repositories of everything pertaining to the lives and works of these great men. On this line is the movement in New York to secure the Jumel mansion and grounds at Washington Heights as a suitable place for the establishment of an historic park, for the preservation of Washington's headquarters, which occupy the site, and for housing of relics of the Revolution and of the early history of the country. The fundamental principle of the National Trust is to safeguard for the community these objects in the direction of history and the records of the past; and in this congeries of races which exists to so large an extent in America we are only working out on a larger scale the same problems that have been already solved in the old world; and thus shall be accomplished the great task of teaching history, not by books only, but as it relates to the conditions of life and character in the past, and so bring its influence to bear upon the problems of modern democracy as a means of elevation to the people. In this respect the patriotic societies have a great mission to perform. They have already done much in this respect. The preservation of certain historic sites in New York and elsewhere is worthy of the highest commendation; but this work is only partially begun, and it cannot be carried out to its fullest extent except as this Society, with all the patriotic organizations, act in conjunction with the Council of the National Trust, which is engaged not only in the work of preserving historic sites, but also places of great natural beauty, such as is now done by the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society of New York City. The field of their operations is necessarily limited, but there is no reason in teaching history as though all history prior to 1776 is foreign history; but this is all due to the narrow method of teaching history in the American schools. Properly considered, there is no reason why the memory of men like St. Augustine, William of Wickham, King Alfred, Henry the Fifth, William of Orange, Chaucer, Ormond the Brave, or the associations connected with Runnymede, should not be as sacred a trust to us as to Englishmen, and the time may come when they will be quite as much American as English. This may be considered a new and novel role to pursue; but the impetus thus set on foot is certainly in this direction, and it is only a question of time when, as a matter of education, these desired ends will be attained.

Up to the present no systematic effort has been made by the National Society to have the exercises of the marking of places of historic interest collected together and made a permanent and accessible fund of historical information in the possession of the Historian-General of this Society. The Year Books to a certain extent contain this information, but it is practically inaccessible to the members at large. For this purpose Mr. Theodore S. Peck, former Historian-General, decided to take the initiative and started an inquiry with the view of securing by means of an official circular addressed to the different societies, information as to all points of interest pertaining to the Revolution in their several States, and copies of all newspapers or other articles of Revolutionary interest which may appear from time to time in their States. This was an important move in the right direction to secure such historical matter, but only Arizona, Maine and Virginia responded to his inquiry. Acting on his suggestion, I sent out a revised letter asking for less information but in a more condensed form, with special reference to the monuments and tablets erected during the year, with photographs of the same. It is very gratifying to be able to report that there has been a very generous response to this inquiry. Letters have been received from the societies of Tennessee, Delaware, Minnesota, the Empire State Society, Maine, California, Massachusetts, Arizona, Louisiana, Kansas and Michigan. Such information is being arranged and placed in a suitable scrap-book, so that in time a complete personal history of the Revolution can be compiled, as represented by the monuments and tablets, the value of which in after years will be of the greatest importance, when the history of the Society comes to be written.

Of the principal historical events of the past year as so reported the following may be mentioned:

The unveiling of the monument at Cooch's Bridge, Delaware, marking the spot where the American flag was first unfurled in battle, is of great interest. This event occurred on the spot where this battle happened, September 3, 1777. The monument was unveiled on the 124th anniversary of Delaware's only land battle in the Revolution. It is a handsome Brandywine granite stone, standing eight feet high and enclosed in a square, the corners of which are marked by cannon and the sides by heavy anchor chains, and the inscription is under a representation of the original flag of thirteen bars and thirteen stars. It stands near the residence of J. Wilkins Cooch, a descendant of the Revolutionary Cooch, whose name is now associated with this spot.

In his address on this occasion, Mr. Henry Conrad, among other things, said:

"When Howe and his fleet left New York, July 17, 1777, he had with him 17,000 men, proceeded southward, and after disembarking on the shores of the Chesapeake marched toward Philadelphia. Washington, with 11,000 men, encamped near White Clay Creek and took a strong position at Iron Hill. The British were commanded by Major-General Grant, and the Continentals by General Maxwell. Grant's duty was to preserve the line of communication with Cornwallis and Kniphausen. It was deemed expedient to gain Iron Hill. A picket force was stationed at Cooch's Mill, while the American pickets were at Christian Bridge. Maxwell met Cornwallis, and, after a short fight, was forced to retreat over White Clay Creek. Washington, Greene and Lafayette went forward and viewed the British camp, and slept that night in a farmhouse nearby, and the next day, as Washington expressed it, made a lucky retreat. It was here, however, that the forces of Howe were watched by the forces of Washington, and where the new flag adopted by the Continental Congress was raised for the first time in battle."

The Maryland Society erected and unveiled, October 19, 1901, the great monument to the Maryland heroes of the Revolution. It is a granite shaft sixty feet high, surmounted by a bronze statue of the Goddess of Liberty. It was erected to commemorate the Revolutionary services of these heroes, commencing with the Riflemen at Cambridge, August 9, 1775, and ending with the surrender at Yorktown, October 19, 1771, as covering the whole story of the war. The day of its unveiling was not only the anniversary of the Battle of Yorktown, but was also that of Peggy Stewart Day, Maryland's Tea Party.

It was the first great monument erected solely to commemorate the Revolutionary services of the soldiers of a single State. Maryland played a conspicuous part in the Revolution, and her history in that respect may be said to be the history of that great event. On the Declaration of Independence we find the names of Chase, of Paca, of Stone and of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton. Johnson nominated Washington for the position of commander of the army as a member of the First Continental Congress. Smallwood, Howard, Gist, Hall, Griffith and Watkins led the Maryland forces through the war and fought with them at Cambridge, Long Island, Trenton, Princeton, Brandywine, Monmouth, Stony Point, Savannah, Guilford Court House and Yorktown. Such patriotism found a fitting recognition in the grand monument thus erected.

On the same day, October 19, 1901, the Michigan Society unveiled a bronze tablet to the memory of Major-General Anthony Wayne, placed in the front portico of the new Wayne Court House. It bears a fac simile of the insignia of the Society, a map of Wayne County, as then established, and a portrait of General Wayne in bas relief. This tablet is designated to commemorate one of the greatest events in American history, and is a tribute to one of the leading fighting generals of the Revolution. It had been tried in vain to subdue the Indians of the Northwest Territory then in open warfare with the settlers. The British were still possessed of the leading military posts of this vast region, in violation of the Treaty of Paris, hoping thereby to keep this land, if the United States should prove too feeble to conquer these savages. Great Britain had become allied with the Indians, and prolonged the War of the Revolution for thirteen years after it had formally closed in the East. The American emigrant had gone to inhabit this land, but a reign of terror existed throughout this region, and the settlers were fast being massacred as the victims of this barbarism. They declared that no white man should ever inhabit the land north and west of the Ohio River, and that this "garden" of the country should be forever the dwelling place of the Indian. Generals Harmar and St. Clair had met with signal defeat in their attempts to subdue these savages. It was this time that "Mad Anthony," the "dashing soldier of the Revolution," was made Commander-in-Chief of the United States Army, and in September, 1792, he was appointed to raise the necessary forces and lead them against these savage foes.

General Wayne had seen extended service in the Revolution. He took part in that great struggle at the outbreak and was in it at the close. There was scarcely an important battle during the whole of this war in which he was not personally engaged. With this prestige as a daring soldier, he took up his march from Pittsburg, and for over a period of two years proceeded through the wilds of this savage country down the Ohio and northward to Fallen Timbers, where on August 20, 1794, he achieved a brilliant victory over the combined forces of the British and Indians, wiped out an Indian warfare that had lasted for over twenty-five years, and opened the Northwest to the settlement of the whites. He entered Detroit August 17, 1796, as military governor of the Territory, which the British had evacuated on the 11th of July, and the American flag was then raised for the first time over this region, which then became a part of the Federal Union. It was such an event that this tablet was designed to commemorate.

On November 16, 1901, the Empire State Society unveiled a bronze tablet on a granite monument commemorating the Revolutionary Battle of Fort Washington in the City of New York.

It is located on the northern end of Manhattan Island, on the site registered by the American Scenic and Historical Preservation Society. There the fort was constructed by the Continental troops in the summer of 1776, was later taken by the British after a heroic defense, November 16, 1776, and re-possessed by the Americans upon their triumphal entry into the City of New York, November 25, 1793. It was erected through the generosity of Mr. James Gordon Bennett, the New York journalist. At this place three thousand men, the flower of the American army, under the command of General Washington, attacked by overwhelming numbers, after a brilliant defense and a brave struggle, surrendered and were made prisoners of war, but not before five hundred Hessians had "bit the dust." Many of the Americans who were taken prisoners were afterwards executed in the English prison-ships. It was the darkest day in American history, and many despaired of their country's future. But it was not so with Washington, who, with that determination which always characterized his conduct in the most trying times of the Revolution, gathered up his disheartened troops and began his famous retreat from the Hudson to the Delaware, where victory later was to crown his efforts, and in the end he was to repossess this fort when he afterwards made his triumphal entry into the City of New York.

In the battle of Fort Washington there was a conspicuous illustration of the close alliance between the scenic and historic elements which formed the two-fold character of the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society, which selected the site for this monument. "It is a remarkable and interesting fact," says Mr. Andrew H. Green, President of that Society, "so nearly universal as to warrant its interpretation as the expression of an underlying principle, that the great conflicts of mankind have been identified with conspicuous features of natural scenery. Among a rugged and virile people the physical features of the landscape which make impress on their moral character afford the salient points from which to exercise their genius. This is notably the truth with regard to military engagements. and many of the great battles of history have been associated with picturesque topographical features.

"The territory," continues Mr. Green, "over which the battle of Fort Washington was fought one hundred and twenty-five years ago, some three or four square miles in extent, comprises the most picturesque portion of the City of New York. It is the highest, boldest and most diversified section of our ancient city, and it commands a combined view of land and water, of city and country, unsurpassed by any city in the United States. It is the only portion of Manhattan Island where the shore line of the beautiful American Rhine has been left in its native picturesqueness, and it is the only portion where any trace of its pristine beauty remains undesecrated and unrazed by the leveling marks of so-called 'public improvements.'"

It is thus apparent that this Society is fast making a record of the most important historical events of the Revolution. Each one of these four celebrates an epoch in the history of this country.

That at Cooch's Bridge, the time when the Americna army had its own distinctive flag in battle; that of the Maryland monument, a review of the Revolution; that of the Wayne tablet, the final conquest and settlement of the Northwest Territory; that of Fort Washington, the first great defeat of the American army in the Revolution, and its subsequent recovery, as indicative of the final success and triumph of the Revolutionary cause. This is simply in the historic sense, but in the higher signification, when the historical is united with the scenic, this work applies the best elements of the history of the race to modern citizenship, and does this not by books but æsthetically. One of the great problems of the future is the development of democracy in this country as elsewhere; and it seems that these organizations are destined to be among the chief agencies employed to solve these questions. A tablet or a monument means little in itself, but when considered as a factor in a movement whose ultimate aim and object is the education of the people, it then becomes of the greatest importance as a means of improvement for the general good. Our work in this matter may be comparatively trifling, but it contains the impetus and the motive for great results. We celebrate the events of the Revolution as tending to create love of country, but when identified with locations of scenic beauty, they both tend to develop the patriotic spirit and æsthetic sense, which together means stability to our institutions and a higher life for the people. This is the true foundation for a democracy such as exists in this country; to assist in creating which we believe is the grand mission of this Society.

On motion duly seconded and carried, the Report of the Historian-General was approved and ordered placed on file and printed.

HON. NOBLE D. LARNER: Mr. President-General, I wish to state to you that the flowers now placed before you on this platform have been sent to us this morning as a present to the National Congress from the President of the United States, through Col. Bingham.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: I announce as the committee appointed on Mr. Bunker's resolution, Mr. Bunker, General Appleton, and A. Howard Clark.

HON. NOBLE D. LARNER: I have received a dispatch from our old friend General Joseph Wheeler. (Applause.) The General has been very sick in the City of Brooklyn. He is still sick, and he sends me a dispatch this morning saying that my invitation to him to be present has been received and that he regrets very much that he cannot be here.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The next regular business is the report of the National Committee on the Revision of the Constitution, by Judge Hancock.

JUDGE HANCOCK: Under peculiar circumstances, at the Detroit Congress in 1899, the Constitution was amended so that the President and Vice-Presidents of this Society could not be elected twice in succession. In 1900, many societies being dissatisfied with this amendment of the Constitution, there were two other amendments proposed. One from New Jersey, recommended by the New Jersey Society, proposed a return to the old system, which allowed the Congress to vote for candidates as often in succession as they pleased. The second, from the District of Columbia Society, allowed simply that they might be voted for a second term after having been elected once. We have proposed—the Committee on Revision—three amendments, which will appear here in this report. In order that there might be no mistake, I ventured to place them before the Society of Pennsylvania, and they unanimously recommended them to the General Congress now in session.

The report is as follows:

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION PRESENTED BY THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA SOCIETY.

"Strike out from the proviso Section 1 the word 'second' and for it insert the word 'third,' so that the proviso shall read:

"Provided that the President-General and five Vice-Presidents-General shall not be elected for a third consecutive term."

RESOLUTION OF THE CONGRESS OF 1901 AT PITTSBURG.

Resolved, That this whole question in respect to the amendment proposed be postponed to next year and that a committee of five be appointed to revise the Constitution in respect to all the amendments which have been here proposed.

COMMITTEE.

The following members were appointed on the Committee:

James Denton Hancock, Pennsylvania.
Hon. Edwin Warfield, Maryland.
Theodore H. Eaton, Michigan.
Hon. John Whitehead, New Jersey.
Trueman G. Avery, New York.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

Your Committee beg leave to report as follows: That they have carefully considered all the suggestions made concerning the proposed amendment above mentioned, as well as the proviso of Section 1, Article V., of the Constitution adopted at Detroit in 1899 as an amendment.

Under the original Constitution, the President-General and Vice-Presidents-General were elected annually. It will therefore be perceived that both the proviso and its amendment are clear limitations upon the power of the Society to elect its own officers. However eminent and efficient a member may be, and however desirous the membership may be to elect him, they are prevented from so doing if he shall happen to have filled either of these offices for the term mentioned in the proviso or the proposed amendment. The committee believe also that the practical effect of the extension of the limit of election to two, three or five years would mean through a kind of compulsive courtesy the extension of the terms of those officers for those periods when it might be desirable to terminate them sooner. Nor do the committee understand that anything is gained by such limitations. The same power which creates the limitations elects the officers, and can therefore apply without restriction a limitation to each particular office. The fact is that such limitations are usually begotten from a want of courage in the elector to exercise his suffrage in accordance with his convictions; and it is not to be presumed that descendants of Revolutionary heroes who risked and lost their lives for independence have so far lost the virtues of their ancestors as not to have sufficient independence to vote for what they conceive to be the best interests of their Society.

It has been suggested that these limitations would, by rotation in office, give to all members an opportunity to fill the higher positions. This, however, would tend to belittle the offices. The committee cannot believe that an argument of this kind will have much weight with the Society, nor that so petty an ambition could have influence with a body of men who, as descendants of the Fathers of the Republic, occupy a post of honor much higher than that to which they can attain through the occupancy of any office.

Even without reference to the power in the Society to put an end to official life, there usually grows in such organizations an unwritten law which fixes a limit to official terms of office. In our country no President has been elected to a third term, and if we turn to the records of our own Society we find that the first President only filled the office for one year, the second for three years, the third for five years, the fourth for two years, and the fifth and sixth for one year each. It is not at all likely, unless under extraordinary conditions, which would meet the full approval of the whole Society, that we shall ever have a President who will fill the place for a period longer than five years.

The committee therefore recommend that the Constitution be so altered as to return to the original rule of the Society, and that Article V., Section 1, be amended to read as follows:

Section 1. "The General Officers of the National Society shall be a President-General, five Vice-Presidents General, a Secertary-General, Treasurer-General, Registrar-General, Historian-General, and Chaplain-General, who shall be elected by ballot by a vote of the majority of the members present at the annual meeting of the Congress of the National Society, and shall hold office for one year and until their successors are elected."

Although the words of the resolution scarcely comprehend it, the Congress seem to have expected a revision of the whole Constitution. The committee have found that document to be a very carefully prepared and comprehensive instrument, and that no changes should be made without careful consideration. They have thought it proper, however, to suggest two slight additions.

1. In Article II. it is mentioned as one of the objects of the Society, "to celebrate the anniversaries of the prominent events of the war." It has been the practice of the Society to go much farther than this, and to celebrate the civil as well as military anniversaries of the Revolutionary period. We therefore suggest that this clause be amended by adding thereto the words "and the Revolutionary period." The clause will then read, "to celebrate the anniversaries of the prominent events of the war and of the Revolutionary period."

2. Article VIII. provides that the Constitution may be amended at any meeting of the Congress * * * provided that sixty day's notice of the proposed amendments, "which shall first have been recommended by a State Society, shall be sent by the Secretary-General to the President of each State Society."

It is to be noted that defects of the Constitution rarely come within the purview of the State Societies which are generally controlled by their own constitution and by-laws. On the other hand, all troubles which arise under the Constitution are felt with peculiar force by the Congress, and the Executive Committee which controls the action of the Society in the long interims between the annual meetings of the Congress.

The committee therefore recommend that Article VIII. be amended to read as follows:

"This Constitution may be altered or amended at any meeting of the Congress of the National Society, provided that sixty days' notice of the proposed alterations or amendments, which shall first have been recommended by a State Society, or by a prior Congress, or by the Executive Committee of the National Society, shall be sent by the Secretary-General to the President of each State Society. A vote of two-thirds of those present shall be necessary to their adoption."

JAMES DENTON HANCOCK,
EDWIN WARFIELD,
TRUEMAN G. AVERY,
J. WHITEHEAD,
THEODORE H. EATON.

COLONEL LOGAN (Pittsburg): I move the adoption of the report. Motion seconded.

HON. FRANKLIN MURPHY: Does that carry the adoption of the amendment?

COLONEL LOGAN: Yes, and the recommendations adopted.

HON. FRANKLIN MURPHY: Should not we accept the report and order it printed, and then take a vote specifically on these amendments, so that there will be no question on them? I think they ought to be voted on separately.

COLONEL LOGAN: I move then that the report be received and printed.

COLONEL GRIFFITH: I was going to rise to a point of order as to this amendment to the Constitution. It seems to me there should be one resolution to receive the report, which could be passed by a majority vote; the other would require a two-thirds vote.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The point is well taken and it is covered by the present form of the motion.

Motion carried, and report ordered to be printed.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The question now is upon the adoption of the proposed amendment. Governor Franklin Murphy proposes that the vote be taken separately.

COLONEL LOGAN: I move the adoption of the amendment to Article II. as read.

Motion seconded and carried.

COLONEL LOGAN: I move the adoption of the amendment to Article V., which covers the changing of the term of the President-General and the Vice-Presidents-General without limit.

JUDGE HANCOCK: Section 1 of Article V. now reads:

ARTICLE V.—OFFICERS AND MANAGERS.

SECTION 1. The General Officers of the National Society shall be a President-General, five Vice-Presidents-General, a Secretary-General, Treasurer-General, Registrar-General, Historian-General, and Chaplain-General, who shall be elected by ballot by a vote of the majority of the members present at the annual meeting of the Congress of the National Society, and shall hold office for one year and until their successors are elected.

Then, in 1899, this proviso was added:

"Provided, That the President-General and five Vice-Presidents-General shall not be elected for a second consecutive term."

We propose to strike out that proviso and let it stand as the Constitution was originally adopted.

HON. NOBLE D. LARNER: This is a question which has agitated the Society of the District of Columbia for many years, and I think it was the first Society that ever introduced the question into the National Society. We had been at that for several years and we finally adopted our present Constitution. We think that the side we have taken is the right side; we hold that no man has the right to have a perpetual office. We are all equal and we all have the right to hold office, and we think that the rule that governs our District of Columbia Society is the proper one and the one that should govern this National Society. Our rule is that no one can be elected as President of the Society more than twice. For instance, I was elected last year as the President of our Society and I have been elected a second time. I don't think we should bring in any compatriot and say to him: "You can stay there as long as you wish to stay there." One President of the National Society stood there for five years, until he was sent to France as the representative of this Government. I hope that the District of Columbia rules will prevail in this National Society in that regard, and I therefore move the following resolution: That no one shall be elected to the office of President for more than two terms.

MR. HARRISON: What is the necessity for this amendment at this time? Is there any necessity for it at all? It seems to me as if it would work against the smaller societies in the smaller States, where they have not yet developed. I cannot see any necessity for passing this amendment on this particular occasion. If, in the future, occasion should arise, the Society can then adopt that amendment. I agree, however, with Compatriot Larner, and endorse his views.

Mr. James Smith (Michigan): I understand that we are voting on the amendment to Section 1, Article V.

President-General Logan (to Mr. Larner): Did you move an amendment?

Mr. Larner: Yes, and it was seconded here.

A Delegate: Is a motion to amend an amendment to the Constitution in order?

President-General Logan: The point of order is made that an amendment to an amendment to the Constitution is out of order; I think the point of order is well taken.

Dr. E. M. Gallaudet: I am a member of the District of Columbia Society, and while I would not wish to seem to present any views that would not be sustained by the members of that Society, I am aware that our Society has stood for a two years' term. But I cannot allow the present occasion to pass without expressing my honest opinion and conviction with regard to this whole matter.

I am in thorough sympathy with the report and recommendations of the committee, and I will briefly give you my reasons. I do not think, in the first place, that it is fitting for a Society like this to attempt to tie its hands in regard to the matter of the election of its most important officers; I think the Society should be free to do from time to time, from year to year, what the interests of the Society seem to demand. (Applause.) If they demand a rotation in office after one year's term, they can have it; they have only to vote by a majority to have another President, and they can have it if they think it is desirable to the interests of the Society. If any emergency arises; if any important questions crop up; if a President-General pre-eminently fitted for that office has been elected to that office, and the Society desires to retain him in office, it would seem—pardon the word—rather childish for us to do what we might very well leave to the Society to do. I have another reason for being opposed to any limitation by the Constitution. Such limitation is simply absurd, and I will show you why.

Suppose the limit is for one year; suppose the Constitution says we shall not re-elect; everyone knows that in a body like this a man remains in office until his successor is elected, and although it takes a two-thirds vote to change the amendments, they could simply refuse to go into an election for President by a majority vote, and if they wanted a man who was already in to stay in three or four years more, they could keep him in. I think, therefore, Mr. President, that it is simply trivial to allow the Constitution to tie its hands, and I think it is far better for us to support the report of the committee, and to return to what was the original provision of the Constitution. (Applause.)

Mr. Handy (Delaware): I realize from the manifestations of the compatriots present that there is a strong sentiment on the floor in favor of the adoption of this resolution, yet I do not desire to see the vote taken without saying a word in opposition to it.

If I may venture to attempt a reply to the clear and eloquent utterance of the gentleman who last addressed us, I would say in the first place that if the present Constitution is futile, if the Society now has the power, by the ingenious method suggested by the last speaker, to continue indefinitely in office the President-General, why is he so anxious to change? If he has what he wants now, why does he want the amendment?

Dr. Gallaudet: To wipe out the absurdity in our Constitution, that is all.

Mr. Handy: It may be an absurdity, but I venture to say that while it stands in the Constitution the ghost which the gentleman sees will never rise from its grave. It is effective where it stands. Now, what is the history? The Congress had an unlimited term, an unlimited number of re-elections for its President-General. Having tried that it put an amendment to the Constitution, thus showing that in some respects at least there must have been dissatisfaction with the working of the original Constitution. Those who tried it didn't like it and they changed it. What has been the friction since the change? What is the grievance? What are the causes now, gentlemen, which make you ask for a change? Have we not had good Presidents-General since? Has not the Society prospered since? We have had three of them since, and for my part, looking back, I would rather have had the three than any one of them three times. (Applause.) For my part, looking back, I would not like to give up the administration of Walter Seth Logan. (Applause.) For my part, again looking back, I would not like to give up the administration of General Joseph Breckinridge. (Applause.) And with all honor to the distinguished compatriot from New Jersey, with a laurel wreath around his administration for one year there could not have been another leaf added if he had served all of three years as President-General. What is the grievance of these gentlemen? Why do they want a remedy? I heard, accompanied by applause, at the opening of this Congress, the President-General assert that this Society had in it an inexhaustible line of gentlemen fit to serve as President of the United States, one after the other to the end of time. (Applause.) He mentioned a Republican President or a Democratic President, and the only thing that astonished me was that he failed in nominating as a candidate for the President of the Democratic party his own modest and beaming self. (Applause.)

If we have in this Society an unlimited supply of candidates for the office of President of the United States, one every four years, surely we can find an unlimited supply of Presidents-General, one every year. And if we can find a suitable man, one every year, a man of dignity, a man of capacity, of enthusiasm, then why not let us have them in due succession? You say it is "childish" to put it in. It is already in, and for my part I never batter down a door unless I want to get on the other side of it. If I find a door locked, and I want to go around on the other side, I am ready to batter with my knuckles to get across; but, if I don't want to get at the other side of the door, there is no reason for battering down the door; and as we have the Constitution as it is, unless you want to elect some man permanently, unless you have reached that state of mind where you want one man, to keep him all the time, it is childish to talk of changing the Constitution to do something which you do not want to do after you are able to do it.

There are no fetters and no bonds when you are doing just what you want to do anyhow. When you want to do something that you are not permitted to do, you are bound. I remember as a boy hearing about the bonds of matrimony. I have been married for fifteen years and I have not yet found the bonds too tight; there has never been any disposition to get away from this delightful Society. I understand that there never could be a day when the Society would be more tempted; there never could be a more charming time to keep the man there forever than now, with the lovely gentleman who presides over this body at the present time. But I understand, as dearly beloved as he may be to the Society, as willing as the Society may be to have him all its life, I understand that he is a flirtatious individual, and that he would not do it and we might have a breach of promise case. Let us wait until we find a man who will be willing to be our permanent spouse before we give up our position as a maternal spouse with one husband and no chance of getting into the market again. (Laughter.)

Dr. Gallaudet: I have no wish to prolong this discussion. My honorable friend from Delaware has drawn some inferences from the position that I have expressed which I think I am not willing to have stand. It would be inferred from what he said that those who are supposed to sustain the committee in their report on this occasion are in favor of having a President in for an unlimited term. That by no means follows. I, myself, am perfectly willing, if the Society so desires, to have a new President every year. I am a member of several organizations of different sorts in which there is an unwritten law that the President shall be renewed every year. I am sure I feel very much easier in those organizations where the law is an unwritten law; where it is held to-day as the proposed requirement. I said something a little while ago about feeling that this Society should not have its hands tied. I am by no means urging that this Society should adopt the policy of re-electing a President for five years or ten years. I would rather prefer a frequent change, but I do feel that the Society should be free to re-elect a President if it pleases to do so, and not have its hands tied.

CHAPLAIN-GENERAL WARFIELD: I think the argument which has been presented to us in such a captivating way has the highest characteristic of the most captivating of all arguments; that it appeals to our prejudices rather than to our convictions.

It seems to me that there is one thing that this Society stands for above all others, and that is, a certain type of manhood which is not afraid of being misled by the temptations which are constantly presented to us. We believe in free institutions, and we largely believe in free institutions because they present to us that liberty, not of doing what we please, but what we believe to be right.

MR. HANDY (interrupting): Excuse the interruption, but a conviction is what I believe, and a prejudice is what the other fellow believes.

CHAPLAIN-GENERAL WARFIELD (continuing): I am willing to admit that the gentleman has appealed to my prejudices, therefore I confess I must be the other fellow. I want to vote in this case for what is wise and what is right, and to have that liberty to decide when any question is presented to me in its own connection and in no other connection.

Now, gentlemen, the question that has been presented to us several times has been that of electing a man to the office of President-General of this Society; and when I have come to that question I have felt it an insult to my manhood to have it said to me, "You have not sense or judgment enough to have this question submitted to you in its simplicity." We have been told that one man shall be eliminated from your choice. I have manhood enough, sir, to vote against any man who is put up before us for any reason that there may be. I believe that every other man should have an equal right to decide that case for himself; nor do I believe, sir, that there is any danger of men such as are collected here being guided or influenced by any kind of cliques or anything of that sort. I think we should come to an election of a President-General with hands united.

Let me go back. The matter which was presented to us in such admirable style is that it was best for this Society to select one man after another to fill this high office; in all of which I agree with you. But, sir, permit me to say that I think that we did less harm to those gentlemen whom we elected one after another, when we simply and practically said to them: "Sir, we elect you to this office; you are our second choice; we cannot elect the outgoing gentleman; we must elect someone else, and it must be you." We should say to our retiring President: "We are proud of your services, but we have another man whom we will now proceed to honor." I think we should be free to honor a man who has served us excellently by a second term. I should not be afraid of a third term if it were for the best interests of the Society. I should not be afraid of any duration of office which made itself clear to us as for the best interests of our Society. As I look at the list of our officers-general, I am sometimes prone to wonder why it is that on one side we have a list of gentlemen who are not realists, and on the other of those who are realists. Does this Society mean to draw a line and say that the Presidents-General are purely honorary officers, and we hard-working members on the other side, because the Secretary-General and Chaplain-General have such arduous duties that they must be well exercised in them and therefore elected again and again. I would eliminate the distinction between the "honorary" and the "laborious" classes, and recognize that both are here for the interests of the work; and as long as they serve us I would return them when it seems to be the best judgment of this Society to so re-elect them.

Hon. Franklin Murphy: I had not expected to say a word. Judge Hancock, however, asks me to say something, and I will take about two minutes of your time to give you two suggestions born of my experience.

It has been said on this floor this morning that we had a President-General who served this Society for five years, and that we couldn't get rid of him except we sent him out of the country. That is true, and it is no reflection on any other occupant of that chair to say that this Society was never served with such unselfish devotion, with such magnificent ability, and that it never so prospered as it prospered under the President-Generalship of Horace Porter. (Applause.) And when we have a President-General, qualified as he was qualified to fill that office, if he is willing to serve, I hope he will be continued in his office until you send him out of the country.

Now, I want to say another thing, also born of my experience, because as you know, no member of this Society was as close to General Porter as I was during his incumbency of this office, and no man in this Society knows better than I how much he did and how well he did it for the Association. What do we want in the office of the President-General? Do we want a man who will preside over us with skill and dignity and honor? Surely we do; and their name is legion, if that is all you want. Every member of this Society can do that if that is all you want. You want a man who shall become so interested in the work, so familiar with the technicalities of the work, and so devoted to the interests of it, that he shall serve you as in my judgment no man can serve you if you turn him out at the end of the year. That is practically all, and that ends what I have to say.

If you have the best interests of this Association at heart, you will let the President-General serve you as he can serve you by virtue of his knowledge of the duties and opportunities of his office, and not turn him out just as he gets ready to serve you at his best.

Mr. Briggs (Texas): Our Society is a very small one, but the members of it have become impressed with the fact that the best service to be obtained in organizations of this character is by having in it men whom they can trust; men of experience; men who have conducted the organization to a successful standpoint, and whom they know can continue that work; and not by putting it in the hands of someone else simply for the sake of rotation of office. It is the hope of our Society that this organization stands above political feeling; that it stands for something more than that every man shall have a chance to be President of the organization; that it is looking to the blending of the patriotic feeling throughout the country. Put those men in the highest places who can engender and stimulate and enhance that feeling; and when we get such men in, keep them. We want no limitations or restrictions imposed upon us by the Constitution or anybody else which will defeat that purpose.

Judge Whitehead: At our New Jersey Society, which is very conservative, an amendment to the Constitution was proposed and passed. A year afterwards, under the leadership of the present President of that Society, it was proposed that this Congress should be asked to set aside that amendment and return to the Constitution as it existed originally. We in Jersey are in favor of the amendment proposed by the committee; and as a member of that committee, in connection with the others, we gave it the most careful attention for the purpose of doing what we thought was for the greatest benefit of the Society. That was our sole object. It was the attention given to it, not for a day, nor for an hour, nor for a week, but the attention given to it by our honored chairman for months; and he gave to it the best of his judgment and the utmost of his experience.

I hope that the amendment proposed by the committee will be passed. New Jersey, I said, is a conservative Society; it is so conservative that it has kept its present President for ten years; and they threaten to keep him in office for the rest of his natural life.

(Cries of question!)

President-General Logan: The question cannot be put until the speakers have finished.

Mr. Handy: We have gotten down close to the meat of this question. We have gotten away from the beautiful rhetoric about freeing ourselves, down to the meat of the question as presented by Compatriot Murphy from New Jersey.

Now, all that I ask and all that the gentlemen who stand with me ask, is that the compatriots know the real question and vote according to their wishes. Take what the compatriot from New Jersey has said, and said with so much force and clearness and dignity; add to that what our venerable and well beloved Compatriot Judge Whitehead has said, with regard to the customs of the Society in New Jersey, that keeps its President-General for ten years, and even for life. You come down to this, which is the question before the Society: This is a movement to amend our Constitution looking towards a permanent President-General (cries of No! No!). It cannot mean anything else (cries of No! No! and Question!). Can't you have patience with me for two minutes? What becomes of the argument made by Compatriot Murphy that, when you found a man with the proper elements, it was best for the Society that you should keep him there, unless this means a permanent President-General as soon as you can find the suitable man? That is the real issue; and when you come to vote, to pass through the teller, without any bitterness in the thing or unseemly contention, those who desire a permanent President-General, or one for a long series of years, should vote in favor of the resolution; and those who desire a shining succession of Presidents-General should vote against the amendment. That is the issue; we need not cover it up with words.

Judge Hancock: This report has the unanimous confirmation of the committee. The thought in our mind was this, that a society based upon the principles of the Revolution should not take away its own liberties. (Applause.) The geneleman says that our purpose is to make a "perpetual" President and other officers. Our purpose is to give the members of this Society the right to elect and re-elect other members of the Society when they think fit to do so. (Applause.) That is the purpose. What! Will you take away our liberty and compel us not to vote for a man who has proved himself to all the members of this body so well qualified for a high position? Suppose to-day that General Washington were President of this Society, would you make it impossible for him to be re-elected? Suppose to-day that Thomas Jefferson were a member, or Alexander Hamilton, it would be the same; we could not re-elect him because of some puny man who wanted the office in rotation and who wanted the position for himself. (Applause.) That is not the position of this body, and we can exercise the idea of rotation in office as well without that limitation as we can with it. (Applause.)

CHAPLAIN-GENERAL WARFIELD: I think the question was presented to us in the way that meets exactly the answer that our Revolutionary History supplies to us. When we came, upon the adoption of our Constitution, to choose a President of these United States, our Constitution put no limitation upon his re-election. We had him there as our first and second President of these United States, and a grateful people were ready to continue him in office as long as he could be induced to keep it. That spirit animated him which I believe animates the members of this Society. When he thought he had served his country long enough he declined the office. I believe it would be so with the Presidents-General of this Society; having in mind the memory of George Washington they would serve us and be willing to serve us as long as they deemed it for the best interests of the Society.

MR. HANDY: Our sires fought for freedom, while the statutes standing on our books now stand for all of us being gagged. While that holds, I am told I cannot vote for whom I please. Now, I hold myself at liberty to vote at all times for this man or for that man, and not for perpetuating in office the same man.

MR. BATES (Michigan): Our friend from Delaware seems to misapprehend the character and spirit of this organization. Let me say that there never was a time when it was not safe to trust this Congress to do its own business in its own way.

MR. HANDY: Then why was this proviso never before adopted in this Congress?

MR. BATES (Michigan): It was a mistake, and we recognized it immediately after it was made; and we have been trying for two years to correct that mistake. But I never could get this Congress to a point where we could rectify it, and we have been at it ever since. We saw the mistake then, and just as soon as we should have the opportunity we proposed to remedy it. Our institutions are based upon the proposition that all political power rests in the people. We have now come to the question as to whether we shall have the opportunity, whenever we desire to make the choice, whether it is one man or another man in the chair, to re-elect him on the basis of his fitness. Or shall it be impossible for us to continue him? There is not any question about this; it is efficiency we want, and when that exists there cannot be any question as to the success and the ultimate attainment of all the objects and purposes for which this Society exists. I want to get back to the original Constitution and leave it free with me to exercise my choice in the matter as I desire.

(Cries of "Question!")

President-General Logan: The Constitution requires a two-thirds vote of those present. The question now is on the adoption of the amendment proposed by the committee.

General Anderson: I rise to a question of privilege. I ask that, under the authority of the Constitution, votes be taken by States.

President-General Logan: The point is made by General Anderson that the vote should be taken by States. That is not my interpretation of the Constitution. Section 4 of the Constitution requires a vote by States, giving the delegation from each State the right to cast the whole vote of the State; but Article VIII. of the Constitution seems to me to limit the application of Section 4 of the preceding article, which says:

ARTICLE VIII.—AMENDMENTS.

This Constitution may be altered or amended at any meeting of the Congress of the National Society, provided that sixty days' notice of the proposed alterations or amendments, which shall first have been recommended by a State Society, shall be sent by the Secretary-General to the President of each State Society. A vote of two-thirds of those present shall be necessary to their adoption.

It is my judgment that a vote of two-thirds of the members present is necessary to carry this, and that the vote be not taken by States.

General Anderson: Section 4 of Article VII. reads as follows:

Section 4. State Societies shall be represented at meetings of the National Society only by members of their own State Society, or by members of other State Societies who may be designated by the regularly appointed delegates from such State Society who may be present at any meeting of the National Society; and the delegates representing any State Society, as provided herein, shall be authorized to cast the entire vote to which such Society is entitled, each delegate or representative present being authorized to cast his proportionate vote, or fraction thereof.

I hold that the Constitution by that section gives us a right to vote "by States." This is the proposition: A State is represented here only by one delegate; you give them power to get other delegates to represent them. I would like this Congress to consider this imporant question. Let us consider that the delegates from a single State cannot get enough delegates to fill up a quota; their State would then be deprived of representation. Suppose the State has eight votes; they can only get two alternates or substitutes in the Congress. Then that State would only have two votes instead of eight, as would happen if Massachusetts only took four of its members to San Francisco to represent it. Then the State of Massachusetts, when it came to vote in the Congress of San Francisco, would only have eight or ten votes instead of thirty. I take it as important in this case to allow us to vote by States. I represent the State of Oregon; the State of Oregon wants its vote; it has only five or six, but it is entitled to them. It is a question of the highest privilege, and I hope that you will stand by your right.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: It is my opinion that Article VIII. creates an exception to the general rule laid down in Section 4 of the Constitution. Article VIII. says that "a vote of two-thirds of those present shall be necessary to their adoption."

(Cries of "Question!")

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the section proposed. The delegates will please take their seats, and all in favor of the adoption of the amendment will rise and remain standing until the tellers have counted them.

The vote was counted, with the following results:

For the amendment	119
Against the amendment	30

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The amendment is carried.

MR. HANDY: I ask that the Chair call for those delegates present to rise who have not voted, but who must be counted.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: I think Mr. Handy's point is well taken. Those delegates who have been present and who have not voted will please rise (non-votants rise). There are twelve members present who have not voted, but a two-thirds majority of those present have voted in favor of the amendment; the amendment is therefore carried.

COL. LOGAN (Pittsburg): There is another amendment here to be voted on: Amendment to Article VIII. I move the adoption of the amendment which adds to the present amendment, "or by the Executive Committee of the National Society," and which permits the Executive Committee to present amendments.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: Judge Hancock will now present to you the amendment.

JUDGE HANCOCK: The article as it now stands reads as follows:

We have added to this the words "or by a prior meeting of the Congress, or by the Executive Committee of the National Society." This Committee acts entirely during the interim of the Congress, and should have the right to recommend. But while they shall have the right to recommend, any recommendations that they make shall be sent to the presidents of their different societies, so that the members of those different societies shall have an opportunity to express their assent or dissent through their representatives. The reason why we did this was that very few of the difficulties which arise under the Constitution ever come before the State societies; but they do come, as you have seen to-day, before the Congress instead of the Executive Committee, and we thought the latter had a right to recommend as well as the National Congress.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: Are you ready for the adoption of this amendment to Article VIII.?

Motion duly seconded and unanimously carried.

GENERAL APPLETON: I should like to make the following resolution. It has come to the attention of some of us that monuments have been erected on noted sites on very historic ground, and I submit the following resolution in regard to them:

Resolved: That the Presidents of our State societies be requested to see that there shall be incorporated in the Annual Report of the Ntaional Society from their societies, a list of all prominent monuments marking Revolutionary sites within their respective jurisdictions, with a view to intensify and further extend the lively interest that now exists in the hearts and minds of all members of the S. A. R.

MR. BATES (Mich.): I move that the reports on monuments be sent to the Historian-General, and that they be sent to him on or about the 1st day of April of each year.

Motion carried. Meeting adjourned until 8:30 P. M.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Addresses delivered at the tomb of George Washington, Mount Vernon.

HON. NOBLE B. LARNER: I suppose it is the same way all over this country as it is in Washington. One of the first things that we are taught to teach our children is to venerate and honor this great place; and when we of the District of Columbia thought of providing some means of accommodating the members of our Congress in an appropriate way we thought this was one of the best places to which we could bring you. We are very glad that so many of you are present; we are very glad that the weather is so good; and we trust that before we get through you will all be glad at having visited this great and glorious place.

We have provided for one or two short speeches on this occasion, and when you have heard them we will retire to the mansion above.

I now take pleasure in introducing to you the great orator of this country, the one we recognize as having no superior, Hon. John Goode, a member of the District of Columbia Society.

HON. JOHN GOODE: Mr. President, Compatriots, Ladies and Gentlemen: By request of the committee of arrangements, it becomes my pleasing duty to bid you welcome to this historic spot, around which so many sacred memeories and so many hallowed associations cluster.

As members of the National Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution, you have come from all parts of this broad land to the Capital City of the Republic, "the home of science and of the Government," to hold your regular annual meeting, to transact the necessary business of your patriotic organization, to revive the pleasing associations of the past, to keep alive in the hearts of the people the precious memories of the Revolutionary struggle, to indulge a pardonable pride in the greatness and glory of our common country, and to look forward with bright anticipation to the magnificent destiny which, as we fondly trust, awaits it in the future.

Your mission would not have been adequately fulfilled if, before returning to your homes, you had failed to visit the home and tomb of Washington, the illustrious Commander-in-Chief of the Continental armies, the first chief magistrate of the Republic, and the foremost man that ever lived in all that was great and good; of whom it has been beautifully said:

"All discord ceases at his name,
All ranks contend to swell his fame."

If it be true, as Seneca wrote of a lofty and deeply shaded grove filled with venerable trees, whose interlacing boughs shut out the face of Heaven, that "the grandeur of the wood, the silence of the place, the shade so dense and uniform, infuse into the breast the notion of a Divinity," what must be the feelings of patriotism and reverence awakened in the breast of every Son of the American Revolution when he makes a pilgrimage to this American Mecca, with its hallowed shades, its sacred relics and its inspiring associations! Here are the silent woods in which Washington was accustomed to roam. Here are the beautiful fields and garden he cultivated. Here are the stately trees he planted. Here is the modest mansion in which he lived with noblest simplicity. Here is the historic Potomac he loved so well. Here is his sacred tomb, to which his countrymen may always resort to gather fresh inspiration for the proper discharge of the responsible duties of American citizenship. Where else upon this continent can you find such memorials of the mighty past? Where else can you find such an association to quicken the pulse and inspire the hearts of the young with all those elevated principles and lofty desires which make ambition virtue?

Of course every son of the American Revolution is familiar with the history of Mt. Vernon, but it may not be inappropriate, perhaps, on an occasion like the present to recount briefly some of its incidents. It was named by Lawrence Washington, the half-brother of George Washington, in honor of Admiral Vernon of the British Navy, under whom Lawrence Washington served in colonial days during the war against Spain.

George Washington inherited it from Lawrence Washington in 1753. George Washington by his last will and testament devised it to his nephew, Bushrod Washington. Bushrod Washington devised it to his nephew, John A. Washington. John A. Washington devised it to his wife, Jane C. Washington. Jane C. Washington devised it to her son, John A. Washington, who sold and conveyed 202 acres of the original tract to the Mt. Vernon Ladies' Association of the Union. It is proper to add that Jay Gould and wife conveyed to the Association an adjoining tract of thirty-three and one-half acres, which was a part of the original Mt. Vernon estate. Without transcending the proper limits of an address like this, it would be impossible to trace in detail the legislation of the General Assembly of Virginia relating to Mt. Vernon. Suffice it to say that on the 17th of March, 1856, an act was passed incorporating the Mt. Vernon Ladies' Association of the Union. This act was amended on the 19th of March, 1858, by the act which now constitutes the present charter of the Association. It provided that the Mt. Vernon Ladies' Association as heretofore organized shall be constituted a body politic and corporate; and that it shall be lawful for the said Association to purchase, hold and improve 200 acres of Mt. Vernon, including the late mansion, as well as the tomb of George Washington, together with the garden, grounds, wharf and landing now constructed on the Potomac River.

We have thus seen how Mt. Vernon was acquired and how it is now held. How was it paid for? To Miss Anne P. Cunningham, the first Regent of the Association, and a highly cultured lady of South Carolina, belongs the honor of originating the idea that Mt. Vernon should be purchased, not by the general government, not by the State of Virginia, but by the voluntary contributions of the American people, and consecrated forever as sacred to the memory of the Father of his Country. Solitary and alone she put this ball in motion. In December, 1853, from her home in Laurens, South Carolina, she made her first appeal for funds through the newspaper press over the title of "Southern Matron" as her nom de plume. She labored zealously and unceasingly until her pious and patriotic object was accomplished, and the stipulated sum of $200,000, as the purchase money, was raised. In July, 1854, some of the most prominent ladies of Richmond, Virginia, formed an association to raise money to aid in the purchase of Mt. Vernon by the State, but at the earnest solicitation of Miss Cunningham the Richmond association was organized into a central committee of the Union, which continued until the Mt. Vernon Ladies' Association was incorporated by an act of the General Assembly of Virginia, as before stated.

In rendering honor to whom honor is due for originating and carrying on to completion the great idea of purchasing and dedicating Mt. Vernon as "The Nation's Pilgrim Shrine," it would be unpardonable to omit honorable mention of Mrs. Anna Cora Mowatt Ritchie, the first Vice-Regent of the Association of the newspaper press throughout the country, which generously lent its powerful aid; of the members of that Ancient and Honorable Order of Free Masons, of which Washington was a conspicuous member; of the school of children who responded to the call with all the ardor and enthusiasm of ingenuous youth; of our noble countrywomen who gave the cause the highest energies of their natures and the best affections of their their hearts, and last, though not least, to the Hon. Edward Everett, the gifted orator of Massachusetts, who in a spirit of unselfish and disinterested patriotism that was truly refreshing contributed his valuable time and his brilliant talents for several years, without any reward whatever, except an approving conscience and the heartfelt gratitude of his admiring countrymen. Perhaps it is not too much to say that, without the magnanimous assistance rendered by Mr. Everett, the requisite amount for the purchase of Mt. Vernon would not have been realized by the Ladies' Association. It may be truly said to be the crowning glory of his brilliant and honorable career. For several years he devoted himself to the service of the Ladies' Association going up and down through the land, from north to south and from east to west, swaying vast audiences by his charming rhetoric, moving the hearts of the people to their inmost depths, and refusing to accept any part of the proceeds of his orations, not even reserving a sum sufficient to pay his necessary traveling expenses. All honor to the noble and incorruptible patriot, whose name has thus been inseparably connected with the name and fame of Washington.

The Mt. Vernon Ladies' Association of the Union, in its corporate capacity, now holds the property under a trust to keep it sacred to the memory of the illustrious dead. Under its constitution and by-laws, its officers consist of a Regent, Vice-Regent, Secretary, Treasurer and such subordinate officers as may from time to time be appointed. A council composed of the Regent and Vice-Regents meets here annually in May and adopts the necessary measures for the proper management and control of the property. As an evidence of their fidelity to the trust committed to their hands, it is only necessary to point to the mansion, the furniture, the tombs, the relics, the grounds, the shrubs, the trees, the garden, the greenhouse and the fields. In testimony of their skillful financiering and economic management, attention is called to the fact that after paying $200,000, as the purchase money, keeping the property in repair and making many valuable improvements, they have, according to the last annual report of their treasurer, $81,105.07 invested in securities and held in cash. I know that I utter a sentiment that will strike a responsive chord in the breasts of all who hear me when I say that the Mt. Vernon Ladies' Association of the Union, who have for so many years unselfishly and patriotically devoted their time and energies, without any pecuniary compensation, to the performance of this sacred trust, are entitled to receive the everlasting gratitude, not only of every Son of the American Revolution, but of every American patriot. What a beautiful idea that the home and tomb of Washington should be tenderly cared for and preserved by his noble and patriotic country-women! What a fitting tribute is thus paid by female purity and loveliness to manhood's greatest and most glorious exemplar!

I shall not undertake on this occasion to pronounce a eulogy upon the life and character of George Washington. Language is altogether too poor to enable me to do justice to such an exalted theme. You may search history in vain to find his parellel. At the early age of sixteen, by appointment of Lord Fairfax, he went forth into the wilderness of the West with a surveyor's staff in his hands. At the age of nineteen, in preparation for the French and Indian War, he was appointed adjutant of the Virginia troops, with the rank of major. Soon after attaining the age of twenty-one he was appointed by Lieutenant-Governor Dinwiddie as commander of the northern military district of Virginia. He served in Braddock's disastrous campaign, and in the hour of defeat exhibited such coolness, courage and indifference to danger that a colonial minister of the gospel in a sermon declared his belief that he had been preserved to be the savior of his country. While occupied at Mt. Vernon in his favorite pursuit of agriculture, he was frequently elected as a member of the General Assembly of Virginia, and in that capacity took a prominent part in resisting the aggressions of the British ministry upon the rights of the colonies. In 1774 he was elected by the Virginia convention as one of the seven delegates to represent Virginia in the Continental Congress. After the battles of Lexington and Concord he was unanimously chosen, on the motion of John Adams, of Massachusetts, to be the Commander-in-Chief of all the forces raised, or to be raised, in defense of American liberty. As soon as he was commissioned in June, 1775, he addressed himself to the difficult task of organizing the army, perfecting its discipline and obtaining ammunition and military supplies. In March, 1776, he drove the British out of Boston. Without dwelling upon the military operations which he conducted during the progress of the war, it is sufficient to say that his masterly retreat through the Jerseys, his admirable conduct at Trenton, Princeton, Morristown and Germantown; the unshaken fortitude with which he met clamors of the people and the disgraceful cabals for his overthrow at Valley Forge during the winters of 1777 and 1778, where his great heart was made to bleed on account of the sufferings of his men, which he had no power to alleviate; his vigorous pursuit of Clinton across the Jerseys towards New York, and the final campaign conceived by himself, which culminated in the complete surrender of the Earl Cornwallis with his entire army at Yorktown on the 19th of October, 1781—all these have rendered his name immortal and placed him, by the universal verdict of all mankind, in the foremost rank of the great military chieftains, who by their genius and skill have attracted the admiration of the world. He was not only great as a warrior, but he was pre-eminently great as a statesman. When the Federal Convention met at Philadelphia in May, 1787, to frame the Constitution, he attended as a delegate from Virginia, and was unanimously chosen to preside over its deliberations. He took no active part in the debates, but his guiding hand was felt in the adoption of that wonderful instrument, pronounced by Mr. Gladstone to be the greatest work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man. In 1789 he was unanimously elected as the first President of the United States, and again unanimously re-elected in 1792. He could again easily have been chosen for another term, and even for life, but in turning aside from the tempting and alluring offers of power and place and in voluntarily returning to the society of his beloved wife and the peaceful pursuits of agriculture, he gave the finishing touch to his complete and well-rounded career, and vindicated his title to the proud position which has by common consent been assigned to him—"First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen!"

Permit me to say that it will be an unhappy day for the Republic when the American people shall cease to emulate the example and revere the name of George Washington. Amid all the disturbing influences of party and the selfish struggles for place, there is nothing so well calculated to allay the strife of discord and rekindle the flame of patriotism as the example of America's greatest and noblest son. The eloquent Lamartine, when he so fearlessly confronted the red flag of Communism in Paris many years ago, was heard to exclaim, "What France needs is a Washington!" What was the secret of his power as shown in his most prominent characteristics? He was the soul of honor and truth, as illustrated by a well-known incident in his early childhood. He was modest, as is shown by the remark of the Speaker of the Virginia House of Burgesses on a celebrated occasion, that his modesty was only equalled by his merit. He had a chivalrous regard for women, and was heard to say at Fredericksburg, when the ball was given in his honor after the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, that if he had accomplished anything in his life he owed it all to his mother. He was unselfish, as is demonstrated by the fact that he voluntarily resigned to Congress the plenary commission he had received from them, and retired to the peaceful shades of his beloved home. He was animated by an ardent love of country and an unshaken faith in the final triumph of her righteous cause. In the darkest hours of the Revolution, when he was beset by foes within and foes without, and his army was almost destroyed by privation and hunger, he exclaimed: "Leave me but a banner to place upon the mountains of West Augusta and I will rally around me men who will lift our bleeding country from the dust and set her free!"

He was an humble soldier of the Cross, and was not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ. At all times and in all places, in public and in private, in the Cabinet and in the field, he constantly recognized his dependence upon the Omnipotent Ruler of the Universe, who controls the destinies of nations and of men. In the contemplation of this exalted character the poet has beautifully sung:

> "Fame spread her wings and loud her trumpet blew, > Great Washington is near. What praise his due?
> What title shall he have? She paused and said,
> Not one; his name alone strikes every title dead."

In returning from this historic spot, around which such a halo of glory has been shed, and over which perhaps the beatified spirit of the immortal hero and patriot is hovering to-day, let us carry with us fresh inspiration for the proper discharge of the pressing duties of the hour. Let us take to heart the lessons of self-abnegation and disinterested patriotism taught us by his illustrious example. Let us renew our vows of allegiance to the constitutional Union created by our fathers, and resolve that by the help of Almighty God we will transmit to our children, as they transmitted to theirs, the noblest inheritance that belongs to man. The obligations of patriotism require us to exert whatever influence we may possess, not only in preserving those cardinal principles which lie at the foundation of our representative system of government, but in contributing to the moral elevation and improvement of the individual citizen. The public safety and the public honor depend upon the force of individual character.

"He is a free man whom the truth makes free,
And all are slaves beside."

Three cheers were given for Judge Goode.

HON. NOBLE D. LARNER: We shall now have the pleasure of listening to an address by Mrs. Donald McLean, Regent of the New York City Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, on behalf of Mrs. Sarah Bowman Van Ness, Regent of Lexington Chapter, D. A. R., of Massachusetts.

MRS. DONALD MCLEAN: Mr. President, Sons of the American Revolution and my Sister Confreres—if I may use such a phrase—and those of us who are here on this occasion simply in our rightful and proudest positions of wives, sisters or friends of distinguished men: No woman can have a greater privilege than to rise to prominence through such affiliation. Do not believe a word you hear as to the spirit of the "new woman" in this connection; but a woman is proud to be allied with distinguished men and to have her standing from such alliance.

Before I proceed to a word upon the subject which is mentioned upon the programme, I appeal to this audience to join with me in this sentiment. We all know that in classic days, when an oration had caused the heart to throb, the mind to lighten, and the soul to quicken, a laurel wreath was given the great orator. But these are present days; and this is America. I say, let us give to this orator who has just spoken to us, and who is himself such a magnificent type of what we would all aspire to be in American citizenship—an "American Beauty." (Applause.)

I will confide to you that Judge Goode and I have always this sentimental exchange when we speak together in public.

And now it is but a transition from flowers to trees, and I am going to ask the President, the officers, and this audience to exercise the highest attribute of humanity, that is, the exercise of faith—the substance of things hoped for but not seen. For although we are about to plant the tree, we have literally no tree to plant. I find that absolute candor, in falling immediately upon the mercies of my fellow men and women, is always the best way to gain their sympathies. Mrs. Sarah Bowman Van Ness, whose generous and patriotic mind first conceived the idea of sending to Mount Vernon from the blood-baked fields of Lexington a tree, not only in remembrance of that great day in 1775, but typical as it were of the elm under which Washington stood in Massachusetts, raising his sword at the beginning of that marvelous career which ends here, now so peaceful, so serenely resting, ever lulled to sleep by the soft and silvery lapping of his own beloved Potomac—that woman, living in Massachusetts, desired to send that elm here that it might convey to the South the knowledge that, as in those Revolutionary days, the North and the South are as one. (Applause.) But a bereavement in her family, and consequent illness, has prevented the tree reaching us to-day. We have but just learned this fact. The site is laid for it, and when we receive the permission of the trustees it is to be planted on the right there of the tomb (indicating), ever to grow in verdant sweetness. In her name, I present that tree to-day; and I ask you: Do you not, as in a vision, see that sapling elm, yes, and a thousand others, stretching forth into a great forest of trees; the memories of the magnificent period of that tree perpetuates; that early morning in Lexington where the hoofs of Paul Revere's horse shook out echoes which have never died away, when, marching back to Massachusetts, this country's destinies were assured? Growing on that Common there in Lexington, in those stone-strewn fields lay the incipient seed of this little sapling elm which will some day rear its majestic head here; that elm whose blood—the sap within its veins—brings down all the Puritanic blood to melt immerged in that of the Cavalier; and the Cavalier stretches his great arms out to the Puritan maiden—as cavaliers have a way of doing—bringing them together and embracing in this country the best blood of both sections, and bringing them as a tribute here to this tomb. (Applause.)

I have often felt that Providence meant that Washington should have no corporeal sons and daughters; that he meant him to be a father to every son and daughter of the American Revolution. And we come here together praying for that precious and parental blessing at this time, saying to him: "Our revered and common father, we plant a tree, a tiny sapling, to grow up great and noble, a type of the purest manhood." For the tree has ever been the blessed type of the uplifting of humanity; and from it we learn that suffering must precede the entrance into paradise; all the suffering of those weary days of battle, succeeded now by that divine rest he lives in. We see here opening before us great vistas in the forest of our country; the trees spreading from confine to confine, even as the Sons of the American Revolution live and breathe and revitalize this land in which is represented every State—from Otis of Massachuetts to Oglethorpe of Georgia; from Clinton of New York to Warfield of Maryland; and all these great men in the States of Ohio, Michigan, the great Northwest, and the West, come here, all of us bound together by the hallowing power of Washington's name.

I say that you men are the forests which protect the streams of patriotism; through whose great leaves shine down the stars which inspire to everlasting endeavor. You are the purest trees, upreared in great and noble majesty to protect your country from devastation; and there is the highest meed which can come to any man, and much more come to any tree, when that tree bursts into the most beautiful blossom that the human race has ever seen—the blossom of the flag. (Applause.) For it must be a tree with living sap within it that is taken from the earth and rears aloft the flag which it is said comes from the Washington coat of arms—although it came from the blood of his heart—and as it rises there, no orchid so rare; no blossom so rare in all the world, with its rich crimson of the rose, its pure white of the lily, its lasting blue of the forget-me-not, are gardens of flowers upreared on the tomb of our immortal Washington, borne aloft on the springing tree, which means the everlasting vitality and life of that country over which the flag ever floats its protecting folds. (Applause.)

Three cheers were given for Mrs. Donald McLean.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The New York Society of the S. A. R. do not propose that the District of Columbia shall have all the glory. I have here an American beauty for an American beauty (presents a bouquet of American Beauty roses to Mrs. Donald McLean); these are from the sons of the bravest to the most eloquent of the daughters.

(End of Thursday afternoon's proceedings.)

THURSDAY EVENING SESSION.

REPORT OF THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE ON REVOLUTIONARY MONUMENTS.

Read by Assistant Secretary Fisher.

SECRETARY-GENERAL NATIONAL SOCIETY S. A. R.

COMPATRIOT: Referring to your esteemed favor of April 17th, I would say in reply that the Committee on Revolutionary Monuments have made no progress and have held no meetings or conferences since the last annual meeting of the National Congress, because the one object which the committee had in view was the building of a national monument in the City of Washington, something after the plan outlined in my report to Congress last year.

A special committee was appointed to take that matter in charge, and I suppose will present a well matured plan for the erection of a national monument to commemorate the heroic deeds of the men of '76. I think all of our efforts should be concentrated upon building this one memorial, and we should leave all the other matters of this kind until we have prevailed upon the Congress of the United States to appropriate a sufficient fund to build a magnificent monument, that may be classed among the greatest memorials built on this earth.

Our committee would be very glad to co-operate with the special committee, but have not as yet had a conference with them.

In view of the facts as set forth above, I do not see any field of operation for this committee. Respectfully submitted,

E. S. GREELEY,

Chairman Committee on Revolutionary Monuments.

Col. Griffith: I have been for many years a member of that committee, but I have never been invited to attend one of its meetings; and with all due respect to my dear friend General Greeley I do not approve of the idea of the erection of that Memorial Hall in Washington City. Why? Our Society has laid down in its constitution its objects and the work that we are to do. Among those is that of commemorating the deeds of the heroes of the Revolutionary War, the great battles, and the like.

Now, I have another proposition to make to you, and I promised Judge Whitehead and a number of others that I would make this statement to you to-night, else I would not trespass upon your time. At Long Island, buried in the sands of the shore, are the bones of eleven thousand heroes who died in that hell upon earth, the British hulks in New York Harbor. That is the work that we are organized for. This National Society, compatriots, has never yet done one single act to commemorate this event. Let us do something. A committee has been in existence for years and never accomplished anything. When you know of what a little State body goes on to do, what cannot the whole body, joining hand in hand, do in commemoration of the eleven thousand and over, who represent all of the States?—prisoners from all. It is your duty; do it.

I am in favor, Mr. President, of appointing a committee from this national organization to join with the Empire State of New York, and with the Daughters of the American Revolution, to erect a monument, as we ought to do, if we remember whom we represent, to the martyrs upon Long Island, to those long suffering souls who in those hulks from day to day looked for the rising of the sun for some relief. We must not let that thing rest; let us build that tomb of the martyrs. Let us make it the work of this national organization; it represents all the States of your old thirteen colonies. There is your work. I move that a committee of thirteen be appointed to co-operate with the Empire State Society and with the D. A. R. in that State to erect at the tomb of the martyrs, over the bones of those poor souls, some memorial. God knows that in His mercy, after all their sufferings, they must rest in His Paradise somewhere. (Applause.)

Mr. Guthrie: If I could add to the remarks of our friend from Maryland it would be the proudest moment of my life. I cannot do it, but I must say a word to endorse what he has said as to the duty of this Society. It is to build a monument to the martyrs of the Revolution. We, as Sons of the American Revolution, could do nothing more glorious than to erect such a monument. I wish I could say it in the eloquent language that my friend from Maryland knows so well how to use. They are born that way in Maryland, and they cannot help themselves. They talk, but they get things done. As you will all remember, there is no Society of the S. A. R. that has done for our cause what the Maryland Society has done. (Applause.) They have put up a monument upon the battlefield at Long Island, not alone from Maryland pride, not from personal glory, but, I believe, from a pure patriotic spirit. They put up a monument some years ago that was a credit to the Maryland Society. Last October they unveiled in the City of Baltimore a monument which most of you have no doubt seen; it is a work of art and was the labor of many years of our dear old friend Col. Griffith, to whom all the honor and glory is due for the erection of that glorious monument. (Applause.) It cost a great deal of money, but that makes no difference to us now. Let us as a society back up Col. Griffith in this effort of his to build a monument to the martyrs of the Revolution in Long Island.

MR. WARREN: I wish to second the resolution of Compatriot Griffith of Maryland that a committee of thirteen be appointed to co-operate with our Society—the Empire State Society—and the D. A. R. in the erection of that monument to the martyrs of those prison ships in Long Island.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: Could not we make that new business? It seems to me that the proper action would be to order it printed, and then your motion will be in order, Col. Griffith.

COL. GRIFFITH: Has the President-General fully considered his decision before making it? This is offered as a substitute for that report, which will, of course, be printed.

MR. BUNKER: I rise to a point of order, and suggest that the first thing to do is to receive the report and order it printed. It seems to me that it would be discourteous not to do that; and while I am thoroughly and heartily in favor of the other movement, and will second it to the best of my ability, I really think that as an organization it would be better for us to let the regular order proceed. I move that that report be received and filed. Motion seconded.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: I don't think the point of order is well taken. I think that Col. Griffith's motion to substitute his motion for the report of the committee is in order; the house can do with it then what it chooses.

COL. GRIFFITH: I want it distinctly understood that under no circumstances do I wish to reflect in any way upon the gentlemen composing that Committee. Now, sir, to clear the ground, I move that the report be received and printed; but the resolution contained therein I offer as a substitute to my original motion.

MR. WARREN: In seconding the motion of Col. Griffith I was not aware of the report of the committee being present; it is perfectly right to proceed in the order suggested.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The report of the committee has been received. Col. Griffith moves that it be placed on file and printed; but that, in place of the resolution recommended by the report, a resolution be adopted that a committee of thirteen be appointed to co-operate with the Empire State Society and the Daughters of the American Revolution in their efforts to erect a monument to the martyrs of the prison ships.

MR. WARREN: I understand that Compatriot Griffith's motion was that a committee of thirteen be appointed on the ground that from the thirteen original States there were those who suffered and gave up their lives in those prison ships in Long Island. Now, as I understand that, Compatriot Griffith stands ready to amend it so that a committee be appointed from every State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: Do you accept that amendment, Col. Griffith?

COL. GRIFFITH: Yes.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The question, then, is upon the motion of Col. Griffith to place on file and print the report, and in place of the resolution contained therein to appoint a committee of one from each State Society to co-operate with the Empire State Society and the D. A. R. in building a monument to the martyrs of the prison ships.

MR. BAKER (N. H.): I think we ought first to vote on the question of receiving and printing the report; then we shall have cleared the ground for the other question to come up.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: A division of the motion is called for; do you consent to that, Col. Griffith?

COL. GRIFFITH: Yes.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: Then the motion will be considered as divided. The first question will be the printing of the report.

MR. WILLIAM DE CAINDRY: There has been pending in Congress for several sessions past a bill looking to a proper recognition of the services of the victims of the prison ships in Long Island. In consideration of that fact, I am inclined to think, on reflection, that the action proposed here should be modified from what has already been suggested. It seems to me that if the United States Government, through its Congress, has the matter under consideration, the efforts of this Society should be in the direction of securing the legislation that seems to be on foot. If we start out independently, we will be taking the wind out of the sails of Congress, and we may not get the advantage that we could secure in Congress on that subject. I have two or three copies of the different reports already submitted in regard to that matter.

MR. WARREN: If we wait for Congress to take steps in this matter we will all be in our graves before that monument is erected.

COL. GRIFFITH: The resolution says expressly that we are "to co-operate." What you refer to has been the result of the action of the D. A. R. in the Empire State. We propose to co-operate and help them. For nine years, with the endorsement of this national organization, I made petition after petition; I appealed to the Senate and to the House of Representatives of the United States for aid in building the Maryland Revolutionary monument; but not one dollar could I ever get. As our friend Mr. Warren says, you will die before you get it. Why? Because you recollect who you are; other people do not recollect the old record made by your ancestors, and that built this country. Politics are rampant with love of the present. We could get any amount of money to commemorate something that occurred eight days ago; but you are pledged to preserve and commemorate things that are long back, and you have got to do your duty. You are pledged to it; you are pledged by the blood that runs through the veins of every one of you to do this thing; and, remembering who you are, you are going to take action in this manner and secure it. It is a disgrace on every one of you here to-night that that tomb of the martyrs has not been erected long ago. How long are you going to wait; how long has it been since those poor souls fought for all the blessings that you are enjoying to-day? You are forgetting the past and all the miseries of those prison ships. Has there ever been anything done? No. Do not procrastinate any longer; but let us do it.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The question is upon the motion to receive the report and place it on file and order it printed.

Motion carried.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: Now, the question is on the other part of the motion; i. e., to appoint one from each State Society to co-operate with the Empire State Society of the D. A. R. in their efforts to secure the building of the monument.

MR. CHANDLER (New Haven): As I understand it, this resolution of Compatriot Griffith is to be a substitute of a resolution in General Greely's report. Will someone kindly read that resolution, so that we may know the nature of the resolution which is contained in that report.

(Secretary-General reads the resolution contained in General Greely's report.)

I fail to see any resolution in that report; that is the reason I called the matter up, as I really could not remember that there was any resolution there. While I am heartily in sympathy with the erecting of this monument for the heroic dead of those prison ships, it seems a little out of place to offer this as a substitute for a resolution that does not exist. The report of that committee has been received and ordered printed; and this comes up as a new matter.

(Cries of "Question!")

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: This will be considered as an independent motion. Are you ready for the question?

Motion carried unanimously.

REPORT OF THE RECRUITING AND LOOKOUT COMMITTEE.

GENERAL VINCENT: This report is in possession of one of the officers, and I cannot get at it this evening, but as these reports will be printed I move that this one be passed by its title.

Motion carried.

COMPATRIOTS: The undersigned, in behalf of your National Recruiting and Lookout Committee, has the honor to submit for your information and consideration its second annual report.

The plan looking to accessions of membership [pages 166-172, National Year Book, 1901] has led to favorable results, which will appear through the annual report of the Registrar-General. For the future our enlarged field stands for cultivation by the Empire State Society. It has been well said that the contribution by the Comptroller of New York, the Honorable James A. Roberts, to our knowledge of Revolutionary affairs cannot be overestimated. In the report of General Knox—in the past accepted as official and correct—New York State was credited with 17,781 men who served in the War of the American Revolution; but now we have, through the discovery, arrangement and classification by Comptroller Roberts, the names—all indexed—of 51,922 men, an increase of about 25,000, thus placing the Empire State second only to Massachusetts in the number of men furnished in the struggle for independence. Last September the Recruiting Committee of the Empire State Society issued a manual or hand-book to aid an increased membership of that Society, and in February, 1902, it was announced, by the Chairman of the Recruiting Committee, that the Society was "having a large accession of recruits, and of a very desirable sort."

The interest manifested by New York and Pennsylvania, also by Tennessee, Delaware, the District of Columbia and other State societies, cannot fail to produce grand results.

Reference has been made in the 1901 National Year Book of the Sons of the American Revolution to the resolution of the Congress of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, in aid of the formation of societies by the Sons. February 7, 1902, the Recording Secretary-General of the National Society of the Daughters furnished me with the following additional motion by Mrs. William Lindsay, of Kentucky:

"I move that all assistance possible be given by the Daughters of the American Revolution to the Sons of the American Revolution in forming chapters in Alabama, Georgia, Idaho, Mississippi, North Carolina, North Dakota, New Mexico, Oklahoma, South Carolina, West Virginia and Wyoming."

GEORGIA.

The chances are promising that, at an early date, a Society will be formed in Georgia conformably to Article IV., Section 2, of our National Society. To that end the necessary blanks, with other needed information, have been duly furnished.

NORTH DAKOTA.

In North Dakota a provisional organization was established some time ago, with the Hon. William A. Bentley as President. Five satisfactory applications have been received by the Registrar-General of our National Society. It is respectfully suggested to the Minnesota Society that it may be able to aid the movement in its sister State through correspondence with persons therein who are eligible to membership.

OKLAHOMA.

Through the efforts of Mr. J. B. Thoburn, Editor of the Oklahoma Farm Journal, the organization of the Oklahoma Society Sons of the American Revolution is in progress; and the necessary literature has been sent to him. The Kansas Society, through its Secretary, is extending aid to the Oklahoma people, and the energy manifested has promise of a successful result.

THE ORIENT.

The Society in the Orient of the Sons of the American Revolution effected a temporary organization January 1, 1901; and the needed blanks, accompanied by information, have been forwarded thereto. Early in February twenty-six names for membership were presented, and it is believed that from that number the necessary fifteen can be had to organize under Article IV., Section 2, of the Constitution of the National Society. The recent presence in the Philippines of our past President-General Breckinridge, and his energetic efforts there and subsequently, have given a most healthful impetus to the contemplated Society.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The revival of the organization in West Virginia stands without favorable result, and as indicated in the National Year Book, 1901, page 171.

FRANCE.

Connected with the effort to "bring to light all records which may be of use in establishing * * * the French veterans—officers and enlisted men—who aided the American cause of Independence" [page 171, National Year Book, 1901], it is gratifying to report that the lists were completed last October from the records in the respective departments of the French Army and Navy, and the documents placed in the hands of our past President-General Porter, now Ambassador to France, for transmission to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; and the belief has been expressed that the Ministry will cause them to be published in book form. Deep interest has been manifested in the result, and the Registrar of the French Society of the Sons of the American Revolution has had many letters from persons who believe they are descendants from the French defenders of the American cause. The Registrar has said: * * * "It is roughly estimated that there are ten or twelve thousand names on the marine list, and a much greater number on the army rolls."

The valuable paper this day received by the Congress, from the distinguished compatriot and Registrar of the Society in France, affords further interesting details relative to this subject. THOMAS M. VINCENT,

Chairman.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL PARKS.

By General Anderson.

SECRETARY-GENERAL NATIONAL SOCIETY, SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

COMPATRIOT: I have received but few additional reports from the State societies in relation to national parks commemorative of events in our War of Independence. The Delaware Society reports that it has placed a memorial tablet at Cooch's Bridge, and endorses the application of Pennsylvania in favor of a national park at Valley Forge.

New Hampshire recommends for that purpose the site of Fort William and Mary, near New Castle, New Hampshire.

The Empire State Society, through the Chairman of its Park Committee, now recommends Crown Point as the best place for a national memorial park which can possibly be bought.

Kansas, through its Park Committee, favors Saratoga first and Valley Forge as a second choice. It favors asking Government aid.

Wisconsin has nothing to suggest or propose.

Connecticut has the subject under advisement.

The Hawaiian Society favors society effort rather than applying for Government aid.

Illinois favors the general scheme of having Memorial Revolutionary Parks. It claims association in the Revolutionary struggle through the campaign of Clark within her borders, and through the participation in that heroic exploit of Illinois pioneers. Lastly, the Illinois committee recommends that tablets be put up on all battlefields or places which have Revolutionary associations until such time as titles can be obtained to the locations for park purposes.

Ohio adheres to its recommendation of Marietta as a proper location for a memorial park, and claims that Indian wars were continued within its borders as a sequence to the War of Independence by British influence until the War of 1812.

As a result of my correspondence (for our committee has had no meetings), I am led to believe that our State societies can best follow the example of Massachusetts, which has distinguished the sites of all battles or other notable events in our War of Independence within her borders by parks or memorial tablets or buildings. There can be no doubt of the propriety of appealing to the general Government for aid, yet there is but little prospect, in my opinion, of obtaining such aid.

It would therefore seem advisable for each State Society to depend upon its own efforts. Co-operative efforts might be secured from all the societies for securing the ownership of Valley Forge and Saratoga. As the patriotic women of the country have purchased Mt. Vernon, it would seem that our National Society might purchase the scene of the most historic self-sacrifice recorded in history.

There should be, unquestionably, a national park at Yorktown. This proposition, as I understand, has been laid before Congress by the Virginia representatives in Congress. This is probably one of ten similar propositions the House Military Committee has under consideration.

I beg leave to suggest, in conclusion, that if the question of establishing Revolutionary Memorial Parks is relegated to our State societies, they will probably take a more active interest in the subject than they do under present conditions. Very respectfully,

THOMAS M. ANDERSON.

On motion, duly seconded, the report was approved and ordered placed on file.

ASSISTANT-SECRETARY FISHER: I have a communication here which emanates from the Sons of the Revolution of the Pennsylvania Society.

HON. WALTER S. LOGAN,

President-General, Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, 27 William Street, New York.

DEAR SIR: At a meeting of the Board of Managers of this Society, held November 12, 1901, I was instructed to communicate to your Society the fact that the Pennsylvania Society of Sons of the Revolution proposes to erect within the State of Pennsylvania an equestrian statue of Major-General Anthony Wayne, having already a fund of over $6,000 for the purpose, and respectfully invites your assistance for the accomplishment of this desirable object. Respectfully,

E. A. WEAVER, Secretary.

MR. BROWN (Pa.): As representing the Pennsylvania Society, I would like to have this Congress take some action upon this subject; and yet it is perhaps one that would be rather difficult for us to take positive action upon at present. I therefore move that this communication be received and responded to, and that the matter be referred to the Executive Committee of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, to act upon and devise any means by which this Society can properly join with the Sons of the Revolution in erecting this monument to General Anthony Wayne, whom we all recognize as one of the heroes of the Revolutionary War.

MR. BLYNN (Pa.): I received a communication identical with the one just read from Mr. Weaver, of the Sons of the Revolution in Philadelphia. We have but a young and small chapter in Philadelphia, and I think it was rather a graceful act on the part of the Sons of the Revolution of Pennsylvania to address us as they did in that manner. I think it would be well, if possible, for the Sons of the American Revolution to take some action in the matter. It is simply a matter of courtesy, even if we do not arrive at any conclusion. I think, at all events, it would help us along in the State if we need any help.

MR. UNDERWOOD (Wis.): I move to amend by referring the matter to a special committee to be appointed by the President-General in place of the Executive Committee; and that they be instructed to report their conclusions to the Executive Committee of the Sons of the American Revolution.

MR. RICHARDSON: It seems to me that we are getting a multiplicity of committees. I have been very greatly interested in this discussion. We have a standing committee in this National Society on Revolutionary Monuments; we have already created another Special Committee to secure, if possible, a monument to the prison-ship martyrs on Long Island. This communication has been received from the State Society of Pennsylvania, and it seems to me that if the Pennsylvania Society is willing, it would be proper to refer the matter either to the State Society of Pennsylvania or to this standing committee of our National Society, a committee for this special purpose. Referring it to the Executive Committee of this Society would, in my opinion, take the matter out of the hands of the Standing Committee, whose business it should be to look after that. This committee is composed, or was for the current year, of a large number of distinguished members of this Society from all over the Union, and the President is Edwin S. Greely, of New Haven, Conn., and the Secretary, Hon. Ebenezer J. Hill, of Connecticut. Therefore, if a substitute is in order, I would move that this whole matter be referred to the Pennsylvania Society, to co-operate with the Standing Committee of our National Society on Revolutionary Monuments.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The proposer of the amendment accepts the amendment. The question is therefore on Mr. Richardson's amendment to refer the matter to the Standing Committee instead of the Executive Committee.

MR. BROWN (Pa.): I am perfectly willing to accept that amendment if it will carry with it some response of the Sons of the American Revolution to this communication, because it has been addressed to the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: You mean a courteous reply?

MR. BROWN (Pa.): Yes.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: We all agree that the motion is that the Secretary shall formally and courteously acknowledge receipt of the letter, and that the matter be referred to the regular standing committee of the Society on National Monuments.

JUDGE HANCOCK: I don't know exactly on what part of this motion I speak. There is a history to our relations with the National Society of the Sons of the Revolution which is probably familiar to a great many of our members. You all recollect the propositions which were made between the two societies at Cincinnati, which failed through the non-action of the Sons of the Revolution. Now, I know as a personal fact that a great part of that opposition came from the Sons of the Revolution—came from the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the Revolution in Philadelphia—who had monopolized about four-fifths of those who were qualified to go into our Society. There has been a great revolution, according to my information, and it comes from some of the prominent members of that Society; a great revolution in the sentiment of those people. We have done our duty; we have made all the overtures that could be made (a voice: "Too much"). We all regret a division of the kind that exists; that we should have two societies of the descendants of Revolutionary forefathers. We ought to be in a receptive condition of offers from them. Now, then, you make this Monument Committee, and it has no power to act; you put this in the hands of the Executive Committee, and they do have power to act, and you should give them power to act. Therefore, I am very much in favor of putting it in the hands of the Executive Committee, because they represent the whole Society. The Monument Committee can do nothing except report at the next Congress; the Executive Committee, if given authority, can act immediately; and this action should be taken in response to this generous invitation, and should be taken at once. Therefore, I would suggest that my friend Mr. Brown insist upon his original motion; that it be referred to the Executive Committee with power to act. Of course they must exercise some discretion, but they should be the power, the real power in this Society. If it goes into their hands with power to act, you may expect something from it. (Applause.)

MR. GUTHRIE: It has been said that a house divided against itself cannot stand, and the societies of Pennsylvania have often quarreled between themselves. I am sorry to differ with my esteemed friend Judge Hancock in one particular, and that is this: This is a question that does not belong to the National Society of the S. A. R.; it belongs to Pennsylvania, and we claim the right in our State of taking care of our own affairs.

ASSISTANT-SECRETARY FISHER: It seems to me that the argument in the remarks of Mr. Guthrie amounts to this: That the communication has been addressed to the National Society of the S. A. R. instead of the Pennsylvania State Society; and it is up to the National Society either to ignore the proposition or take some action. Of course, if it be thought best to refer it back to the Pennsylvania Society, this Society can do as it pleases with regard to that; but we have their communication before us as a National Society, and the proposition is to make some reply to it.

A DELEGATE: I move, as a substitute to the original resolution, that the communication be referred to the Executive Committee of the National Society without any recommendation.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: I understand that Judge Hancock objected to the acceptance of Mr. Richardson's amendment. Consequently the original motion cannot be withdrawn under objection; that is, the motion that has been made.

JUDGE HANCOCK: I second the motion which is to refer it to the Executive Committee, not the motion of Mr. Richardson to recommend it to the Standing Committee.

MR. RICHARDSON: My object in making the motion was to settle the matter readily and speedily and rightly. So far as the matter of the relations between the Sons of the American Revolution and the Sons of the Revolution referred to by Judge Hancock is concerned, I feel that that question should not come up in this discussion. It seems to me that it is no discourtesy to the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the American Revolution if we courteously acknowledge the receipt of their letter and refer it to a standing committee created by this body to consider just such questions. I think I know a little, perhaps—if you will pardon a personal allusion—of the relations between the two patriotic societies, and of the history of the movement for union of those societies. But it seems to me that that question should not arise here at all; that we should, in a courteous manner, acknowledge the receipt of this letter and refer it to the proper committee; and the thing is done. For that reason I made the motion to substitute or to amend.

MR. BROWN: I am sorry this is taking up so much time. It seems to me that it is a very simple matter. The Sons of the Revolution have sent this communication to the National Society; they have sent a similar communication to the Pennsylvania State Society, which that Society will take care of itself. They now send it to the National Society, and we take it as an act of courtesy on their part which we are to respond to in a courteous manner, as has been suggested. Furthermore, it seems to me a worthy object, for, as I understand it, they propose to put up a monument which will be a worthy memorial of General Wayne; and I think our Society should co-operate with them in their efforts to have this monument erected. Any action that we can take, either as the Pennsylvania State Society or as the National Society, I think we ought to take. The question is, what action can we take in the erection of this monument, and what does this Congress think about it? If this Congress feels like doing anything of the sort, I don't see that it makes much difference to what committee it is referred, the Committee on Monuments or the Executive Committee, except that the Executive Committee has power to act, and could, perhaps, if they thought best, set something in motion.

I understand that we are now acting upon the amendment. If the Congress thinks best to refer it to a committee that has power to act, namely, the Executive Committee, then let it go to the Execuive Committee.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The question is upon the amendment. The original motion is that the Secretary courteously acknowledge the letter and that the matter be referred to the Executive Committee. The amendment is that the Secretary acknowledge the letter and that the matter be referred to the standing committee. The question, then, is on the amendment. All in favor of the amendment signify the same by saying aye.

The amendment is lost.

The question is now upon the original motion.

MR. STOCKETT: I offer as a substitute that the communication to the national body be referred for action to the Pennsylvania Society instead of the Executive Committee of this National Society.

A DELEGATE: This being a question of policy, it should be referred to the Executive Committee, which is supposed to direct the policy of this Society. Therefore I am entirely in favor of the original motion that the matter be referred to the Executive Committee.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: The question now is upon the motion to refer the matter to the Executive Committee. The amendment is that it be referred to the Standing Committee, which amendment has been defeated.

Motion carried to adopt the original motion.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLICATION.

MR. PRESIDENT-GENERAL AND COMPATRIOTS: To facilitate matters, printed copies of the report of the National Committee on Publication have been circulated throughout the Convention Hall. The National Committee on Publication begs leave to report the National Register completed, and ask that the committee be now discharged. The publisher of the Register, Compatriot L. H. Cornish, assumes full responsibility for the work, which has the backing of your President-General and the endorsement of the Publication Committee. We herewith present the National Society with the first printed copy of the work complete, which will speak for itself better than any report which we might make. Very respectfully submitted,

HOWARD DE HAVEN ROSS,
Chairman.

COMPATRIOTS: Acting under the resolution adopted by the Pittsburg Congress, viz.: "That the Board of Managers shall proceed with the publication of a National Register, without expense to the National Society," the National Committee on Publication arranged with the Secretary of the Empire State Society, Compatriot L. H. Cornish, for the publication of the National Register. The plan of publication was followed as originally adopted by the General Board of Managers and Executive Committee at the Pittsburg Congress, viz.: "That the general arrangement of the National Register be by States, with a general index attached, and Form II. recommended, giving the members and record of ancestors together in one paragraph."

The National Committee on Publication begs leave to report the National Register now completed and ready for delivery, and ask that the committee be now discharged.

It is hereby recommended that the resolution as adopted at Boston, Mass., October 19, 1900, by the General Board of Managers and Executive Committee of the National Society, S. A. R., to "authorize and direct the Registrar-General and other officials of the National Society to print with the proceedings of our next annual Congress a complete list of names of our compatriots, and that the National Committee on Publication is given full power to extend it, with such other information as may be practicable, in concert with the several State societies without increased expense," which resolution was deferred for one year, be now postponed indefinitely, as the publication of the National Register removes the necessity of said resolution.

Very respectfully submitted,

HOWARD DE HAVEN ROSS,
Chairman.

A. HOWARD CLARK,
Secretary.

EXTRACT AND SUMMARY FROM CORRESPONDENCE NATIONAL COMMITTEE ON PUBLICATION.

May 14, 1901, President-General Logan directed the attention of the National Committee on Publication to a plan of Compatriot L. H. Cornish for the publication of the National Register. On May 17th and 28th conferences were held in New York between President-General Logan, the Chairman of the National Committee on Publication, and Compatriot L. H. Cornish. On May 30th Compatriot Cornish submitted the following proposition:

To the Chairman of the National Committee on Publication, S. A. R.

DEAR SIR AND COMPATRIOT: I will guarantee to publish, under the direction of the National Committee on Publication, a National Register for the S. A. R. to contain the names of all members of the order up to December 1, 1901, with record of ancestors, as per Form II., with general index attached. Will also insert a history of the National Society for the past ten years; also histories of the various State societies. Will thoroughly illustrate the work with half-tone engravings of the various monuments erected and historic sites preserved through the efforts of the State societies. Will produce a work accurate and satisfactory in every way to the entire membership of the order and an honor to the National Society, without the Committee assuming any obligations whatever, or without one cent of risk to the National Society, and with the backing of our President-General, Walter S. Logan. The work will be produced under the plan of the National Committee on Publication, and what has already been accomplished will be used as a nucleus from which to work. An appeal will be made to the entire membership for subscriptions to the work either through the various State societies or direct to the individual member. Will use discretion so that none of the smaller societies can take offence at their showing in the work. Am so situated that I can begin the work at once, and can have it completed and delivered before the 1st of March, 1902, provided you close the matter at once. Will arrange with Mr. A. Howard Clarke for the preparation of the MSS. in the office of the Registrar-General of the National Society. Will not in any way burden the members of the National Committee on Publication with details.

Hope to return from Mohonk Lake rested for my labors on the book.

With best regards, I am, Very truly yours,

L. H. CORNISH.

The foregoing proposition was accepted June 4, 1901, by the National Committee on Publication, and the work taken up at once. The National Register is now completed and ready for delivery.

A. HOWARD CLARK, Secretary. HOWARD DE HAVEN ROSS, Chairman.

At the conclusion of the reading of this paper a volume of the new National Register of the Society was presented to President-General Logan.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: I accept this Register on behalf of the Society with great pleasure, and it shall be deposited in the archives of the Society.

MR. BATES (Michigan): I move that the report of the Committee on Publication be filed and that the Committee be discharged.

Col. Griffith: I move to amend that motion to include a vote of thanks to the gentlemen of that committee.

President-General Logan: It is moved and seconded that the report of the committee be received, placed on file and printed, and that the committee be discharged with the thanks of this association for the splendid work that they have done.

Mr. Bates (Mich.): And that the further thanks of this Congress be extended to Mr. Cornish, who has done the entire work in the matter.

Mr. Warren (N. Y.): I think it is due to the publishers of this Register to say that the copy which has been sent to us is not yet perfect, and that when the copies are properly bound they will be in much better condition. I think Mr. Cornish will agree with that.

General Breckinridge: I am only going to suggest that others have co-operated in the preparation of this work. I think our Registrar is responsible for a part of the work.

A Delegate: This book may be very good; it may be a work of value; but do not let us begin thanking people until we have seen it.

General Breckinridge: As I understand it, without wishing to interfere with the gentleman's vote, we all have the feeling that a right good work has been accomplished; that the officers of this Society have expressed their opinion on it, and that that opinion has been submitted to this Congress for its present action. If these statements are true, there never have been more faithful officers doing more admirable work.

President-General Logan: The motion is to receive and place on file and print the report of the Publication Committee and discharge it, and that the thanks of the Society be given to the Committee, to the Registrar-General for his work in the matter, and to the publisher, Mr. L. H. Cornish.

Motion carried.

REPORT OF THE NATIONAL PRESS COMMITTEE

Read by Assistant-Secretary Fisher.

The Press Committee believe its work during the past year to have been one of value to the Society, in that, through the efforts of its members, the meetings of State and subordinate societies have generally been given desired publicity in the press, and through such publications the aims and motives of the organization have been evidenced to the general public in a favorable manner. Uniform anxiety to such end has been apparent in the actions of all of its members. This Committee has lost during the year a member dearly beloved by all who have ever had the pleasure and the honor of his acquaintance. Compatriot Lucius B. Wing, its Ohio State member, has died. He himself was the son of a Revolutionary soldier, a banker at Newark, Ohio, and a past President of the Ohio Society, S. A. R. His was a sweet disposition, such as few possess. The two generations of his father and himself covered a period of nearly 150 years.

His fondest recollections were the stories told him in his childhood by his then aged father of his Revolutionary War experiences. These he loved to repeat to those of us whom best he knew. Up to the time of his decease he was an easy but thoughtful writer, and his efforts were full of interesting historical matter.

The National Society has lost one of its purest, noblest characters, and this committee can but mourn its loss.

This committee extends its thanks to the press of the country for its cordial assistance and to the presidents of the State societies for valuable suggestions and co-operation. Respectfully submitted,

MOULTON HOUK,
Chairman Press Committee.

On motion, duly seconded and carried, the report was ordered printed and placed on file.

REPORT OF THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE ON ADVANCEMENT.

HON. JOHN GOODE, Chairman.
JOHN PAUL ERNEST, Secretary.

DR. J. W. BAYNE,	BERNARD R. GREENE,
GEN. H. V. BOYNTON,	DR. E. M. GALLAUDET,
COL. M. M. PARKER,	MR. W. V. COX,
COL. A. J. LOGAN,	GEN. T. S. PECK,
NATHAN WARREN,	COL. RALPH E. PRIME,

GEN. GEO. M. STERNBERG.

The National Committee on Advancement, Sons of the American Revolution, has sought to stimulate interest in the Society and its work throughout the country, and to bring to the attention of the people generally the beneficent purpose for which the Society was founded. Believing that the scope of its operation should not be limited exclusively to those already compatriots of the Society, or to those eligible for membership in the Society, the committee has endeavored to place the purposes and objects of the Society before the general public in such a way as to secure the endorsement and hearty co-operation of all thinking men, who recognize in the work of the Society a valuable aid in the endeavor to bring to a proper understanding of our institutions not only the thousands annually coming to our shores, but also those of our citizens who, in the rush of these days, with their changing conditions, are apt to lose sight of the principles for which our forefathers fought. And the committee is glad to report that the evidence is convincing that the people at large are taking an active interest in the work of the Society and are lending their aid in the accomplishment of its objects, thus assisting in the propagation of that healthy American sentiment so necessary to the preservation of our free institutions.

Within the Society the committee has to report the general condition of the State societies as excellent. It was with regret, however, that the committee noticed an apparent lack of interest in some of the Southern societies, and efforts were made to revive interest in them, notably in Virginia and West Virginia, and the Committee has reason to believe that its work was not without the accomplishment of some good. Especially in the State of Virginia, that grand old Commonwealth, rich in historic memories of Revolutionary days, has the Committee endeavored to inspire additional interest in the Society, and the Chairman of this Committee, who is a citizen of that State, has made personal efforts among his people with that end in view. On the 22nd of February, 1902, he attended the annual meeting of the Society at Richmond, Va., and was much gratified at the large attendance present at the meeting and the interest displayed by the members in the exercises of that occasion, and he has reason to hope, and believes, that the interest will continue to increase until the State Society of Virginia will become, as it should be, one of the most active in the country.

While it is the duty of each State Society to increase its quota of members by the addition of those within the jurisdiction of each Society who are eligible to membership and acceptable as members, and while the most active effort in this direction should be made, yet the Committee is of the opinion, and therefore recommends, that an earnest effort should be made by each State Society to reach those who are not eligible to membership and to call to their attention the work of the Society and secure their co-operation in the same. In this way alone can the lofty purposes of the Society be fully accomplished, and by this co-operation the most lasting results may be attained.

JOHN GOODE,
Chairman.

JOHN PAUL EARNEST,
Secretary.

On motion, duly seconded and carried, the report was ordered placed on file and printed.

REPORT OF THE NATIONAL FLAG COMMITTEE.

To the Annual Congress of the National Society, Sons of the American Revolution: The undersigned, in behalf, and by direction, of your permanent Flag Committee, respectfully reports:

To keep you in mind of the history of the committee, we beg leave to recall the fact that it was appointed by direction of the Cleveland Congress of our National Society, held on April 30, 1897, by the following resolution: "Resolved, That this Society appoint a permanent committee of thirteen, who shall, on behalf of this Society, have charge of the fostering of public sentiment in favor of honoring the flag of our country, and preserving it from desecration, and of initiating and forwarding legal measures to prevent such desecration. That such committee shall join with, and invite to join with it, other patriotic societies and committees of the same, to co-operate in the aforesaid objects and ends. That such committee has the power to fill all vacancies, to fix its own quorum, and to make its own rules, and that such committee shall be known as the Flag Committee of this Society." And pursuant to that resolution the committee was constituted as follows: Col. Ralph Earl Prime, Yonkers, N. Y.; Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Nahant, Mass.; Hon. Ebenezer J. Hill, M. C., Norwalk, Conn.; General J. C. Breckinridge, U. S. A., Washington, D. C.; Gen. Thomas Wilson, U. S. A., New York City; Col. Lewis Cheesman Hopkins, New York City; Gen. Horatio C. King, New York City; Edward Hagaman Hall, New York City; Walter Seth Logan, New York City; Hon. John Whitehead, Morristown, N. J.; Gen. George H. Shields, St. Louis, Mo.; James H. Hoyt, Cleveland, O., and Rt. Rev. Charles Edward Cheney, Chicago, Ill.

A good Providence has preserved the lives of all of this committee but one. With the year just passed, Gen. Thomas Wilson, U. S. A., retired, died. He was a most active, enthusiastic and devoted lover of the flag, a patriotic citizen and a lovely character. No one knew him but to love him. After a long illness he was taken from us, and will always be regretted. His loss was a deep grief to all of us. We cannot afford to lose many such men.

It will be noticed that the committee was so constituted as to secure at New York and its vicinity eight members of the committee. This was in order that a quorum of the committee might easily be obtained. General Wilson was one of those appointed from New York City. His vacancy has not yet been filled, but will in due time be filled, in pursuance of the terms of the resolution, which authorizes the committee to fill its own vacancies, and necessarily his place must be taken by some patriotic, earnest and equally prominent Son of the American Revolution, residing in or near New York City.

The other members of the committee, it will be observed, are men of national reputation—Senators, members of Congress, general officers in the army, or formerly in the army, etc, etc.—and extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Your committee, though it has not met often, has not failed to meet and discharge the duties laid upon it.

At a meeting of the committee in June, 1897, in pursuance of almost the very letter of your instructions, we took the initial steps by which was consequently consummated the formation of the American Flag Association, which is a union of the Flag Committees of all the patriotic societies in the country, and to the number of about sixty flag committees. It is not necessary here to state the names of all of these societies having flag committees composing the association. It is enough to say that they are from Societies of the Sons of the American Revolution, Daughters of the American Revolution, Sons of the Revolution, Daughters of the Revolution, Societies of the Colonial Wars, Societies of the Founders and Patriots of America, Societies of the War of 1812, Grand Army Posts of the Grand Army of the Republic, Commanderies of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion and other patriotic societies.

Thus it will be seen that in the American Flag Association the efforts of sixty odd Flag Committees are united and consolidated.

At the time of making our last report, by the efforts of the different flag committees united in the American Flag Association, legislation had been obtained from nineteen States and territories, all in the line of defending the flag of our country from desecration, and during the sessions of the leigslatures, now about all adjourned, we have succeeded in adding three States, making twenty-two in all, namely: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, Iowa, Colorado, Arizona, California, Oregon and Washington, the three added during the present year being the States of Rhode Island, Maryland and Ohio.

It is no easy matter, at great distances, to see that work is done at the proper time in order to obtain State legislation, and we earnestly request the delegates to your Congress from States not named above to use, at the next occurring of their legislatures, their utmost endeavors to bring their own States and Congressmen into line, and increase the column of States having obtained flag legislation.

Several bills are also before the National Congress, and a most satisfactory hearing was had before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs concerning this legislation, at which the chairman of your committee, as also President of the American Flag Association, with other members of other flag committees, attended and were most courteously and kindly heard, and most pleasant assurances of action given, and we are yet hoping that before the present session of Congress adjourns we shall have a federal law upon the subject.

Those who aid us in this matter ought loyally to adopt and use in their States the form of legislative act approved by the American Flag Association. Let no one call it drastic, for it is not drastic, but is comprehensive. It reaches not only the desecrating uses to which the flag itself is put, but reaches the use of the flag as a means of advertisement in any form, by pictures or by printing or otherwise.

Let us hope that the day is not far distant when the flag of our country will be protected from desecrating uses in all the States of the Union. Let us also hope that the process of patriotic education going on in the public schools will bring up, to take our places, a more patriotic generation, who will not be so filled with the spirit of commercialism of this age as to forget the reverence due to the symbol of our country and all that is good for which it stands.

We are at times met with obstacles that surprise and humiliate, and make us wonder of what stuff some men are made; that in the commercialism of this day that spirit should get hold of citizens of our great country and obscure and crush and strangle all that is virtuous and good and patriotic and loyal, and should bring into defeat in our legislative halls our brethren and compatriots who never succumbed to defeat in the battles of our country.

For four years we have asked at the hands of the Legislature of New Jersey a flag law which would place that State in the noble column of the States already named, and for four years we have met there with defeat. Commercialism has beaten us, and men who love the dollar more than the land that gave them birth and sustains them, and gives them the right of citizenship, have succeeded in sustaining their low-born desire to prostitute our flag to advertising, and are yet in the ascendant. Four years the lower house has passed the law we ask, and for four years the bill has each year been consigned by a Senate Committee to the pigeon hole or the waste basket. This year the efforts of our compatriot, now the Governor of that State, of compatriots of the New Jersey Society, and of companions of the Loyal Legion and veterans of the Grand Army have all been ineffectual. Does New Jersey want to materialize the old and ought-to-be-obsolete slander that New Jersey is no part of the United States? But we will never give it up, and we shall continue to besiege the halls of the Legislature of New Jersey until she joins the column.

In Virginia we have for a second time failed in securing what we desire. The Secretary of the Virginia Society, Sons of the American Revolution, with prominent men who served their country in the Spanish-American War, and among them men who also followed the Confederate flag in the Civil War, took interest in this matter and sought from the Virginia Legislature what we asked; but alas! a political race question occupied so much attention that the flag had no potency or power to make itself felt. Let it be put upon the hearts and consciences of our Virginia compatriots to take this matter in hand at its next Legislature, and demonstrate for Virginia, the mother of Presidents, that the flag honored, yes, created, by Washington, her greatest citizen, the father of our country, shall be recognized and honored there as he honored it, and that, too, by a statute which shall defend it from desecration.

Kentucky, too, was too busy in other matters to give us attention.

Many of our legislatures are bi-annual. Next year the largest number of such will be in session. Will not all our compatriots residing in such States constitute themselves committees and take charge of these matters, and with all the zeal, energy and patriotism which should possess every one of our compatriots, join hands and hearts and efforts, and secure flag legislation, and each see to it that his own State joins the column.

We earnestly recommend that every State Society in which no flag committee has yet been appointed adopt a resolution in the language of the resolution appointing this committee, and recited earlier in this report, and thus appoint a flag committee, and direct that flag committee to associate itself with the American Flag Association.

We desire to thank the Sons of the American Revolution residing in Rhode Island, Ohio and Maryland for their valuable aid in the work of the committee, and especially we record our thanks to Hon. Edwin Warfield, President of the Maryland Society, Sons of the American Revolution, for his most valuable and effectual aid, generosity and sympathy given, and which has resulted in our obtaining the coveted legislature in that State. We must not omit our thanks to Mrs. Chas. W. Lippett, State Regent in Rhode Island of the D. A. R., for aid, without which we should have failed in that State.

It will not do to close this report without calling your attention to the increasing interest in celebrating Flag Day, the 14th day of June. This day has come to be regarded in some respects as a national holiday. In some States school exercises are required toward its celebration. In many of the States it is celebrated in schools by local regulations of school officers. We earnestly exhort our citizens to join in making the celebration of Flag Day this year a great event. Let us see that the Stars and Stripes, with all that they mean, shall on June 14, 1902, greet the rising and setting of the sun from every church edifice and public school, and also from every private and public building in the land. Let there also be in all our schools commemorative exercises telling the story of the flag, and the country, and the glory of the country, of which it is the symbol, that young hearts may begin to swell with that pride and patriotic sentiment without which they cannot be good citizens, nor true and loyal men.

In behalf of the committee,

RALPH E. PRIME,
Chairman.

On motion, duly seconded and carried, the report was ordered placed on file and printed.

Adjourned to Friday morning, May 2, at 10 o'clock.

FRIDAY MORNING SESSION.

CHAPLAIN-GENERAL WARFIELD: Opening prayer.

Almighty God, who does according to Thy pleasure in the midst of the inhabitants of the earth, we rejoice that we have been permitted to gather here and to behold these beautiful scenes that witness to what Thou hast wrought for this our great nation. We thank Thee that we have been permitted to visit the scenes associated with the memory of him who was the great father of his country. We rejoice in all the recollections which have reminded us that Thou, who dost hold all things in the hollow of Thy hand, without whose will not a sparrow can fall to the earth, hast superintended and permitted the growth and development of this great land of ours. We rejoice to feel that this is a great Christian commonwealth and that the names of the men who are hallowed here, the names of Washington and Lincoln, who are associated with the great heroes in the development of our country, are the names of men of reverent faith in Thee.

We pray Thy blessing upon this Congress; we pray Thy blessing upon the election of officers to represent us in the year that is to come. We pray that as we go away from this place we may carry with us inspiring memories of our meeting here; of the scenes that we have witnessed; of the actions in which we have participated. And may the spirit of our great Revolution be in the heart of every member of the Society; and may we each do something in the year to come to promote those higher interests of our land which shall continue to reflect the memory of the past. May we be faithful in all things committed to us; and may Thy manifest blessing be upon us all. We ask it in the name of Him who is our Lord and Redeemer, Jesus Christ. Amen.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FARMER RESOLUTION.

REGISTER-GENERAL CLARK: All that concerns this report has been incorporated in the report of the Registrar-General.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: New business is now in order.

GENERAL ANDERSON: When our most illustrious compatriot was stricken down by the hand of the assassin there was a universal outburst of indignation over this foul crime, and it was generally proposed to suppress anarchy by the rifle and the rope and the policeman's "billy." But since we have had time for more temperate reflection, it has occurred to all of us, no doubt, that prevention would be better than this rough-and-ready means of suppression. With this in view, compatriots, I propose to offer a resolution as an educational means to try and bring certain elements that are coming into our country in touch with American principles and in sympathy with our institutions. In other words, compatriots, it is most important that we should now make this a society of patriotic endeavor, as Christians have united in Christion endeavor. (Reads the resolution.)

WHEREAS, One of the principal objects of this Society is to inculcate the spirit of American patriotism among the people; and

WHEREAS, Many thousands of foreigners, alien in language and purpose, come to our land every year, whose education in the spirit of American institutions is of the highest importance; and

WHEREAS, Work of this nature is in full accord with the purposes of this organization; therefore,

RESOLVED, That a committee of five be appointed by the President-General at his early convenience to consider some practical means by which the foreign element and others in our country, particularly those who have formed associations which seem to be inimical to our institutions, may be informed concerning distinctively American principles in order that they may become patriotic citizens of the land of their adoption.

JUDGE HANCOCK: I second that resolution.

GENERAL ANDERSON: Any motion for administrative purposes that requires much argument is not worth having at all. But I would say this briefly: That my idea was, in framing this motion, that this element to which we refer—the Hungarian, Italian and Polish element—all those people have been liberty-loving peoples, and have had some glorious episodes in their own history; and the question is, whether we cannot make them an element of strength instead of weakness and danger to our institutions.

Briefly, I have in mind this—but of course I cannot anticipate what a committee appointed will do, except to appeal to them in some such manner: To have tracts translated into their languages and distributed among them, or to have speeches made to them in their own language, so that it will be brought home to them what American principles are; and also to teach them what their rights are; that it is not necessary in our country to resort to violence; that they can appeal to the processes of law with confidence, and can receive justice there. With these few remarks, I submit this motion to your consideration.

JUDGE HANCOCK: In seconding this motion, I think it best to go back to the original Constitution of this Society. Probably no one here knows so intimately that Constitution as does my friend Judge Whitehead, but in that Constitution one of the principles set forth—I cannot now give the exact language—is that we should educate ourselves, our descendants and our citizens of the country at large in the principles upon which the Revolution is founded. I do not believe that foreigners are the only ones who need this education; I think there are plenty of others who have come down from our ancestors who have forgotten the leading principles for which the Revolutionary War was fought. Now, then, that being so, I wish to state why I came into this institution. It was not because I cared to have my genealogy set forth; it was not because I wanted to be a member of a society of this kind for no other purpose than to meet once a year; but simply because I believed it to be, as it is stated in the Constitution of the Society, a means by which we could spread development and educate our people, some of whom have forgotten the great principles of our Government; that we might educate them into the principles of our Government and bring them to the ideal simplicity of our Constitution and of our Declaration of Independence. That is the reason why I entered this Society.

It seems to me that in some respects we have fallen behind this high ideal of our object; that we have made possibly too much use of it for the benefits of our inheritance; that possibly we have made too much use of it in a social way. Now, a society like this cannot live; I say it cannot live unless it has a definite purpose and a definite work on hand; and I have yet to see anything that equals that which General Anderson has set before you to-day. Therefore, I for one am heartily in favor of the adoption of this resolution and the appointment of the committee it suggests.

REV. RUFUS CLARK: I am very much interested in this proposition. I come from a part of the country very much dominated by the foreign element, and it has become a great question with us as to whether freedom is altogether a blessing; whether freedom has not its dangers. Mr. Bryce, in his "American Commonwealth," taking the standpoint of a foreigner, has dwelt at great length upon this American experiment. He has drawn a beautiful and graphic picture of this great country filling up rapidly with those who have been trained under foreign despotisms; a very slow progress of assimilation; a very rapid progress of physical development; things that belong to the cultivation of the soil; and the unlimited franchise granted to these foreigners. Mr. Bryce raises the question as to what principle America can rely upon, in view of the fact of an almost utter absence of tradition, of stability in the past, what principle this American republic has as a guarantee of its perpetuity.

During the past there have been those on our own soil, together with those of our foreign critics, who have raised this question. Now, those of us who are here have seen certain corrective influences; the success of Republican schools, for instance. We have seen the growing power of the newspaper and its freedom in the expansion of the English language, the solidifying influence of this one common speech. We teach others to recognize, and we recgonize, with gratification, the power of the church; but aside from that it does seem to me that there must be some organization to set forth, if possible, in some distinct way, statements touching the original principles upon which this American Republic was founded as a land of freedom; that those principles are adequate to meet not only the conditions of our own time, but also the possible conditions after this century. And from out of this Society—a society which stands for the recognition of the influence of those who gave us freedom—it seems most appropriate that we should be the ones to set forth in some formulated, definite and public way, the recognition of the fact that we have not only received this inestimable privilege of freedom, but that we have the means within our reach of perpetuating it and protecting it for the future.

There are despotisms other than the despotism of the dollar, and those despotisms which are to arise in the future are to be corrected by commending ourselves, not to those who are the heads of the departments of the nation, but to the heads of those to whom we have intrusted the government, to the lower classes, the foreigner who is naturalized here. He is the one we have to educate, and I know of no company of patriotic citizens better qualified to do this than a committee such as it is suggested to appoint here.

Now, you have the soldier, with his enlarged vision in dealing with the application of the principles of our national government to other people and to those of another hemisphere. He comes here with his fresh experience and this larger vision. You have the politician, who has to do with the affairs of State, and with industrial and social problems; and you have also the ethical feature—the priest—who looks at it from another standpoint. We have these different standpoints from which to view this great problem, beset with its innumerable difficulties, and from which each of us can take a different point of view. You have the opportunity of calling before the American people some distinct, definite principles which belong to the fundamental organization of this country, which it seems to me the time is now ripe to set forth, that are adequate for the permanency not only of the government of our land, but of these new lands which we have acquired. We believe with the poet:

The lily must fade, its petals decay,
The rose from its stalk must sever,
But the stars remain forever and ever;

and we believe therefore in the permanence of the institutions which are grounded upon this principle of freedom. (Applause.)

DELEGATE FROM HAWAII: When the Society was first founded in Hawaii I did not connect myself with it; the matter of studying the genealogy of my ancestors was not specially interesting. My father during his declining years became much interested in that subject, and said: "William, why don't you take more interest in this matter?" I said: "I am afraid, father, if I go far enough back I will come to a cross-bar stick, an upright tree, and a rope." He was very much grieved, but finally produced enough influence to induce me to join this Society, and I connected myself with it because of the principles set forth in that short clause of the proposed amendment placed before us yesterday—to inculcate patriotism, true patriotism. Had it been in order yesterday I should have felt disposed to propose that the position of that clause be changed and made more prominent.

When the General's resolution was read this morning I am sure that it struck a responsive thrill in the heart of each member, for, after all, I believe we all feel that the most important duty of this Society is the inculcation of true patriotism, spreading it abroad throughout the world, but beginning in our own country.

I would like to say, as no doubt you have probably all heard, that in Hawaii we have had a good many revolutions in the past. When the peril was imminent, when the Queen determined to overthrow what we have of a semblance of constitutional government, it took the community unprepared and unready. But spontaneously the people came together, and when the committee began its labors we looked around and found that those who are now the Sons of the American Revolution led that movement. (Applause.) We had a session in the afternoon, and in the evening we met again to consider what could be done to oppose the tyrannical endeavor of the Queen. One of our members had been sent out to ascertain what could be done in the way of armed resistance. He came in and reported to Mr. Thurston, who was our chairman, and said: "Mr. Thurston, I find we can get just sixty-eight rifles to back us up against the hundreds in the hands of the Queen and those who are backing her in this endeavor." Mr. Thurston and all who were with him said: "That is enough; now we will go ahead." (Applause.) And it proved to be enough. To-day, owing to the efforts of the S. A. R. and the assistance of patriots in this country, Hawaii is an integral part of the United States of America, for which we hank God. (Applause.)

We, perhaps more than you, feel the importance of inculcating the principles of true Americanism in Hawaii. Hawaii stands at the extreme west, the entrepot, the gate of this great country. There we must receive the great sweeping tide from the west of Oriental nations, and it lies with us first of all to teach the principles of patriotism and of true Democracy. And that, gentlemen, is something that appeals to us; and we trust that this resolution will be adopted, and that this Society will head the movement to teach true Americanism to all the nations of the earth. (Applause.)

Your Congress—the Congress of our country—when it adopted a territorial act for Hawaii, overthrew what we believed proper safeguards for the elective franchise; and the elective franchise was then given to a people who were not entirely fitted to receive it. We are now enduring the results of that, and with us it is of the utmost importance that something should be done; that an organized effort should be made to teach that people of a new country the real principles of Americanism. Slowly, but very slowly, they are learning; but I believe when that people, the Hawaiians, can rely upon and thoroughly understand what Americanism means, they will swing into line, and Hawaii will eventually prove to be a useful as well as ornamental part of this great country. I trust the resolution of General Anderson will be adopted. (Applause.)

Chaplain-General Warfield: General Anderson has requested me to say just a word in this connection, and it is with great pleasure that I do so. Our Compatriot who has just spoken to us has referred to what seems to me to be a very illuminating thought in this connection. He says that he was not anxious to trace back his genealogy lest he should come to that point in it where some one of his ancestors had suffered as a malefactor. Everything depends upon the point of view we look at it. As a minister of the Gospel I stand here to-day as the representative of one who died as a malefactor that we might have liberty, freedom from sin, and all those influences which have gone to lift up men. The sacrifice that that man made on Calvary, his willingness to bear the shame of the cross, makes us proud to bear the reproach of the Cross. Now, I have right in my immediate neighborhood a member of our Society who is proud to trace his pedigree back to a man who died upon the gallows. And why? Because it was worth while for Nathan Hale to die on the gallows. (Applause.)

This is exactly the point that is presented to us in this question. We have millions of men who have come to this country seeking liberty and freedom. We turn back the pages of our history to that day when John Winthrop, the first Governor of Massachusetts Bay, was tried before the court for having exercised the authority that was given to him with more vigor than seemed to be wise. He made on that occasion that famous little speech of his, as it is known to after generations, in which he pointed out that the liberty which they had come to America to seek was not a liberty to do wrong, but a liberty to do right; and then went on to say that there were two principles that must ever be associated: Liberty and authority; that these two principles can never be separated, and that we must be prepared to stand for these things not only at the sacrifice of our property, but, if need be, of our lives. Now, it is this principle of liberty with authority—not license but liberty—the liberty to do right, that we need to instruct our whole people in; and one of the forces which we are using today, and which I would like to see encouraged and invoked by this Society, is that of the free lecture courses in some of our cities. I have been connected with such a movement in New York and Philadelphia, and it is simply marvelous the ignorance we discover on the part of those who are about to exercise the suffrage of our own nationality. For instance, I have an examination paper which was handed in at the end of my course of six lectures on the development of the United States, in which I tried to inculcate this spirit. I had a paper handed in not long ago in answer to the question: "What was the principal cause of the French Revolution?" The answer was: "When the Pilgrims came over in the cabin of the Mayflower they got together and drew up an agreement, which they called a charter, and as soon as they landed at Plymouth Rock they immediately tried to put this into effect, which led to the distress of the British Government, and was the cause of the French Revolution." This ignorance of the essential principles of our government is what this Society should do its utmost to relieve. Education is the basis of sound administration of law, and I believe much can be done in this line. I heartily second General Anderson's resolution.

Mr. Barnard (Maryland): I regard this resolution as one of the most important that has come before this Society. Our fathers gave us the Declaration of Independence, and they then fought to perpetuate that Declaration of Independence. They are dead and gone, and they have left us their sons; the principles of American Independence are menaced, and it is up to the S. A. R.—if you will pardon me for a slang expression—to act on this thing. I move you, therefore, Mr. President, that we have a rising vote on this resolution.

MR. BRIGGS (Texas): I think five too small a committee of that kind. What we want on such a committee as that is the interest of every State in this Union, and every territory and every part of the country which is included in the glorious United States. We want on it the President of every State Society in this country. It is essential for us to have that spirit inculcated in the minds of the youth throughout this country, and to have it done as quickly as possible. I assume this committee is going to have power to act as well as to recommend, and the result, if it is spread and broadened sufficiently, will be to replace the necessity for this flag legislation. We shall not have to enforce patriotism and reverence for the flag by law. It should be from the love and the spirit of the founders of this country, and the principles which they stood for, that should make us revere this flag. I therefore move, gentlemen, as an amendment, if it is acceptable to the mover of the original motion, that the President of each State Society of this organization be included in that committee.

MR. DENNIS (R. I.): If that is to prevail this Society would resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole. It would be better for the general Society to appoint its committee of five and to recommend that the State societies appoint their committees of three, one of whom, perhaps, should be the president of each committee ex officio. Then we can get into line and work out in each State our own salvation, and report to the general committee, who have supervision of the whole. It seems to me that that would simplify the attainment of the object sought by General Anderson's resolution.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: Do you insist upon your amendment, Mr. Briggs?

MR. BRIGGS: No, sir.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: Then all in favor of the resolution will signify the same by a rising vote.

(Carried unanimously.)

NEW HAVEN, CONN., May 1.

CAPT. SAMUEL E. GROSS,
Secretary-General S. A. R., the New Willard,
Washington, D. C.

Thank Compatriots for kind words of regard and sympathy.

Mrs. Greely's condition improving; extend hearty greetings and best wishes to all. E. S. GREELY.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: I announce as the committee to be appointed under General Anderson's resolution the following gentlemen:

General Anderson, Chairman.
Governor Murphy, of New Jersey.
Judge Hancock, of Pennsylvania.
General Appleton, of Massachusetts.
Judge Beardsley, of Connecticut.

MR. GRIFFITH: I offer the report of the special committee appointed upon the death of Lieut-Commander James C. Cresap, the first Secretary-General of this Society, and move its adoption.

(Motion carried.)

Whereas: The Almighty Creator and Ruler of all things has in his wisdom seen fit to remove from our midst Compatriot Lieut.-Commander James Cephas Cresap, U. S. N., one of the organizers, April, 1889, at Fraunces' Tavern, New York City, of this National Society, and the first Secretary-General of the same; and,

Whereas: The said Compatriot, by his earnest, heartfelt, patriotic work, not only contributed largely to the great success and flourishing condition of this National organization, but has so endeared himself to all its members that his loss is learned with deep sorrow; therefore, be it resolved, 1st. That this National Congress express its sincere sympathy with his family in their irreparable loss.

2nd. That this report be entered in full in the Journal of this Congress.

3rd. That an engrossed copy of the same be signed by the President-General and the Secretary-General and sent to the family.

Respectfully submitted,

WM. RIDGELY GRIFFITH,
WILLIAM W. J. WARREN,
WILLIAM M. BUNKER.

MR. BATES (Mich.): We were all delighted to hear, the day before yesterday, the greetings from the Society in France; and it was equally gratifying to know that through the efforts of General Breckinridge, representing this Society, a society of a similar character had been organized at Manila. Now, to show the good feeling to those societies in the distant parts of the world, I desire to offer this resolution:

Resolved: That the greetings and encouragement of this Congress be cabled to the societies in the Orient and France, and that the President-General be requested to send this message.

JUDGE WHITEHEAD: I offer the following resolution, as to which I desire to say a few words. A few years ago an association of some ladies and gentlemen was formed in our State, having in view the erection of a monument on the battlefield of Princeton. A small sum of money has been raised, and has accumulated interest, which is at the command of that association. That association seemed to die, but lately it has been resuscitated under the auspices of Governor Franklin Murphy; our Legislature, at its last session, appropriating $15,000 for the purposes of this association, provided that it would raise the same amount. That amount will be raised by the association, as you may depend upon it when Franklin Murphy leads. For the $30,000 a bill has been introduced into Congress for a like sum to aid us in the building of this monument, and these resolutions which I offer to you this morning are to that end. I hope that this convention will give us a unanimous vote on this question.

Some historians insist upon it that the Battle of Princeton was the decisive battle of the Revolutionary War. In that opinion I do not concur. In my opinion, the skirmish—it can hardly be called a battle—at Trenton was the decisive battle of the war. A few days afterwards, however, the Battle of Princeton followed, and that, in connection with the Battle of Trenton, led this country on to victory from that moment. The Battle of Princeton was one of those events which, following the trail of the two battles of Trenton, led to the results which were obtained in 1782, which, rallying the dismayed people of this country, cheered their hearts and led the Congress of the United States to appoint General Washington as dictator; and from that moment the end was secure.

I ask of you a unanimous vote upon these resolutions.

Resolved: That in the judgment of this Convention, composed of delegates from the State Societies of the Sons of the American Revolution, it is eminently appropriate that the Congress of the United States should aid the people of New Jersey in their effort to commemorate the battle of Princeton by the erection of a suitable monument. That that battle where Washington imperiled his life in rallying his dismayed troops and led them from retreat to victory when that other gallant Virginian, General Mercer, was wounded to his death, so important in the results of the American Nation, deserves an enduring recognition at the hands of the representatives of the people whose freedom it so materially aided in securing.

Resolved: That this Convention respectfully urge upon the Senate and Representatives in Congress assembled the passage of the bill before the National Legislature appropriating a sum of money in aid of the enterprise now inaugurated for the building of a monument on the battlfield of Princeton, and that a committee of seven, of which the Honorable Franklin Murphy, Governor of New Jersey, shall be Chairman, be appointed to take such measures as they may deem proper to secure the passage of the bill.

Resolved: That these resolutions be properly engrossed, signed by the President-General and Secretary-General of this Convention, and sent to the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House.

GENERAL APPLETON: I would like, on a question of privilege, to make a statement. Massachusetts has been largely interested in erecting, on Dorchester Heights, where Washington won our early victory and saved our city without injury, a beautiful memorial costing upwards of $30,000, and it was dedicated on March 13th last. It is a marble building and an observatory combined, easy of access, and it preserves that height from being wrested from the city in any way. It is there marking and protecting that spot for all time. (Applause.)

MR. WARNER: A resolution was adopted last year in Pittsburg to erect a memorial to the men who were instrumental in founding this Republic. Two gentlemen from each of the States and Territorial Societies were ppointed on that committee, and I had several conferences with him, and he with others; but so far nothing definite has resulted except that he is willing to aid in this project in any way possible. As you know, the Daughters of the Revolution are seeking to establish for themselves a Continental Hall here. At my instance, Mr. Perry, representative from Maryland, introduced in Congress, at its last Session, a bill appropriating $200,000 for the establishment of this memorial in this city. This was referred to the House Committee on Libraries, and has not yet received favorable action. No meeting of our Committee has been held during the past year, owing to the remoteness of its members and because I did not think that there was any occasion for it. I suggest that this Committee be continued, or a new one appointed, as you deem proper, and that we pass this resolution again calling the attention of Congress to the matter. You have influence with your representatives that can largely stimulate and foster this enterprise. When they come to this seat of legislation at the National Capital, although they are constantly reminded of it, they pass into oblivion unless they are stimulated by the constituents who have sent them here; and I hope you will aid and develop the patriotism which already exists in the bosoms of your representatives and impress upon them the fact that although this city is studded with beautiful memorials, yet to the men who founded this Republic there is not one of definite character. I therefore move this resolution.

Resolved: That the Congress of the United States be and is again urged to provide for the erection at the National Capital of an appropriate monument to the deeds of valor and self-sacrifice of the heroes of the American Revolution.

General Breckinridge: I move that the Committee be continued.

(Motion carried unanimously.)

Mr. Warner: I desire to present the following petition:

Resolved: That the Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution urge upon the Senate and House of Repreesntatives in Congress assembled, such early and favorable action upon the bill now before that honorable body, providing for the construction of a Bridge from the National Capital to the National Cemetery at Arlington, as a memorial to American patriotism, as will provide for the laying of the corner stone of that structure during the 36th National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in October next.

On motion, duly seconded and carried, the petition was ordered placed on file.

A Delegate: I make a motion that a Committee, consisting of General Breckinridge and Mr. Noble D. Larner, be appointed to confer with our most eminent and illustrious compatriot, the President of the United States, and see if some hour can be fixed when we may pay our respects to him at the White House. If it could be done to-morrow, I think it would be very fitting—it probably could not be arranged for to-day. The President of the United States is our most illustrious compatriot; he honors this Congress by meeting with us at the Banquet to-night; and we can do little less than to pay our respects to him, as the Chief Executive of this Nation, at the White House.

Registrar-General Clark: I hardly think it is proper for the members of this Congress to invite ourselves to go to the White House, being such a large party; but rather let a Committee go; and I would suggest that the President-General appoint such a Committee. The President has kindly consented to be at our Banquet to-night, and under the circumstances we had better not go as a delegation.

Mr. De Caindry: In pursuance of the request of a Committee of our local Society here, I addressed a letter, through the proper channels, asking that the privilege and honor be conferred on us by the President of receiving this Congress at such hour as might be agreeable to him. An alternative proposition was also presented, that if it were not convenient for him to receive the Congress, he would honor us with his presence on the evening of the Banquet. I received a letter from the White House informing us that the President will meet us at the Banquet to-night. So that the matter of paying our respecs to the President has already been decided by him in favor of his coming to see us. (Applause.)

J. Noble Stockett (Md.): I desire to offer the following resolution:

Be it Resolved: That this Congress approves the efforts of the Historian-General to secure from the State Societies full and authoritative accounts of all special exercises held by such societies on the erection and unveiling of monuments or tablets, with photographs of the same, the marking of historic sites, battlefields or graves of Revolutionary soldiers, or the observance of special celebrations as to Revolutionary matters, to the end that all such information may be collected and preserved by the Historian-General to enable him to compile a monumental and tablet history of the Revolution, together with other historical matter.

And that this Congress does rquest and urge upon the historians of the different State Societies the necessity of making complete and prompt responses to the official requests of the Historian-General for all such information as the same may from time to time be acquired, and to make reports on or before April 1st preceding said annual meeting.

Adopted by the National Congress held April 30, 1902, at Washington, D. C.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

JUDGE WHITEHEAD: I move that we now proceed to the election of officers.

(Motion carried.)

MR. RICHARDSON (Ohio); I am going to make a solemn statement. I yield to no man in my admiration of that majestic gift of oratory which a higher Power has so generously poured upon every member of this Society. But there is a limit to all things; and while it may be a very unpopular motion to make, I want to move you that the nominating speeches to which we are about to listen be limited to three minutes.

(Motion carried.)

COLONEL GRIFFITH: Mr. President-General, Compatriots: Within the past three months there has been sent to each of the officers of this national organization, to each of the Presidents of the State bodies, a book, and to the Secretary of each Society an express package of the same for distribution. The book contained extracts showing the work of the Maryland Society during the last 12 years, and a compilation showing in part the great record of "The Maryland Line" in the Revolutionary War.

I have received a large number of letters from compatriots in all sections of the country that assure me the book has been read with interest, and it is not necessary to refer further to its contents. The Maryland Society has requested me to say to you today that it has waited for 13 years for such recognition of the great deeds of its heroes in the days of the Revolution as they and the noble old State has been entitled to, and, feeling that the time has come, the Society has instructed me to place in nomination one of its members for the office of President-General.

The nomination has been unsought by him and is the unanimous selection of the State Society. His high position in the business world, his well-known qualities of heart and hand, his experience as the presiding officer of the Senate of Maryland, all fit him as the executive of this national body.

Compatriots, you are on the soil from which sprang the bayonets of the Continental Army.

Compatriots, you are at the birthplace of the 400 martyrs of Long Island, in whose blood was baptized the new-born nation.

Compatriots, you are in the land of the cavaliers, from whose loins came the heroes of "Peggy Stewart Day." A deed so bold, done in broad daylight, without disguises, in the presence of the Colonial Governor and Council, that it has well been named "the first great overt act of treason done in the colonies;" "Either you go with me and set fire with your own hand to vessel and cargo or hang before your own door," and as the flames from vessel and tea arise higher and higher they flash across the skies to all nations and climes, proclaiming the emancipation of man.

Mr. President-General, I nominate his kinsman, Hon. Edwin Warfield, for President-General during the ensuing year.

JUDGE WHITEHEAD: There is a story of the early days of Kentucky which has been made classic in the literature of this Republic. One Col. Donald was hunting a coon. He treed one; the coon looked down and saw who it was and said: "Colonel, you need not fire, I will come down." I have learned long since that when Colonel Griffith takes the floor and makes a proposition at any convention of the S. A. R., we are in the same condition as the coon was; we may as well come down and surrender first as last.

But I second the nomination of Mr. Warfield, not so much because I am in that condition, but for two or three other reasons. First, because the Society of Maryland asks us to put into the Executive chair of this great Association their noble compatriot, the Honorable Edwin Warfield. That Society has been first and foremost in producing patriotic results, in the establishment of memorials of Revolutionary times, in the erection of monuments, and in the spread of the principles of true Americanism throughout their State. My second reason is this: that, though I don't care much for localities, yet the nomination comes from a locality which has never received recognition at the hands of these conventions. Maryland is a Southern State, south of Mason and Dixon's line. It is true that we have had a President-General in our honored and respected leader, General Breckinridge, but he really did not represent a Southern community. But my third and best reason is, because it is Edwin Warfield himself that is in nomination. (Applause.) Localities, in my opinion, sink to nothingness unless you can accompany with the locality the man that is fit for the place. That man is Edwin Warfield; a true American; descended of the best stock of Maryland and of the best stock of the United States; a man with a heart as broad and generous as this great Republic; a man all alive, and keenly alive, to true American principles; a man who has proved by his past conduct, and by his present position in this Congress, that he is deserving of our votes here this day for the high office of President-General of this Society. I beg of you, compatriots, to give your votes for Edwin Warfield. (Applause.)

MR. JONES (Pennsylvania): A few minutes ago, a gentleman said on this floor that we were all natural orators; but I prefer to read what I have to say in connection with this nomination.

Mr. President: The Pennsylvania delegates desire to make a statement:

We were instructed to present to this Congress the name of James Denton Hancock of Franklin, for President-General.

Pittsburg being the logical center of the Pennsylvania State Society, ..., it has seemed desirable that for the prompt transaction of business our principal officers should be taken from our immediate vicinity, and this is the only reason why Mr. Hancock is not Pennsylvania's President to-day. Mr. Hancock was in early life a Pittsburger. He removed to Franklin, where he has grown to the fullest measure of manhood. The individuality of Pittsburgers is lost in the immense interests of our city; while Franklin has not grown up to the stature of Mr. Hancock. If it were otherwise the headquarters of our Society would not be at Pittsburg.

Mr. Hancock is the personal friend and adviser of each of our members; is our representative in our National Council, where his ability and fitness is well known.

Ever since we received our instructions in February last we have been trying to persuade Mr. Hancock to permit us to present his name to you, but he has finally refused, and at his personal request he makes way for the candidacy of Hon. Edwin Warfield of Maryland, which is seconded by Pennsylvania.

Mr. Bates (Michigan): I rise to support the nomination of Mr. Edwin Warfield as President-General of this Society. It comes with a special appropriateness under the circumstances because, if the people of Michigan have a worthy descendant of the brave young patriot that led the tea party in Boston, and we come to Maryland as a friend of the ancestor of Mr. Warfield who went to the tea party of the 19th of October, 1774, and said to the Captain of the Peggy Stuart: "You must either burn your ship or you will sling from the mainyards." And it is this spirit of patriotism which is so identified in the life and character of Mr. Warfield that it appeals to us with special force; and it is with the greatest pleasure that I support his nomination.

Mr. C. W. Haskins (New York): I now move that the nominations for President-General be closed, and that the Secretary-General be instructed to cast a ballot for the Society electing Edwin Warfield as President-General for the ensuing year.

President-General Logan: Your motion is not in order at present. Are there any more nominations to be made?

Hon. Cornelius Pugsley (New York): In behalf of the Empire State Society, I have great pleasure in seconding the nomination of the Hon. Edwin Warfield of Maryland. (Applause.) New York rejoices in rallying around "Maryland, My Maryland," and especially is this so when Maryland presents the name of the Hon. Edward Warfield. To grasp his hand, to look upon his face, to know the generous impulses of the man, is to be brought into touch with one who is every inch a man, and a man which this Society may well delight to honor. The delegates from the Empire State Society will have great pleasure in casting their vote for our worthy compatriot, Hon. Edwin Warfield, of Maryland.

General Breckinridge: The President-General has exactly hit the key that I am here to strike. They say that I am not a representative of the South; but if God knows my heart, I am a representative of the patriots of America, and if the South needs a better representative than I am, I thank God and thank you that you have the opportunity to choose him to-day. A nobler man, a finer champion, has not walked in the walks of your Society than the man you are now about to select; and as you are upholding a set of institutions which are inconceivable to the Asiatic, which are the very flower of all that has gone before, among all the civilized nations of the world, which require a man of such breadth as you have heard, of such nobility as you know, I, from the Orient, come here and say: God bless you in choosing such a man; you can find no better.

Mr. Trumbull: I have no speech to make to you, gentlemen, but before this vote is taken I simply wish to say a word for the State of Connecticut; that we are heartily in sympathy with this nomination and shall take great pleasure in casting our vote for the candidate who has been proposed to you—Hon. Edwin Warfield.

Mr. Lewis (Virginia): It is not my purpose to make a speech or to pronounce a eulogy, but in one word to voice the sentiment of the Virginia Chapter of the S. A. R., as well as to carry out the behest of my own heart, in cordially seconding the nomination of Edwin Warfield, of Maryland. The States of Maryland and Virginia are, and have always been, very close together; not alone territorially, but the bonds of affection which unite those two States are very strong. I would not be understood, however, compatriots, to say that they are stronger than the bonds which unite Virginia and Massachusetts and Pennsylvania or any other of her sister States (Applause); but the Hon. Edwin Warfield is the choice of the Virginia Chapter of the S. A. R. for this high honor, because we believe that he is highly qualified for it and that he will adorn the place. (Applause.)

General Anderson: In behalf of the distant Society which I represent, so that it may have a more national appearance, I wish to second the nomination of Compatriot Warfield. I have another purpose in doing so, and I state it with great pleasure.

It is important to bring the South into line as far as we can. Of course, it is in line with us now, but we want our membership to be increased there, and I don't know anyone who can facilitate this better than the Hon. Edwin Warfield. Therefore I take great pleasure, Mr. President-General, in seconding this nomination.

GENERAL APPLETON: I trust that the motion of Compatriot Haskins will prevail at the proper time; and that is now.

MR. BUNKER: It will take a very short time for me to say what I have to say. California, which originated this order, is for Mr. Warfield.

A DELEGATE: Colorado casts her vote for Warfield.

MR. MILLER (Illinois): Illinois takes great pleasure in voting as a unit for Mr. Warfield as President-General of this Society.

A DELEGATE: Wisconsin is also a unit for Mr. Warfield.

MR. PALMER: Montana casts her ballot for Warfield.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: If there are no more speeches to be made, the motion of Compatriot Haskins is in order; that the Secretary be directed to cast one ballot for Edwin Warfield as President-General of this Societv.

(Motion carried unanimously.)

MR. BATES (Michigan): I move that a committee of three be appointed to find Mr. Warfield and escort him to this Congress.

(Motion carried.)

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: I appoint on that Committee Judge Whitehead, Judge Goode, and General Appleton.

Mr. Warfield ascends the platform accompanied by the Committee.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL LOGAN: I have the honor of introducing to you the President-General of the S. A. R., Edwin Warfield of Maryland. (Loud applause and three cheers.)

EDWIN WARFIELD: Compatriots, you have conferred upon me one of the greatest honors that can come to an American citizen. The Presidency of this Society, composed as it is of over 10,000 descendants of the men who won our freedom from British rule, should satisfy the proudest ambition.

I interpret my selection for this high position as a recognition and approval of what the Maryland Society has done to perpetuate the memory of our Revolutionary sires and of Maryland's services in the cause of liberty.

I am but the medium through which you convey to our people your appreciation of the fortitude of our patriot statesman and the valor of our soldiers who composed the "Old Maryland Line," "the bayonets of the Revolutionary Army."

We Marylanders are proud of the splendid record made by our soldiers and citizens in that great struggle for independence.

As President of the Maryland Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, on behalf of our people and personally, I thank you for this evidence of your good will and of your interest in the glorious story of our grand old Commonwealth, one of the original 13 States.

To you, my compatriots, who have so generously commended me to-day, I extend my deep gratitude. I shall ever cherish your indorsement.

To fill the chair once occupied by the brilliant Porter, the forceful Murphy, the soldiery Breckinridge and you, General Logan, places me in a trying position. You and your predecessors measured up to the fullest expectations of us all, and especially have you well met every demand and duty. By your uniform courtesy and liberality you have greatly advanced the interests of our Society and the cause of patriotism, while by your ability and zeal you have commanded our admiration.

If I shall in the performance of my duties win and deserve half the praise that you have received and merited I shall be content.

WALTER S. LOGAN: The Constitution of this Society says that the general offices shall hold office until their successors have been elected. My successor having been elected, I take great pleasure in presenting to you, Mr. President-General, the gavel of office. You have my best wishes for success in your administration; and whatever I can do to make that success even greater is at your service.

Compatriots, I thank you from my heart for the cordial and enthusiastic support which you have given me during the year I have held the office of President-General.

Three cheers were given for the retiring President-General.

JUDGE WHITEHEAD: The next business in order is the nominations for Vice-Presidents-General. I hope that I may be permitted to put in nomination a member of our Society of New Jersey. We delight to honor young men, and this gentleman whom I am about to name has proved himself to be worthy of any honor to which his own Society may invite him. He is a young man who has shown himself, during the years that he has been a member of our Society, active in the establishment of everything that can conduce to its interest and advantage. I have the honor to nominate as one of the Vice-Presidents of this Society Mr. Andrew W. Bray, of New Jersey.

JUDGE GOODE: As a delegate from the Virginia Society, I rise for the purpose of placing in nomination for the office of Vice-President-General, Mr. Noble D. Larner, of this City of Washington. (Applause.) I am one of those who believe the honors of the Society should be bestowed upon those who have borne the heat and burden of the day (Applause); who have contributed their time and their services to promote the grand objects of our patriotic organization. Mr. Larner has been identified with the D. C. Society ever since its organization; he has rendered most valuable and conspicuous services; he has represented it more than once in the National Congress. In February, 1901, he was elected its President; in February, 1902, he was re-elected. He is a man of high integrity of character; he has won the white flower of a blameless life; he enjoys to an unlimited extent the confidence and esteem of the community in which he lives. In a word, my compatriots, he measures up fully to the Jeffersonian standard of honesty, capacity and fidelity. Like myself, he has passed beyond the summit of the hill of life, and has descended into the vale. I submit to you, my compatriots, that it would be a fitting tribute to his work to crown his long and honorable career with this high distinction. (Applause.)

JUDGE. HANCOCK: I am here to nominate a gentleman from Pennsylvania to the high office of Vice-President of this Society. Many of you will remember that only a year ago you were at Pittsburg. You remember that that Society was at that time but small. Like my friend, Judge Goode, I believe that the honors should go to those who have borne the brunt of the battle. When it was proposed to ask this Congress to meet in our great Western city, I confess that I was not in favor of it. But, my friends, Col. Albert J. Logan carried it through our Society and finally came to the National Society in New York and carried it through there. The effect was—well, I don't wish to flatter my own Society as to what they did there—but the effect of his work at that time has been that the Pennsylvania Society, of which he was President, and which had but 125 members at that time, to-day has over 360 members. (Applause.) Then, we had no representation in the Eastern part of the State. In Philadelphia we now have a thriving chapter; and all through the West and center of the State this great Society is making itself felt. This man has always been generous. Last year, without my knowledge, he presented my name to this Society, and you did me the honor to elect me as Vice-President of the Society; and now I have the honor of nominating the man to whom the office really belonged at that time. I place in nomination the name of Colonel Albert J. Logan.

MR. TRUMBULL: Connecticut lacked but one thing in the days of the Revolution, and that was oratory; and our Society being hereditary, I have inherited no gift of oratory. But it gives me great pleasure on this occasion to place in nomination for one of your Vice-Presidents-General a gentleman with whom I have been associated in our Society during the fourteen years of its existence; whom I know to be active in all that the Society has done in good and patriotic work, and the Society in which it has actually achieved. I shall not, therefore, build a Chinese wall of oratory around my little State of Connecticut, nor shall I occupy even the three minutes allotted to me in a eulogy upon the gentleman whom I propose to nominate. There will be sufficient eulogy for him when his associates become acquainted with him. In the words of the poet, I can simply say:

"None know him but to love him,
None name him but to praise."

I have the pleasure of placing in nomination Morris W. Beardsley, of Bridgeport, Conn.

MR. HANDY (Del.): The Society to-day has fittingly and properly recognized in the person of the President-General-elect the services of the old Maryland Line; and wherever in the Revolutionary War the Maryland Line fixed its bayonets and charged, I believe without exception throughout the record of the Revolutionary War, where a bayonet charge is made by the old Maryland Line, marching with them step by step was a regiment of Delaware Continental troops, and in every report of the battle you will see something complimentary of the "Maryland Line and the brave Delawares," as the reports always say. (Applause.) That thing went so far that Kirkwood, with his Delawares, who marched to the South, left home with a thousand bayonets, shed blood on every battlefield, met the brunt of every fight, and came back at the close of the war with less than one hundred men of the thousand. Delaware literally gave a regiment to fight and to die almost to the last man. (Applause.) She is so small in territory—although Delaware and Texas together are larger than any other two States of the Union—Delaware by herself is so small in territory that this unexampled heroism is not known all over the country. Now, little Delaware, when the Maryland Line marches on to victory in this Society to-day in the person of the President-General, brave little Delaware should walk alongside her with a candidate for the Vice-President-General. (Applause.) We marched with your State always in the Revolutionary War; and now, sir, in the day of your triumph, we will not desert you; we want to be with you to-day. So, unanimously, the Delaware Society has instructed me to nominate Howard DeHaven Ross, of our Society, for Vice-President-General.

Delaware, that used to produce the heroes that the country doesn't know about, in modern times has produced the delicious peach, that everybody knows about. Howard DeHaven Ross is the best example of a Delaware peach that we have in this Society. He has claims on this Society; he has been for two years the Chairman of the committee which has had charge of the list of all of the members of this Society, the National Register—I was about to say Herd Book, but I knew that was not right. Our own Society has been growing in the last two years; we have increased one hundred per cent. We always prefer to talk in percentages in our State instead of actual numbers. Some of you people may have a larger number; but who has a greater percentage of increase? We have put up a beautiful monument in our State at Cooch's Bridge, largely through the patriotic efforts of Mr. Ross. We claim that at Cooch's Bridge the old and beautiful flag, the Star Spangled Banner, was first unfurled to the baptism of fire, and that the first drop of blood that an American soldier ever shed beneath that flag was shed at Cooch's Bridge in the State of Delaware. So, we have put up a monument there to commemorate that event. We are not altogether able to prove, perhaps, that that was the spot, but the monument is there. (Laughter.) And if you can prove that it was anywhere else you can come and get the monument and take it off (laughter); but until some other spot is found for the first unfurling of the flag, Cooch's Bridge is the spot, and Howard DeHaven Ross has his monument there to mark it out. You have five different places for which nominations are in order. We do not take the same attitude in regard to this position that we take in Delaware with regard to some officers. We do not intend to stand here and say that this must be Howard DeHaven Ross, or else there shall be no Vice-Presidents elected at all. By giving your vote for Mr. Ross you will help things along and you will get a young man of energy, of activity, a young man who will be a fit assistant to our magnificent new President-General. Why do I need to argue any longer? Let us make his election unanimous; that is all that Delaware asks.

Mr. Bates (Mich.): We are all very much surprised to know that Delaware has been consorting with the State of Texas; we had supposed that her affiliations were nearer home, and I want to present to you a distinguished gentleman from the great Empire State near her. Possibly some of the influence that the distinguished gentleman from Delaware has been extending to us at this time may come over into the State of New York. You have in the past sought one of her most distinguished sons as your President-General. It is very appropriate that this great State and the Society that represents it shall be also represented among your national officers. We have with us to-day such a man. He holds an honorable seat in the National House of Representatives, from one of the most respectable and influential districts in the country. He has guarded your finances in the past, and he will worthily represent you as one of your worthy Vice-Presidents-General. It gives me the greatest pleasure to nominate for this position Hon. Cornelius Pugsley.

Nomination seconded.

Mr. Snow (Ill.): We have with us from Illinois a member who has done a good deal to increase our Society. This gentleman has given us a great deal of his time and thought in building up our Society, and has been the Secretary-General for the past four years. I take pleasure in nominating for this office Captain Samuel Eberly Gross.

Mr. Henry W. Joslin: The old, old story, when anything is said about Rhode Island, is that she is the smallest State in the Union; and we are so used to that now that we don't find any fault when you say it. But little though we are, don't we come down to this Congress trying to do our part and do it worthily in the interest of this association? No other Society has greater interest in the work than the State of Rhode Island. Little though she be, her members represent those that shed their blood from Boston to the farther South. We point to our Grant, second only to Washington; to Hopkins and Hitchcock. Upon that record, which we will let be of the past, there only remains to us the patriotism that has been incorporated in our hearts. That patriotism we find burning in every heart of every single member of our association. Now, we simply come here, as I said before, to present to you a name for your consideration, and when we do that we present a man whose record will be known to you; but we regret that he is not here to-day to show for himself. We propose to present him here, and we wish to urge his election. I name to you as the representative from Rhode Island Ex-Governor Charles Warren Lippitt, a man to whatever active work he engages in gives his whole heart. You can depend upon it that little Rhode Island will send, if you elect him, a stronger support to the able President-General whom you have elected, in proportion, than any of the larger States can send. I ask your suffrages, in the name and in behalf of the State of Rhode Island, for the name of Ex-Governor Charles Warren Lippitt, as one of the Vice-Presidents-General of the National Society.

Mr. Richardson (Ohio): It may seem to you singular that Ohio has no candidate either for the Presidency or for the Vice-Presidency of this Society. As I have not been instructed, and have no inclination to make an original nomination of any one for either of these offices, I wish to throw myself upon your mercy and to second the nomination of two men who have been named. Give me double time, because I may not get another chance on this floor.

I think we should come a little to the practical side of this question. These four gentlemen, with one exception, we have named from all along the Atlantic Seaboard; and they are distinguished men, men of worth, men whom it would be an honor for this Society to place in these offices. But we have no place for thirteen Vice-Presidents-General under our Constitution. We can have but five, and looking over the names that have been placed in nomination here, I think of two; one from the little State of Rhode Island (applause), one of the finest, cleanest, most magnificent men that that little State holds, Charles Warren Lippitt; every inch a gentleman; every inch a patriot; and every inch devoted to the welfare of this Society. I wish to second the nomination of Charles Warren Lippitt.

Then, if you will bear with me, I wish to call your attention to the Prairie State of the West. Captain Samuel Eberly Gross has been placed in nomination here. He is a man who deserves well of this Society; he has given of his time and money, and given of his great influence in the West, to increase and enlarge the Society there. You, of the Eastern States, can have, from his connection with you as Secretary-General of the National Society, but a very small conception of the influence of Captain Gross beyond the Mississippi. I therefore take pleasure in seconding the nomination of Captain Samuel Eberly Gross. I hope these two men will certainly be placed upon that list of Vice-Presidents-General.

Mr. Underwood (Wis.): The State that I have the honor to represent has no son of her own that she wishes to bring forward for any position in your gift; but she looks with friendly and affectionate eyes just south of her, to the great commonwealth of Illinois, and it gives me pleasure to state, not only as the unanimous voice of my delegation, but as the voice of the Wisconsin Society, that at our last meeting, shortly before I came to this city, we had but one name to present, and that was the name of Captain Samuel Eberly Gross, as Vice-President. We know what Mr. Gross has done; we all know what he has done as Secretary-General; and the only hesitation in my own Society, in bringing forward his name, was that he had done so well in that office and so satisfactorily we fain would not let him go, and we felt it due to say to him: "Friend, come up higher." We hated to miss him from the position he has so ably filled. In connection with this nomination, I would like also to couple a motion that the thanks of the association be extended to Captain Gross for his efficient and satisfactory service as Secretary-General of this Society.

President-General Warfield: Your motion is out of order.

Mr. Underwood: Then Wisconsin simply presents his name.

Judge Hancock: I don't wish to appear before you too often, I know that one of the most fatal errors a man can make is to talk too much, but I do wish to say a few words here. Most of the Vice-Presidents, or at least some of the Vice-Presidents of the past year, have declined to be candidates this year. Among those who are most respected, a man that we would like to have fill that position perpetually, if it could be, was my friend Judge Whitehead. He is the father, not only of the New Jersey Society of the S. A. R., but he is a father in our midst. He has presented to you one of his sons, a man who has been brought up by him in his own Society; he has recommended him, and in him we are likely to have the wise counsels, likely to have the efficient work of our dear old friend, and our dear old officer in this Society, the Hon Judge Whitehead. I have pleasure, therefore, in seconding the nomination of Mr. Bray as one of the Vice-Presidents of this Society.

Mr. Chandler: I rise to second the nomination of Judge Beardsley, of Connecticut, as one of the Vice-Presidents; and in doing so I wish to say that the Connecticut delegation expected to have presented the name of Judge Hubbard L. Hotchkiss as one of the Vice-Presidents. He is our very efficient Registrar. His name was presented last year by Greeley, but he didn't land him. Since coming here, I have learned that Judge Hotchkiss expects to be in Europe more or less of the time; therefore I take great pleasure in presenting the name of Judge Beardsley, of Connecticut. We feel that he will be a credit to this Society, and we know that he will be a credit and an honor to our own Society, which you will remember stands third in point of membership; first Massachusetts, then New York, and then Connecticut. We feel he is a worthy successor of General Greeley, our Connecticut Vice-President who was on the Board two years ago. I hope the delegates of this convention will cast their votes for Judge Beardsley.

Mr. Warren (N. Y.): As a member of the Empire State Society, I desire to say that she has about thirteen hundred members. Mr. Logan is from Connecticut; I am from Connecticut myself; and it gives me great pleasure to second the nomination of Judge Morris P. Beardsley, of Bridgeport, Conn.

General Appleton: I rise to second the nomination of our present Treasurer-General, who has been put in nomination, the Hon. Cornelius Pugsley, of New York. He has served us well and faithfully in every respect; he has been honored in a district which might have been doubtful in some way by being elevated to the Congress of the United States. I think he will honor us decidedly if we make him one of our Vice-Presidents.

Mr. Walter S. Logan: New York is a very modest State; but when it has Cornelius Pugsley in it, it cannot afford to be too modest. Before we make him President of the United States, we intend to make him President-General of the S. A. R. some years hence. But you have had some unfortunate experience in electing a President-General from New York State who hadn't previously had any training in the office of Vice-President-General. When Pugsley comes to be President-General we want him to have a few years' experience as Vice-President-General, so that he may be better fitted for the position than the recent gentleman who tried to do his duty but failed. (Cries of No, No. He's all right.) New York presents the name of Cornelius A. Pugsley; not only because of his magnificent abilities; not only because of the high position which he now holds; not only because he will be an honor to the Society; but because New York likes him and loves him. I am a little embarrassed when I see the list of Vice-Presidents nominated. You have already among the nominations previously made a namesake of mine and a classmate of mine; the latter Judge Beardsley, of Connecticut. I do not ask you to neglect the namesake or the classmate, but I do ask you to elect Pugsley of New York.

Mr. Stockett: We have always elected the Vice-Presidents-General, or one of them, from the Societies which have entertained us during these conventions. It therefore gives me pleasure to second the nomination of Mr. Noble D. Larner, of Washington, D. C.

Judge Whitehead: I should do violence to my own feelings of love and affection for the Delaware Society if I were not to second the nomination of Mr. Howard DeHaven Ross. I know that young man; I have known him for several years; I know something about his work in the Society which he so honorably represents on the floor of this convention. No mistake can be made in putting him into this position of Vice-President-General. There are some gentlemen, one gentleman particularly, in this convention who have the power of taking threshed wheat and adding something new to it. It is our good firend Goode, of Virginia; but our "Handy" friend from Delaware has so ably presented the name of Mr. Ross from that magnificent State to this convention, has said so much about him, that it is almost impossible for me to find words to say what I would like to say about Mr. Ross. But I hope that he may receive a vote from this convention that will place him in the office of Vice-President.

Allow me to say another word about our New Jersey candidate. New Jersey, during the Revolution, was harassed from one end to the other; its farmers were pillaged; their crops were taken off; their matrons and maidens were outraged; and every indignity that could be put upon human nature was inflicted in that State of New Jersey. Mr. Bray had three representatives of his family in the Revolution, the grandfather, the father and the son; three men from the same family through whom he claims eligibility as a member of the New Jersey Society. Give us your vote for him, if you please.

General Anderson: Without any solicitation whatever, and with but a very slight personal acquaintance, I wish to second the nomination of a gentleman whom I have watched as a member of this Society, and with whose excellent work I am familiar. I am altogether impartial in the matter; I have not been solicited in any way to second this nomination, but I want to call your attention to the name of Compatriot Noble D. Larner, of the District of Columbia. I don't think we should forget him on this occasion.

Colonel Griffith: May I just say one word to General Anderson? We of the old people have never yet failed to elect a Vice-President-General from the place where this Congress met and from those by whom we were entertained.

Mr. Barnard (Md.): I desire to second the nomination of the other Logan—Colonel Logan—and that of our distinguished compatriot, Captain Samuel Eberly Gross. In addition to being the son of a military sire, he himself is a military man, having raised a troop of infantry in the State of Pennsylvania; and I have no doubt that if he had been here at the time of the Revolution he would have raised a similar arm. He has served us long and faithfully as Secretary-General of this distinguished body, and I think it is a fitting tribute to his generous work in the past that we make him a Vice-President General.

General Breckinridge: I fancy that all of us are conscious that the nominees for the Vice-Presidency are such men who illustrate our life and our character as well as any set of men could. I would like to follow in the steps of our constant leader, the President of the New Jersey Society, to say some words about those whose work I have seen, and know how perfect it is. I suppose it is impossible for every member of this Society to know how much has been done in the secret recesses of the Executive Chambers; but when such men as Pugsley have brought our finances into the condition that they are in now, and when such a man as Ross has done the preliminary part of the work which has been so perfectly finished by the last administration—in fact, it could not have been done at all if it had not been that President-General Logan took it up all alone and carried it through like a giant through the water—and when Mr. Gross, who has been spending money out of his own pocket year after year, and spending his time and energies in the work of this Society, and a cluster grapes like that, each one enriched with the juice of the finest labor and patriotism, let us go through this thing quickly and get the best of them, and go no further. I move that the nominations now close, and that the five men getting the highest number of votes be declared elected.

The motion was duly seconded and carried.

The following names were placed in nomination for the offices of Vice-President:

Andrew W. Bray, New Jersey.
Colonel Albert J. Logan, Pennsylvania.
Judge Morris B. Beardsley, Connecticut.
Howard DeHaven Ross, Delaware.
Honorable Cornelius A. Pugsley, New York.
Captain Samuel Eberly Gross, Illinois.
Honorable Charles Warren Lippitt, Rhode Island.
Noble D. Larner, District of Columbia.
Judge Whitehead, New Jersey.

DELEGATE FROM THE STATE OF WASHINGTON: Article V. refers to the conditions governing the election of the National Society. (Reads Article V.) I am the only delegate representing the State of Washington, and would like to inquire whether I am entitled to the full five votes or only to one vote.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL WARFIELD: I am of the opinion that you vote not by States; that no delegation is authorized to cast a full vote; that the vote is only to be taken by delegates present. If the delegations fail to fill the vacancies under the authority that they have, they can only cast the number of votes that they have present.

MR. CHANDLER: I move that five tellers be appointed.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL WARFIELD: I appoint the following gentlemen as tellers: Mr. Chandler, Mr. Handy, Mr. Barnard, Mr. Joslin, General Appleton.

The tellers were instructed to retire to count the votes.

COLONEL GRIFFITH: In the absence of the tellers who are counting the votes, I move that we proceed to the election of the Secretary-General.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL WARFIELD: The nominations for Secretary-General are now in order.

JUDGE WHITEHEAD: In 1893, at Chicago, in casting around for a Secretary-General, the office of which was then vacant, my thought went to that man who stands perhaps the first among us now, Hon. Franklin Murphy, of New Jersey, as a proper person to fill that position. I nominated him and he was elected, and you all know the manner in which he performed the duties of that position. No man ever did more for the service of any institution than did Franklin Murphy for the S. A. R. He was ever ready at any moment of time to respond to any call that might be made upon him. He was succeeded by Captain Eberly Gross. We propose to promote Captain Gross to the offce of Vice-President, and we now take the liberty of proposing the gentleman who, I think, is a worthy successor of Captain Samuel Eberly Gross and Franklin Murphy. He has been in charge of the finances of the Society for several years, being the predecessor of the gentleman who has filled that office so worthily for the last few years. He comes from the Empire State Society; he comes from first rate Revolutionary stock; he is a man whom we have tried, a man of great probity, a man of intelligence, a man of great energy and perseverance, and a man of enthusiasm, whose heart is filled to overflowing, and a man of enthusiasm, whose heart is filled to overflowing with the principles of true Americanism. (Applause.) I nominate Charles Waldo Haskins for the office of Secretary-General.

Mr. Richardson (Ohio): A few years ago, and for quite a period, occupying a very prominent position in the affairs of this State and the nation was a man who was known as the tall Sycamore of the Wabash. It gives me great pleasure to know another tall man, and to second the nomination of the tall Sycamore of the Hudson, Mr. Charles Waldo Haskins, for Secretary-General of this Society.

Walter Seth Logan: The difficulty with my New York candidates is that the other States steal them away from me. I am now here to second the nomination of Charley Haskins—for that is what we know him by in New York. Mr. Haskins has already served the National Society as one of its most hard-working officers for many years. He occupied the office of Treasurer-General when I first knew anything about this Society, and I think he kept it until a few years ago, when he gave place to Mr. Pugsley.

We, in New York, believe in Haskins. I know something about the New York Society and the work they are doing, and I know that there is no man doing better work for the Sons of the American Revolution in our State than Charles Waldo Haskins. I believe that there is no man who has done better work for the National Society, or who will do better work for it when you elect him Secretary-General, than Charles Waldo Haskins.

Captain Gross: I would like to second the nomination of Mr. Haskins most earnestly. I have held the office four years, and wanted to renounce my duties on finding a good man as successor; and this is the first time I have been ready to retire when a competent candidate offered himself. In Mr. Haskins I think we have a man who has the disposition and the talent to fill the position.

Mr. Woodman (Del.): I appear before you to-day probably as the only person attending this Congress who was a charter member; one of those who met in old Fraunce's Tavern in 1889 and organized the National Society of the S. A. R. And as I am now past the three-score-and-ten mark, probably this is the last time that I shall ever meet with you; but I tell you it does my heart good to look back and see the few—some thirteen or fourteen there—most of whom have gone; to see the growth of this Society; to see where you are to-day; why, my heart is more than full. I am proud of the fact that I was one of the charter members and had the honor of being one of the Vice-Presidents-General for Delaware for a number of years. I am heartily in favor of Mr. Haskins for Secretary-General.

Col. Chaille-Long (Paris): It gives me great pleasure to endorse the nomination of Mr. Charles Waldo Haskins. It seems to me particularly fitting that I should say that I have known him for many years, and had the privilege of inducing him to become a member of the Society in New York. I hope you will elect him.

Rev. Dr. Clarke: I move that the Secretary cast the unanimous vote of this Congress for Charles Waldo Haskins.

Motion carried and the Secretary was instructed to cast the ballot for Mr. Haskins.

President-General Warfield: I congratulate the Society and Mr. Haskins and ask Mr. Haskins to step to the platform.

Secretary-General Haskins: Mr. President-General and compatriots, I am really very much embarrassed at this ovation, and at the good things that have been said about me. I am not altogether used to them. Our President-General is perhaps not so much embarrassed, nor Mr. Logan, nor the others, who are used to it; I am not. I have been a worker in the Sons of the American Revolution, and I am glad to work for that Society; it is a labor of love. I think that when we have a motive, when we feel that we have something to work for, our work will be to the benefit of the country. I am glad that my services for the Society, modest as they have been, are commended by our electing me to this office; and I feel honored, and will do the best I can to be a worthy successor, as far as my capacity will allow me, to Governor Franklin Murphy and Captain Samuel Eberly Gross.

Governor Murphy is one of the few wise workers who set us our standard of efficiency. It is said that he who does twelve men's work has a right to make twelve men's mistakes; but men like Governor Murphy do the work and the rest of us make—well, we make an honest effort, and console ourselves with remembering that we did the best we knew how.

I am glad, not only to be a successor to Governor Murphy, but to have been also nominated by the same honorable compatriot who first named him for this office. Judge Whitehead is very properly called the dean of the S. A. R.; well does he sustain the character of an educator in patriotism.

And speaking of deans and of education in patriotism, I shall esteem it an honor, compatriots, to assist in this work you have now taken in hand of educating our naturalized citizens, and the unnaturalized foreign element, in the fundamental principles of liberty on which our Republic is built. I think that the motion which prevailed to-day to give the Society this live issue is very pertinent; it is something that I have been in favor of for years, and I am very glad to be Secretary of the Society when this is before us. I shall be glad to help every State, and every member of this Society in every State, by the hardest work I can give to it, to further this patriotic movement to inculcate patriotism in the hearts of the people of this country. Gentlemen, I shall serve you to the best of my ability; and if, at the end of the year, I can command your thanks, it is all the reward I shall ask.

Mr. Sterns (Mass.): It becomes my pleasant and cheerful duty to be called upon to nominate a gentleman for the office of Treasurer-General; one who bears a historic name; one whose name is treasured by every loyal compatriot of this organization. He comes from a State that has always been loyal to its country; he comes from a State that furnished more than 100,000 men for the battlefields and the naval history of the Revolution. He comes from the State that furnished more than 21,000 men in the War of 1812; which, however, was not a very popular war in Massachusetts. He is a man in his demeanor; he is a man that never seeks an office; the office seeks the man. It gives me great pleasure to nominate for the office of Treasurer-General Nathan Warren, of Massachusetts.

General Joseph C. Breckinridge: I second that nomination and move that the unanimous ballot of the Society be cast therefor, and the nominations be closed.

Motion carried unanimously.

President-General Warfield: Compatriots, I take pleasure in introducing to you Mr. Nathan Warren, of Massachusetts.

Treasurer-General Warren: One of the pleasantest features of this election is that it comes to me as so much of a surprise. It is very gratifying to me. I have taken from its earliest formation a great deal of interest in the Massachusetts Society. Among the greatest pleasures, I may say, has been the attendance at these Congresses, where I have noticed the affectionate friendship, the spirit of broad patriotism, which has always been prominent in our organization and through our meetings. And it is a great pleasure to be commended, as I have been by you, to follow in the footsteps of my friend, whom

I have known for many years, Mr. Pugsley. I can assure you that I shall try to keep up the honor of Massachusetts and the honor of the Society, and will see that the funds are properly turned over at the close of my administration. (Laughter.)

PRESIDENT-GENERAL WARFIELD: The next order of business is the election of Registrar-General.

MR. WALTER S. LOGAN: This is not the first time I have stood here representing the District of Columbia in asking you to elect Mr. A. Howard Clark Registrar-General. (Applause.) If I have had any popularity among the Sons of the American Revolution, I attributed it to the fact that I have continued year after year to name A. Howard Clark. I wish to continue that popularity. Mr. Clark is one of the men that were not duplicated when the world was made. The position which he fills is so much more laborious, and much more difficult, and requires so much greater genius, than the position of President-General, that really the Registrar-General ought to stand at the head of the ticket. Most any of us—like Warfield and myself—can make an acceptable President-General; but there is only one man in the United States that I know of who can make an acceptable Registrar-General; and that is A. Howard Clark. I move his nomination.

COL. GRIFFITH: I desire to second the motion, for this reason. I am representing Massachusetts now. (Laughter.) In the hands of dear old Registrar-General Clark is the genealogy and the record of every one of you throughout the United States. A more faithful officer, a more competent one we have never had since the organization of this Society. I second the motion.

MR. WARREN (N. Y.): It gives me great pleasure to second the nomination of A. Howard Clark, and I ask the Secretary to cast a ballot unanimously electing Mr. Clark as Registrar-General.

Motion carried unanimously.

REGISTRAR-GENERAL CLARK: Were I a speechmaker I might talk here for half an hour; but since I am not, I can do nothing more than to thank you most heartily and sincerely for my election to this high office—for the eleventh time. I have tried to do my duty; it has been difficult at times, but the manner in which the State officers have always supported me has relieved me very much, and I want to thank those State officers for what they have done. I want to thank the Congress for the great honor that I have received at its hands to-day.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL WARFIELD: We now come to the office of Historian-General.

Hon. Cornelius Pugsley: From the great State of Michigan and from the beautiful city of trees come to the S. A. R. men with the progressive ideas of the Middle West. It has been such men that this Congress delights to honor; and in behalf of the Empire State Society it gives me great pleasure to place in nomination a man for the office of Historian-General; a man who has endeared himself to us by those qualities that go to make the ideal man; a man who, in a report read from this platform a day or two ago, reveals the fact that we have the right man in the right place. (Applause.) With a legal mind, he grasps the essential facts that should be considered, and puts them before us eloquently and forcibly. It gives me the greatest pleasure to put in nomination for the office of Historian-General our worthy compatriot from the City of Detroit, Mr. Geo. W. Bates.

Mr. Gregory (Pa.): Pennsylvania desires unanimously to second that nomination, and I move that the Secretary cast the ballot for Mr. Bates as Historian-General for the ensuing year.

Motion carried.

Historian-General Bates: Coming from the hands of the Vice-President-General of this Society, this is the most gratifying introduction that I could receive. It is especially gratifying to know that my services in the past have met with your fullest approval. Perhaps many of you know—some of you do know—that my natural inclination is in the line of the historical, and that this office offers to me more grateful service than any other office in the hands of this Congress. In the past there has not been that systematic effort made to collect and compile and put in some accessible form the historical matter connected with the history of these societies; and it has occurred to me that this can be done by having the different State societies report to the Historian-General the matters of historic interest pertaining to the Revolution. That is the work I have laid out for myself for many years. I bespeak your kindly consideration in the progress of this work, and at the same time thank you for this high honor.

President-General Warfield: Nominations for the office of Chaplain-General are now in order.

Col. Logan: Two years ago, in New York, you honored Pennsylvania by electing for your Chaplain-General one of our compatriots. One year ago you again complimented us by continuing him in office, thereby signifying that he had been a faithful servant. I am here to-day, gentlemen, representing our present Chaplain-General, who has been called away by a telegram received a short while ago, that prevented him from being present and speaking to you now. Chaplain-General Warfield desired me to nominate for the position of Chaplain-General of the National Society Rev. Rufus W. Clark, of Michigan. (Applause.) There is nothing more for me to say, but that everybody knows and everybody loves Rufus W. Clark.

COL. GRIFFITHS: I have got to say a word on this subject. All the kindness of Judge Whitehead's remarks this morning at the nomination of the President-General, and the memory of all the past years of goodness, would make me, if the ladies were not here, hug every one of you.

The Rev. Dr. Clark has come here to meet you every year, no matter where we have met, and his dear, sweet smile, his kindness of heart, his honest grasp of the hand, have made a friend of every one of you. (Applause.) I will second that nomination, not only on account of all of his good qualities, but in order that Maryland may bestow upon each and every one of you a blessing so sincere for what you have done for us to-day. There are no words that can express what is right in my heart here.

A DELEGATE: I move that nominations be closed for the office of Chaplain-General. Seconded.

MR. SMITH (Mich.): My friends upon the delegation think it would be improper for Michigan to receive all these double honors without thanking this Congress for them. A modern poet, and a very minor poet, has put into two lines the sentiment which voices our hearts; it is humorous. He says:

"I much prefer the taffy while I live,
To all the epitaph (y) you can give."

(Laughter.)

We thank the Congress for these honors.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL WARFIELD: If there are no further nominations for the office of Chaplain-General, it has been moved and seconded that nominations be closed and that the Secretary cast the unanimous vote of this Congress for Rev. Rufus Clark as Chaplain-General.

Motion carried unanimously.

REV. RUFUS CLARK: "To my faults you are very mild; to my virtues very kind." As I look over this distinguished assembly and recall the services and the names of the men who have been elected as officers here, and have thought over their ancestry, which has been referred to, it has led me to a question as to who my ancestors were. Perhaps some of you might like to know. One member from whom I qualify, I am proud to say, came from the State of Massachusetts; another from Virginia. The former had the distinction of not being remembered very long in his day and time, but I remember him well, and knew him well; but he served his country as a pirate, and I think that if he lived to-day and under the rules of modern warfare he would be hung. He sailed under a letter of marque. He served his country as a sailor and also as a soldier. As a soldier he was one of the first American soldiers to enter Boston after its evacuation by the British, and he was a little man. He told me of the story of its being a very cold day when they went into Boston, and to enable him to keep himself warm he crawled into a baker's oven. He had some relatives by the name of Dunn, and one of the children asked of my distinguished ancestor what, if the baker started his fire during the night, would they call him? One suggested that they call him "Captain Baked Beans;" another suggested that he might be called "A Little Overdone" (Dunn). But he was a compatriot and was well known to some of the ancestors of those who are here, because he served under your ancestors and obeyed orders.

I want to say just this one word to those who have spoken here to-day: that one of the great delights of meeting men here on this floor from year to year is not only the assurance of their confidence, but is the reassuring and cheering pleasure of their friendship for us to meet hand to hand and have heart beat to heart.

The other ancestor I qualify from came from Virginia; so we meet from the North and the South, and we have bridged that line, whatever line there was, between the North and the South. And we will bridge it between the East and the West. And we will stand in history distinguished for this fact, that we represent the one organized body of the United States of a fraternal character; the one single body of this character that stands, not for the East, or for the West, or for the North, or for the South, but for a united nation. (Applause.) I thank you, Mr. Chairman, for your very kind words in introducing me.

General Anderson: I wish to propose a vote of thanks to Captain Samuel Eberly Gross for his faithful, zealous and efficient service as Secretary-General of this Society.

Motion seconded and carried.

Judge Hancock: I move that the Secretary-General be authorized to collate and publish the proceedings of this convention in a manner, according to his discretion, suitable for the purpose.

Mr. Bates: I second the motion. I desire to say that it is a very desirable way in which to publish the proceedings of our Congress for the Secretary to have the discretion to publish them as he thinks best.

JUDGE HANCOCK: I don't mean that he shall have discretion as to what is going into it; but the manner in which it shall be published.

Motion carried.

JUDGE WHITEHEAD: When it was reported to me that we were to meet in the District of Columbia this year, and that the invitation had been accepted, I was also told that the Society of the District of Columbia intended to give us the grandest entertainment this Congress ever received from the hands of any Society. I doubted very much the ability of the Society of the District of Columbia to do that. I remembered Cleveland and Detroit and other places where our kind treatment I thought could not be exceeded by any possibility. But how can I describe? What words can I use to give full meaning to the feelings of my heart when I look back upon the last three days in the City of Washington and the attention we have received at the hands of the District of Columbia Society? There is no word in the English language that I know of to give a proper adjective to the word "reception." We have been received with open hearts and open hands; we have been carried around the city in cars; we have been feted and received; and here we are to-day, the recipients of this wonderful hospitality! The only thing we can do is to tender to the District of Columbia Society our heartfelt thanks for this most magnificent reception received at their hands. (Applause.)

A DELEGATE: On behalf of the State of Massachusetts, which represents in numbers the largest Society in the association, it gives me great pleasure to second the motion offered by Judge Whitehead.

WALTER S. LOGAN: No man knows better than I do what the District of Columbia has done for us. They have labored night and day, week-days and Sundays, for the last six months to give us what we have enjoyed during the last three days. I thought that when we had the convention in New York we made a record; we got to Pittsburg, and found New York wasn't in it. We came to Washington, and find that nothing has been in it. The National Society of the S. A. R. are beggars; they cannot hold a national convention unless some generous constituent Society furnishes them the opportunity. When we were debating the question as to where we should hold the next convention, I said to them that there was a provision of the Constitution which prevented me from ever being elected again; and besides that, I could not get the votes if there were no such provision in the Constitution; and I wanted to make this Congress the grandest that had ever been held, and that I didn't know of any place in the United States where I had more friends than in the District of Columbia. So we voted to hold the Congress here. They all went to work—I was going to mention some names, but it isn't necessary for you to know the names I would mention, anyway. I simply add, therefore, to what the other members who have spoken on this motion have said my own tribute to what the members of the District of Columbia Society from Larner down have done. If I had my way about it, I would in some way get a treasury for the National Society of the S. A. R. I would send next week to the Philippines to capture a treasury, if I could not get it in any other way. I would do something to get a treasury, and then I would want to hold the National Congress in Washington every year. I haven't the effrontery to propose, as things stand now, that it shall be held here every year, for I think they need a year's rest after what they have been doing the past year. But some time within the next hundred years I hope we shall come back to Washington, when it will be a greater city than it is now; when it will be a greater Society than it is now, for the Society is growing every time we meet. But we cannot find a more devoted body of members, men who will work harder to make the entertainment a success, than the District of Columbia Society; as all the members of it have done this time.

I am not willing to rest this upon the simple resolution of the Society. I want to extend to the District of Columbia Society my personal thanks for what they have done for me. (Applause.)

Col. Logan: I rise in behalf of Pennsylvania to second the motion of Judge Whitehead in thanking the District of Columbia for the magnificent entertainment they have given us. A year ago Pennsylvania thought we were in it, but we are down here with our hats in our hands admitting that we are away back. We have had a most magnificent entertainment, and I don't believe any other State is going to be able to reach the pace the District of Columbia has set in our entertainment.

Mr. Bates: It would certainly be ungracious if we should leave out of the ceremony the one who has contributed so much, perhaps more than any one else, to the success of this conference; to the success of this Society. I know I voice the sentiment of all, that the thanks of this Congress are due to our Ex-President-General, Walter S. Logan, of our Society, for the most efficient and able manner in which he has conducted the affairs of the Society. (Applause.)

President-General Warfield: The gentleman is out of order. The motion is on the question of the courtesies extended to us in Washington.

Motion carried unanimously that a hearty vote of thanks be tendered to the Society of the District of Columbia.

HON. NOBLE D. LARNER: I only want to say, in behalf of District of Columbia, that we do not claim any extra credit for what we have done. Our delegates have travelled all over this country, to various cities, and have enjoyed the hospitality of the various societies. We have tried to see what we could do for you; we have done the best we could, and we rejoice that our efforts are approved by the Society. We are not quite through with our programme, and we trust that the wind-up will be as satisfactory. We are very glad that we have been able to gratify you in any way. (Applause.)

PRESIDENT-GENERAL WARFIELD: Mr. Bates, of Michigan, moves that the thanks of this Society be extended to our retiring President-General Logan for the able and impartial manner in which he has administered the office, and the liberality he has shown, and the work that he has done for the good of our Society.

GENERAL J. C. BRECKINRIDGE: I ask for a rising vote.

Motion carried unanimously by rising vote.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL WARFIELD (to Mr. W. S. Logan): I take great pleasure in extending to you the thanks of this Congress.

W. S. LOGAN: I want to thank you.

MR. BRIGGS (Tex.): I move that the thanks of this Congress be tendered to the Daughters of the American Revolution of the District of Columbia for the kindness and hospitality which they have extended to us.

Motion carried.

JUDGE HANCOCK: It has been my good fortune to read very carefully the Constitution and By-laws of this Society. I find in that Constitution no order or system of business. It is a thing that we very much need. The order of business can possibly be fixed up by each particular President; but a system which will enable us to transact our business rapidly, systematically and thoroughly should be in some way framed by this Society. I now move:

"That the Executive Committee be authorized and directed to frame an order and system of business to be presented to this Society at its next annual convention in the form of a by-law."

PRESIDENT-GENERAL WARFIELD: The Chair fully agrees with Judge Hancock's motion. All those in favor will please say aye.

Motion carried.

WALTER S. LOGAN: Since we last met, in fact, since a very recent time, the Society has lost by death one of its most distinguished sons, General Estey, President of the Vermont Society, who died only a short time ago. The last time I saw him—I think it was the last time you saw him—was at a meeting of our Board of Managers at New York, in October; he was with us then, heart and soul. The last thing he said to me was: "Logan, we are going to make the National Congress in the District of Columbia the grandest success we have ever had." And he set to work to do his part to carry out that resolution. He has always been a consistent, hard-working member of the Society. In his native State he was loved and honored by every one. Throughout the nation he was honored and loved by every one who knew him, and his State and the nation mourned his death when he died. I wish to introduce the following resolution:

Resolved: By the National Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution, now in session in the City of Washington, that a committee consisting of five compatriots be appointed by the Chair to prepare memorial resolutons upon the death of General Julius Jacob Estey, late President of the Vermont Society, for publication in the proceedings of this Congress, and that a certified copy of the resolution be transmitted to the family of the deceased.

Motion carried.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL WARFIELD: The Chair appoints on that committee:

W. S. Logan, of New York.
Charles S. Forbes, of Vermont.
Hon. Franklin Murphy, of New Jersey.
Jonathan Trumbull, of Connecticut.
Gen. Jos. C. Breckinridge.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL WARFIELD: The Chair declares the following gentlemen duly elected as Vice-Presidents of this Society:

Hon. Cornelius A. Pugsley	(133)
Capt. Samuel Eberly Gross	(115)
Noble D. Larner	(114)
Howard DeHaven Ross	(89)
Col. Albert J. Logan	(88)
The following also received votes:
Judge M. B. Beardsley	(87)
Charles Warner Lippitt	(52)
Judge Whitehead	(8)
Judge Goode	(2)

COL. GRIFFITH: All the work of the convention having been completed, I move that we now adjourn sine die.

Motion carried.

BANQUET NATIONAL CONGRESS SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Hon. Noble D. Larner: Compatriots—The first part of our programme for the evening we have gone through with; and to those of our visitors, compatriots from other points, as the President of the Society of the District of Columbia, I want to extend to you our sincere thanks for your attendance, and we trust that what we have tried to do for you has been to your entire satisfaction. (Applause.) I assure wou that the President of the District of Columbia Society, together with all of his colleagues, are about the proudest Sons of the American Revolution that you will find in the United States to-night. (Applause.)

I do not propose to detain you by trying to make any remarks; I have talked all I propose to talk since this convention opened, and I think you have had as much of my talk as it is necessary that you should have. I therefore take great pleasure in introducing to you a member of the Society of the District of Columbia who is to act as toastmaster of the evening, Compatriot David J. Hill, Assistant Secretary of State.

Toastmaster Hill: Mr. President-General, Mr. President of the Society of the District of Columbia, and Compatriots—Without a single word of preliminary, let me thank you for the privilege of presenting to a company so eager to greet them, the illustrious statesmen and orators who have honored this occasion with their presence. But before we pay our respects to the living, let us do an act of solemn homage to the dead. May I ask you to rise to your feet and lift your glasses in reverent silence in memory of the glorious company, the soldiers and sailors of the American Revolution.

Toast drunk standing.

Compatriots, we have received this evening the distinguished honor of the presence at our board of our Compatriot, the President of the United States. (Applause.) He has not promised to make a speech to us, and yet I feel that he may be disposed to say a few words at this moment.

Mr. President, I present to you your compatriots, delegates and guests of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. (Loud applause.)

President Roosevelt: Mr. Toastmaster, Mr. President, Compatriots (applause) and fellow Americans (applause)—It is a pleasure to take part in greeting you this evening. Societies that cultivate patriotism in the present by keeping alive the memory of what we owe to the patriotism of the past fill an indispensable function in this Republic. (Applause.) You come here to-night from every quarter, from every State of the Republic and from the islands of the sea. (Applause.) For you see, gentlemen, the Republic has put up its flag in the islands of the sea, and the flag will stay there. (Applause.)

And glad I am to meet you here to-night, you the sons of the statesmen and soldiers, the descendants of the statesmen and soldiers who fought to establish this country in 1776. (Applause.) Some of the older among you, the fathers of others, fought no less valiantly, wearing the blue or the gray, in the Civil War. (Applause.) I welcome you here; and may we now show our fealty to the great men who did the great deeds of the past, not alone by words but by deeds. May we prove ourselves true to them, not merely by paying homage to their memory, but by so shaping the policy of this great Republic as to make it evident that we are not unworthy of our sires. (Applause.) They did justice, and we will do justice. (Applause.) And they did justice as strong men, not as weaklings, and we will show ourselves strong men and not weaklings. (Applause.)

I see before me men who lived in iron times; men who did great deeds. I see here a delegate from Kentucky who served under Farragut in the great days. (Applause.) I see the descendant of a man from Connecticut who was called "Brother Jonathan." (Applause.) All around the table, all around these tables, are gathered men the names of whose ancestors stand not only for righteousness but also for strength. For both qualities, gentlemen, are essential. Righteousness finds weakness but a poor yoke-fellow; with righteousness must go strength to make that righteousness of avail. (Applause.)

And in the name of the mighty men of the past, I ask each man here to do his part in seeing that this nation remains true in deed, as well as in word, to the ideals of the past (applause); to remember that we can no more afford to show weakness than we can afford to do wrong; that where wrong has been done by any one, the wrongdoer shall be punished (applause); but that we shall not halt in any great work because some man has happened to do wrong. (Applause.)

Honor to the statesmen of the past; may the statesmen of the present strive to live up to the example that they set. Honor to the army and navy of the past (applause); and honor to those gallant Americans wearing the uniform of the American Republic who in the army and navy of the present day uphold it; who in the army and navy of the present day uphold gloriously the most glorious traditions of the past. (Applause.)

I have been down to-day to Annapolis to see the graduating class of the Naval Academy; and it would have done your heart good to see those fine, manly, upstanding young fellows that looked every man straight in the face without flinching, and to feel that the honor of the Republic is pretty safe in their hands. (Applause.)

And now another thing, Compatriots of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. We are Americans; and that means that we treat

Americanism as a matter primarily of spirit and purpose, and in the broadest sense regard every man as a good American, whatever his creed, whatever his birthplace, if he is true to the ideals of this Republic. (Applause.)

I was glad to see those young fellows to-day; I am glad to-night to meet representatives of the navy like you, Admiral Watson (applause); and of the army, like you, General Breckinridge. (Applause.) I am glad that we as Americans have cause to be proud of the Army and Navy of the United States to-day, as we had in the past.

I ask you now to join with me in drinking to the health of the men who in the past have upheld the honor of the flag, and of those who during the last three years have so valiantly upheld it at a time when we of this generation needed it. To their health! (Toast drunk standing, amidst loud and continued applause.) I thank you, fellow Americans, and I think you make it evident that you intend that the flag shall stay put. (Applause.)

TOASTMASTER HILL: Compatriots, we have had a great honor and a great pleasure, and I am sure it is in our hearts to thank the President of the United States for his presence and his words of inspiration.

The National Society of the S. A. R. has had many distinguished presidents, and it has taken several of them from the State and City of New York, and, compatriots, when a Connecticut boy goes to New York to be a man and a lawyer, the probability is that he will be a great man. If he happens to be descended from such a man as Thomas Hooker, who led his little flock to found a church in Connecticut, he will be a pious man. (Laughter.) If he have among his kinsfolk the ancestor of a Governor like Robert Treat, he will be a man well under discipline. If he be descended from the ancestors of Grant and Sherman, he will be a brave man. The pious, the well disciplined, the brave are present with us in the person of the Ex-President of the National Society, Hon. Walter Seth Logan, of New York.

HON. WALTER SETH LOGAN: The Sons of the American Revolution do well to cherish the memory of the fathers and to imbed in enduring history the record of their deeds. We are made in part of what we inherit.

But we are in much larger part the product of our own achievements. If the memory of the fathers is an incentive to us to do still nobler deeds than they did, then that memory is worth cherishing from the cradle to the grave and from generation to generation. But if we simply rely on the fame of our ancestors, and make no exertions for ourselves, then their glory becomes our shame.

The blue blood of ancestry is by no means to be despised, but it is the red blood of achievement that gives life and vigor to personal character and makes national history.

We know that the sons will be worthy of their splendid opportunities, not so much because their fathers stood in the trenches at Bunker Hill, followed Mad Anthony at Stony Point, and rushed the breastworks at Yorktown, as because we have seen that the sons themselves have never flinched when duty and danger lay in the same direction. It was red blood and not blue blood that went into the bush at Guasimas, and up the hill at San Juan. It was red blood and not blue blood that stood on the decks and behind the guns of our nation's men-of-war at Manila Bay and off Santiago Harbor. It was red blood and not blue blood that during the past five years has carried the flag twelve hundred miles farther east and seven thousand miles farther west than it ever went before. The distinguished member of the Empire State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, who is now President of the United States, won the hearts of his countrymen, not because of what his ancestors did in the Revolution, but because of what he himself has done for his country and his kind. The heart of no American is fuller of red, virile blood than the heart of Theodore Roosevelt.

Let the fact that the fathers did be only another reason why we should do. I believe in the strenuous life. It is the only life worth living. I believe in the life of continuous achievement, and when I can achieve no more may I be gathered to my fathers.

I am not one of those who think that the need of patriotism is past; that all we have to do now is simply to gather the fruits from the tree that the fathers planted. No; there are more trees to be planted in the year 1902 than there were in the year 1776. There never were so many questions fraught with untold interest to humanity that had to be settled by any generation before us as have to be settled now by us. We are right here and now up against problems of such supreme importance that all the problems of the past pale before them. Need I mention them? Go to the centres of finance, the centres of trade, the centres of industry, to the homes of the people, and you will find them staring you in the face. Go to Wall Street or Broadway, to Fifth Avenue or the East Side, to exchange, or bank, or factory; to the palace or the hovel, and you will hear the cry coming up from every side. What is to be the end of it all. With billion-dollar combinations of capital on one side and strikes of a hundred thousand workmen on the other, there can be no Rip Van Winkle sleep in our generation.

And yet, my friends, I am an optimist of the optimists. I believe the Lord made the world better than I could have made it myself if I had had the contract. I believe that the God of Hosts is with us. I believe the right solution will be found, and that we are emerging from the darkness of infancy and ignorance into the bright sunlight of maturity and knowledge.

But the reason I believe it is because I see that the men of our generation are coming to value the red blood of achievement more than the blue blood of ancestry, and because I see that the sons are worthy of the fathers—yet, beter than the fathers. The problems of our day are more troublous than the problems with which the George the Thirds afflicted our fathers, but the men who have them to settle are more capable even than the fathers were of applying a wise, vigorous and efficient remedy. Our fathers found a Washington when they needed him most. We shall find our leader when we need him most.

Perhaps he is in the White House now.

TOASTMASTER HILL: Compatriots, I had hoped that we should next have the pleasure of listening to the President-elect of the National Society. I wondered, when I looked about and saw his empty place, where he had gone, for I knew that a descendant of that Four Hundred of Maryland—red blood rather than blue blood—that saved the army of Washington on Long Island, could never turn his face away from his friends. I understand now that he simply went out for ammunition. (Laughter.) I have the honor, compatriots, to present to you the President-elect of the National Society, Hon. Edwin Warfield, of Maryland. (Applause.)

Three cheers were given for President-General Warfield.

PRESIDENT-GENERAL WARFIELD: Mr. Toastmaster and compatriots—It would be a very hard heart that would not be touched by the sweet strains of "Maryland, My Maryland." (Applause.)

I am here to-night because I am a native of Maryland. Our eloquent Toastmaster could not understand why I left this platform. (Laughter.) I didn't leave it sooner, because the Chief Executive of this great nation was here; but, when he left, the attraction at the other end of this hall was too great for me (indicating the Ladies' Gallery—Applause.) There is not a Maryland man who does not love fair women. (Applause.) It is growing late, and I do not intend to detain you; but I want to say this, that as I look into the faces of these Sons of the American Revolution I feel that no greater honor ever came to an American than to be elected the chief executive officer of your Society. (Applause.) Had it not been for your heroic ancestors, that bright, youthful, forceful, able Chief Executive would not have been here to-night to address you, but we would have had instead a Viceroy or a Governor-General. It was the patriotism, it was the valor of your sires that made this great Republic possible. (Applause.) I am proud of you; there never was assembled in Washington, not excepting the Senate of the United States, a handsomer body of men. (Applause.) You all remember that the President of the District of Columbia Society announced to-day from the platform in our convention hall that we were to be addressed by distinguished Senators and brilliant orators. I know that you are waiting to hear from them. We have them here, renowned throughout the land we have one here from that State that has furnished to this Union three great Presidents. (Applause.) We have another who comes from that grand old commonwealth that gave us Daniel Webster. (Applause.) My compatriots, you will have many opportunities of hearing me during the next year; and I do not intend to detain you longer, but will give way to these gentlemen who are now here.

TOASTMASTER HILL: Gentlemen, we have not only had the honor of the presence here of the President of the United States, but the advice and consent of the Senate have been given to these proceedings. I will not be a barrier between you and the fulfillment of your expectations longer. We have two of the noblest Romans of them all, whom we are anxiously waiting to hear. (Applause.) One of them has been made inevitable as the next speaker by the anticipatory reference of the last. He represents that great State of Ohio, which has given three great Presidents to the Republic. I have the pleasure, gentlemen, of presenting to you Senator Hanna, of Ohio. (Applause.)

HON. MARCUS A. HANNA: Mr. President, Toastmaster and Sons—This is the first time that I have had the pleasure of meeting with members of this organization. I came here to-night, not to make a speech, but to be sworn in. (Laughter.) But after hearing the creed of the organization, as announced by the President of the United States, I think I will have to stay on the probation list a little while longer. However, I am glad to meet with you; glad to have the honor of being a member in prospect of your organization after I have taken the oath. I haven't had my share of champagne, therefore I am not fit for it. (Laughter.)

It was some time before I knew whether I was eligible to membership in this organization. When I was asked to join I commenced to look back for the first time in my life over my ancestry. I found on my father's side that they were all Quakers, therefore they could not have fought in the Revolution. (Laughter.) And I began looking up the other side of the house, and after going back I found a colonel or a captain or somebody that had really fought in the Revolution. My Quaker ancestry has been a handicap to me in life, because it has made me a man of peace always (laughter and cheers); and I never felt quite certain of myself when I got among warriors, particularly the grandsons of warriors.

However, if this association will turn a little of its effort and attention to the more commonplace things of life, I think I can give you some good advice. I don't mean politics, gentlemen. (Laughter.) I mean the duties of citizenship, which are not confined to banqueting halls, nor good times generally, nor passing resolutions. There is a wide field for the class of men who belong to this organization as a nucleus from which may radiate an effort in this country under conditions which are confronting us to-day, alluded to by one of the speakers, of great affairs and of greater events; where a small number of patriots with something to do with the internal affairs of their country, by effort and by example, may make their influence felt in all strata of society, beginning at the bottom. (Applause.) It is a grand thing, a noble thing, to indulge in these patriotic meetings and patriotic efforts, especially when we consider this great cosmopolitan people, growing with such rapidity in population as almost to pour over the whole domain from the Atlantic to the Pacific; men from every nation and from every clime; used to all forms of government; respecting only that feature of government which has the power centered to control. The patriotic feeling of the American people will always permeate our country. Liberty is in her; we breathe it and we absorb it. But, for all that, there is work to do that the fruits of it may be known to all classes and all men. We have an educational work to do as American citizens; we must not be bound up selfishly in our own affairs as in normal conditions—which are prosperous conditions—in this country. We must not forget that we are guardians; that we have wards coming to us from every shore in the world, who are an especial care and responsibility. Let us, then, not only give them the benefit that comes to us from the blue and red blood of which we are so proud; but let us feel that it is our duty to devote a part of our time to the consideration of their conditions. That duty should be to lift them up, and not bear them down (applause); and the duty is magnified and multiplied in proportion as we encounter ignorance. These people must be taught liberty; must be taught that liberty is not license; but that self-government comes in the nature of things from the patriotism which fills our atmosphere. In the work of this organization I can see the opportunity to make the effort and to make names for ourselves that shall go down to posterity. (Applause.) Make it along the lines proposed by the President of the United States. Do not spare patriotism or high ideals, and do not admit that they are too high—that they may not be reached by the lowest. (Applause.)

TOASTMASTER HILL: The place of Massachusetts in the history of the Revolution is well known. That great State of our Union has always been represented in the Senate of the United States by able and distinguished men. Never in its history has it been represented by a truer patriot or by a more cultivated scholar than at the present day. We are proud and happy to have at our board to-night and to have the pleasure of listening to the Senator from Massachusetts, Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge.

HENRY CABOT LODGE: Mr. Toastmaster—Massachusetts needs no backing up. A committee hearing at ten o'clock in the morning, a meeting of the Senate at twelve, a discussion of the politics of North Carolina in connection with the Philippine bill at two o'clock, is a meagre preparation for speaking even in the briefest manner to such an assemblage as this. Yet it is the only preparation that I have had.

As I sat here to-night and listened to the speeches that have been made, it has seemed to me that the lesson of the patriotism which this Society commemorates by its existence is one that cannot be learned too often. We cannot do better, in making up our own patriotism and our own standards of duty to our country than to look back at the history of the Revolution. And out of the time in which we give all honor to the statesmen and the leaders in the various States, our thought turns most readily, when we would evoke the image of the Revolution, to the army; it turns to the great figure of Washington. (Applause.) It turns to that army which followed him over the ice at Trenton, wintered with him through the cold of Valley Forge, and, accompanied by the legions of France, marched south with him to the crowning victory at Yorktown. (Applause.) And yet they were not always successful; they had their defeats; they had their troubles. There were occasions when they even rose in mutiny because

Congress had failed to pay them. Yet we think always still of the ragged Continentals before we think of the men who didn't vote their pay. They had their critics, very severe criticism, and yet I think the opinion of posterity goes with Washington rather than with the eminent gentlemen who thought it would be well to substitute Gates in his place. They had their critics, and yet we turn to them when we call up the image of the past, rather than to the Conway cabal. Yes, they had their critics, and they demanded then something more than criticism; they demanded justice. And the justice which perhaps they did not receive at the time in such measure as they deserved—for it is not to be forgotten with how small a reward or consideration they were mustered out—the justice which failed them then, history has not failed to award. (Applause.) The justice of history is but cold comfort to the living man. When we find cause to criticise or to condemn, let us not do it until we are sure of all our facts; let us remember that as we in this great Republic would seek to do justice to all men, there are no men who so deserve the most exact justice as the soldiers who wear the uniform of the United States. (Applause.) That is all I would ask for them; that is all that the lesson of the Revolution would teach us. I do not believe that the sons are unworthy of the sires; I do not believe that the Army of the United States and the Navy of the United States are unworthy descendants of the men who followed Washington, who followed Grant, and who fought in our own day and generation against Spain. (Applause.)

I ask for them in their lifetime simple justice; and that, I think, they have earned. Give them justice. Remember all the trials, all the fatigues, all the dangers, all the perils they confront. No American can refuse it.

Gentlemen, it is easy, in these sheltered walls at home, to criticize men struggling in the tropical jungle, scattered about from one end of an archipelago to another, in little bands commanded by a sergeant or a young lieutenant. If they have done wrong, we must trust to the justice of the administration and of the War Department to condemn the guilty. But do not let that condemnation go out without sufficient proof on the heads of all that great organization known as the American Army; because it is not a Republican army, and it is not a Democratic army; it is the Army of the United States. (Applause.) They are bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh. I would not condone anything that is wrong; if they have done wrong, no man can regret it so bitterly, so passionately as I. But I plead here, as I mean to plead elsewhere, if strength is given me, that the American people listen to every condition and to all the facts. When they have heard these, then let them judge; then let them do justice to the American Army, whose banners shine with great names from Yorktown to Manila, and whose record is a glory in the annals of the Republic. (Applause.)

Three cheers were given for the old Bay State.

TOASTMASTER HILL: There is still something left for us upon your programme; but before we proceed to it, let us have a song from the quartet who are present, and who will now sing for us.

The Quartet sang "Sunshine," by Fred Schilling.

TOASTMASTER HILL: The next speaker is known to us of the Society of the District of Columbia as an officer of the United States who has rendered distinguished service to the United States in a civil position; as a patriot whose heart is always astir with the sacred memories of the past, and who has the gift of arousing in the hearts of his fellows the chords of the past and of the glories of our country. I have the pleasure of presenting to you the Hon. James T. Du Bois.

HON. JAMES T. DU BOIS: Mr. President and Compatriots—The Germans have a saying that "for the happy the hour never strikes." But when I looked at the time just now and saw how swiftly the hours have flown under the benign influence of both physical and mental pabulum, I feel like appropriating the language of Thompson, who sold a horse to Smith, representing that it was only five years old. Several days afterwards Smith met Thompson, and he said: "Thompson, the director of the Santa Fe Railroad told me just now that he saw you drive that horse into this town over fifteen years ago." Thompson looked at Smith in dismay for a moment, and then said pathetically to Smith: "My God, how time does fly!" (Applause.)

Some people are so nervously constituted that they consider every incident an accident, and every accident a calamity, and in times of war every pass from camp to camp according to the caprices of victory. The volcanoes of the American Revolution brought a great many such men as these to the surface; and some of them were like the old schoolmaster who was brought before a board of school directors for examination. When they asked him: "What is the shape of the earth?" he replied: "Well gentlemen, I will teach that it is either round or flat; anything to please the boys." (Applause.) Some of these men were so weak-kneed and timid that they resembled the knock-kneed man who was so completely knock-kneed that whenever he went out to take a walk one leg seemed to say to the other, "Please let me pass this time and I will let you pass next." (Laughter.))

To that band of spiritless men, James Smith, a singer of the Declaration of Independence, who marched the first Pennsylvania Company from New York to the East, did not belong. When disaster came with its chilly blast to General Washington, and the friends of yesterday fell thick and fast away from him, Robert Morris, the greatest financier of his day, stood steadfast by the immortal commander, with his money and his mind. (Applause.) In a moment of great emergency one of Morris's privateers arrived with ninety tons of lead. Morris promptly gave that lead to Washington in bulk, and Washington promptly gave it to Lord Cornwallis in rounded lumps, and Lord Cornwallis promptly returned the compliment by unconditional surrender. When the British Commissioner Johnson offered General Joseph Dregg $50,000 and a high civil position if he would assist in compelling a speedy submission of the Colonies to Great Britain, he spurned indignantly the bribe with these immortal words: "I am not worth purchasing; but, such as I am, the King of England is not rich enough to buy me." I say there were a great many men during the Revolutionary War so timid and weak-kneed that they didn't seem to have the courage of the old woman in the last Presidential campaign. I was riding on a trolley car, and as the car waited to let another car pass I noticed considerable excitement in the street. I stepped out on the platform to see what was going on, and saw two little boys drawn up in fighting array. One little boy said to the other: "You are nothing but a little goldbug, anyway, and I can prove it!" Then the little silverbug went down, and the little goldbug went down heavily upon him. Suddenly the mother of the little goldbug took her boy by the trousers and the collar and she hurried away with him as fast as possible. The silverbug, always plucky, struggled to his feet, and, shaking his fist defiantly at the retreating foe, he cried: "You are nothing but a goldbug, anyhow, and so is your mother; and she is a washerwoman." Instantly the mother took her little boy and pushed him toward the silverbug, and said: "Now, boy, go for him and knock the bullion out of him." (Laughter.)

There were a great many in that Revolution who didn't have the courage of this old woman, because they would not fight and would not uphold and support the brave neighbors who were in front fighting for liberty and country. While such men were quailing and shivering at the approaching shadows of defeat, the famous and chivalrous Captain Biddle, of the ill-starred "Randall," remained undismayed. While engaged in the combat with the British ship Yarmouth he was wounded in the thigh, but he kept his place on deck amidst the blaze of battle, while many of his weak-kneed neighbors were keeping their knees warm at the fire, criticizing the army. And as his life-blood was oozing out he told his men to stand fast, and he issued orders with calmness and decision until his good ship was blown to atoms, until he and his brave men went down to unknown graves.

Such were some of the men who stayed by Washington during the blackest days of the Revolution to enable him to create and baptize the flag in the name of freedom, in the name of self-government, in the name of the sovereignty of the individual and equal rights to all who might seek our shores. (Applause.) That is now one hundred and twenty-six years ago, yet we can say without reserve that those thirteen stripes and five-pointed stars have kept their sacred word. There have been party demagogues and political mountebanks, we admit; there have been feuds and cabals, and dangerous conspiracies; of that there is no question. There have been times when the will of the people was no longer the law of politics, but the law of politics was the will of the professional politician. There have been times when the power of pelf overawed the spirit of patriotism and the lips of the place-hunter clung to the spoils system with the hunger of a leech-like thing. There have been times when some men seemed to believe that liberty purchased by the blood of the citizen ought to lead to no other consummation than the cowardly oppression of the people; there have been socialistic agitators, like Coxey and Brown, who marched their army of bedraggled hoboes to the banks of the Potomac, only to find, beneath the very shadow of the Capitol, that they and all mobs must "keep off the grass."

But through all these scenes of national vicissitudes that flag which found its being on the 15th of June, 1777, in the City of Brotherly Love, has, in compatriots' hands, dissolved the clouds of national danger, warmed the frozen lineaments of national indifference, and gilded every national hope with the pure and genial splendor of its stars. And to-night it still lights the great Republic to her lofty and splendid destiny. And, gentlemen, right here permit me to say that beneath its ample folds we may well remember the indestructible truth which was first uttered in the name of England in Chinese waters, and then repeated by the brave Germanic people, that "Blood is thicker than water," always has been, always will be, and no power on earth can change the Anglo-Saxon condition that now confronts the human race. (Applause.)

In the keeping of our compatriots that flag will never permit the brutal hand of anarchy to pull down the proud name McKinley has won. (Applause.) Nor can we forget that in his name and under his wise leadership this country has crossed the paths of national greatness with the strides of a giant, until the princes of the earth bow before our industrial prowess, and prosperity sets us supremely upon her throne. Nor need I remind you that > "It was on a dewy morning,

> All in the month of May,
> And Dewey was the Admiral's name
> Who took Manila Bay."

Do we now feel discouraged? I don't think we do. (Applause.) As the President has just said, God sent Old Glory there; God evidently intends that Old Glory shall stay there. And what God hath joined together, let no man put asunder. (Applause.) For has it not been truthfully said that beneath the sands of Luzon sleep our heroic dead, and from above that sacred soil no foreign flag shall ever greet the dawn? Christ died to make men holy; our heroes have died to make that people free; and America, in God, goes marching on to the westward, where the course of all glorious empire takes its magnificent way. Need I remind you of that startling and complete annihilation of a mighty fleet of fighting ships in a few moments of time. It was a Captain's fight—for that we have the highest possible authority, unless you go beyond the earth—and I am prone to believe that impartial history will record that every man did his duty, from the little jack tar who cried, "There they come; let me change my Sunday clothes, and we will give them hell," up to the Admiral who commanded the fleet. When those rough riders swept the heights of San Juan, you know, and I know, and the whole world knows, that those brave men and their gallant commander adorned a page of martial history with the finest bit of fighting courage that has ever been recorded in the Temple of Mars. And when the war broke out under Mongolian skies, and the finest of the armed forces of the civilized world gathered to scale the walls of Pekin, our great compatriot's voice lifted itself for mercy, justice and peace; and the whole world listened, and peace and mercy came; and then, on a gentle

September day, you saw him standing in the Temple of Music by the shores of the inland seas, the illustrious President, the victorious diplomat, the beloved of the nation, the friend of mankind, and you saw him with a smile put forth his hand in generous greeting to a fellow creature, and you saw that fellow creature strike him to death. Oh, would that we could put the whip in justice's hands, that she might lash such rascals naked around the earth. Compatriots, our great compatriot dead, and our great compatriot who has succeeded him shall live in our hearts forever. (Applause.)

TOASTMASTER HILL: There is still more oratory to come that is well worth your waiting; but before we hear it there is to be a presentation made to Ex-President Logan. The presentation will be made by Judge Whitehead.

JUDGE WHITEHEAD: Compatriot Logan, we have delighted for the year past to call you President-General. Now, sir, you take your seat down with us, and we and you are equal. But there is a record of the past which makes you superior to us all, and I rise to speak to you in the name of those who delight to honor you and to recall to you and to the compatriots who are listening to the memories of that past.

In the month of April, 1889, a few patriotic citizens, fired by the memories and recollections of that grand day commemorative of the inauguration of George Washington as the first President of the United States, met together in old Fraunce's Tavern, in New York, and there began the inauguration of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. They were few in number, very few; but they were fired in their heart of hearts with that patriotism which fired their fathers in the establishment of the independence of this great country; and to-night we see the culmination of that 30th day of April, 1889, in this vast assemblage of compatriots gathered here together to do honor to the merits, to the patriotism, to the self-sacrifice of our ancestors. That little gathering on that 30th day of April was culminated not only in this assemblage before us this evening, but in an assemblage of 12,000 American citizens of thirty-nine States of the Union, who are meeting from time, as we are to-night, not only in the banquet hall, but in the halls of deliberation, deliberating to know what is best to be done for the interests of this great association. And now there has come a time when it has been thought best to make a Register of all the members of the different societies of the S. A. R., and that great task was entrusted to a Committee on Publication, of which Howard DeHaven Ross, of Delaware—that noble young man—was the Chairman. (Applause.)

Through the munificence of you, sir (addressing Compatriot W. S. Logan), through your self-sacrifice, that work has been completed, and I have the honor of presenting to you the first volume issued from the press, and which you will find enclosed in this little casket.

This casket is made from the wood taken from the Morris Mansion, where lived once Mary Phillips, who loved George Washington, but who did not succeed in capturing his heart, for it was reserved to Washington to gain a nobler prize. In that casket is a part of the wood of Fraunce's Tavern, and a piece of Connecticut oak. I believe, sir, you claim parentage from Connecticut. That oak is a symbol of the strength and vitality of the red blood that flows in your veins. You will find enclosed in this casket also the arms of the Logan family; and upon it you will find inscribed a heart, a large heart, a heart emblematic of the heart which beats within your system, so full of generous work, so full of generous self-sacrifice. I present it and the casket to you in the name of the publisher, Mr. Louis H. Cornish, and in the name of the Committee on Publication. (Applause.)

Hon. W. S. Logan: Mr. Toastmaster, Judge Whitehead, ladies and gentlemen, I thought this morning that I came from Connecticut, but after hearing Judge Whitehead I have no idea where I did come from. It is usual, so far as I know, in all well-conducted funerals to give the corpse at least twenty-four hours' notice. That is not the way you do in the District of Columbia.

I see you have referred, sir, very feelingly to the secrifices I have made in connection with the publication of the Register. Those sacrifices consist in loaning Cornish a few hundred dollars, for which I have received my pay, with six per cent. interest, when I could not get but four per cent. anywhere else. (Laughter.) Just the same I am willing to take all the credit for it.

You have referred, sir, to my distinguished administration as President-General. I was simply a sandwich man; I stood between a great predecessor and a great successor (applause); and was made illustrious by the shadows falling both ways. (Applause.) This morning you were all my sons; this afternoon I felt lonely; but this evening I console myself with a glimpse that I catch of something that I saw in the galleries and in the doorways, and as soon as I can I am going to try to make myself a grandfather to the daughters. So I don't care whether Warfield has you for his sons or not. (Laughter.)

Judge Whitehead, there is no man living from whom I would be prouder to receive a gift than from your sweet, lovely and venerable hands. (Applause.) I have been a member of the S. A. R. ever since there were any, and as long as I have been a member I have worshipped at the shrine of Judge Whitehead. And as long as he continues upon this earth—and we guarantee him twenty years more—I shall be his worshipper.

Judge Whitehead, ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Cornish, and all who are concerned in this job that has been put up on me to-night, I thank you from the bottom of my heart. (Applause.) Mr. Toastmaster, the funeral may go on.

Toastmaster Hill: I have risen, compatriots, with the innocent purpose of peering about among the ladies to see if I could discover the face of a distinguished Senator from New York, the Hon. Chauncey M. Depew. He was with us, but I don't see his genial face just now. I will therefore ask that the Hon. John Goode, from the Commonwealth of Virginia, close the speaking of the evening—or rather of this morning.

JUDGE GOODE: Mr. Toastmaster, ladies and gentlemen, compatriots, this is a violation of the Bill of Rights. It is cruel and unusual punishment for me to be called upon at this late hour to take the place of the great orator, Chauncey M. Depew. What can I say, what shall I say, after the many able and eloquent and exhaustive and instructive addresses to which we have listened? There has been so much said, and, upon the whole, so well said, that I will not presume to detain you but for a few moments.

I am reminded of a story I heard once of two preachers. One of them said to the other: "I have had many advantages over you in this life; I have had a college education; I have a splendid library; I write out all my sermons carefully. But you have had no college education; you have no library; you never write a sermon; and yet you are a brilliant success in the pulpit, while I am a dismal failure." The other preacher said, "I can explain that, and I tell you how it is. When you sit down in your study to write out those sermons, the devil is at your elbow, peeping over your shoulder, seeing what you write, so that he may go out during the week and prepare the hearts of the people to resist what you are going to say on Sunday. But when I am going to preach, the devil himself doesn't know what I will say." (Laughter.)

I am reminded of another story I heard at the Waldorf-Astoria, a few years ago. One of the speakers said that there was an old Congregational minister in Boston, who began his services at 8:30 in the morning; prayed an hour; preached until 12; took cold lunch; and then preached until sundown. One day he had preached from early morn to dewy eve, until he fainted away. A good deacon ran up and threw some ice-water in his face to resusciate him. The old man revived, rose, looked around, and said: "Now, let the congregation rise and sing the eighty-second Psalm, 'My bones have waxed faint, because I have roared all day long." (Laughter.)

Now, we have heard a great deal to-day about our common country. I am gratified to know that my brethren have enjoyed their visit to this beautiful capital city of the country; our common country, upon which a beneficent Providence has lavished blessings and advantages such as have been bestowed upon no other part of the habitable globe; the country of which an American citizen said on an occasion like this: "It is bounded on the north by the British possessions; on the south by the Gulf of Mexico; on the east by the Atlantic Ocean; on the west by the Pacific Ocean." Another compatriot, who had been dining, thought he would improve on that, and asked to be allowed to give that toast: "America, bounded on the north by the North Pole; on the South by the South Pole; on the east by the rising sun; on the west by the setting sun." Another compatriot, not satisfied with that, being a little exhilarated, offered an amendment, and said: "Let me propose that toast." He said: "America, the United States, bounded on the North by the Aurora Borealis; on the south by the procession of the equinoxes; on the east by primeval chaos; on the west by the day of judgment." (Laughter.)

ginia have nothing to boast of but our antiquities; that we breakfast on tablets, dine on monuments, and sup on tombstones. (Laughter.) And at the great Columbian Exposition in Chicago some years ago, when the great commonwealths of the West and our sister States, of which we are so proud, were making a magnificent exhibit of their industrial products, a wag facetiously remarked that Old Virginia had nothing to show but George Washington's golden snuff box and Lady Washington's lace handkerchief.

Now, my friends, I am here to plead guilty to the charge that we are proud of the memories, the historic mementoes and hallowed associations that cluster about the name of that renowned commonwealth. I want to say —and I know it will strike a responsive chord in the breasts of my compatriots here—that the people who take no pride in the honorable deeds of their ancestors are not apt to accomplish very much for themselves. (Applause.)

Now, as the preachers say, I want to improve this occasion; I want to turn it to account. There is a great event to take place ere long in the old commonwealth. We are preparing to celebrate the tercentenary of the settlement of the Colony of Jamestown, and I want to invoke the cordial and hearty co-operation of my compatriots here in promoting that grand object. (Appause.) I may not be there to see it, but some of you will. Jamestown was the cradle of the American Republic. When the colonists came in the Susan Constant, the Discoverer and the Good Speed, and landed on the 13th day of May, 1607, at Jamestown, they brought with them those three institutions which have been enlarged and improved from generation to generation, until they are now zealously guarded and cherished as the noblest inheritance that belongs to man.

At Jamestown, the white man first met the red man for settlement and civilization. Here the white men wielded the first axe to cut the first log, to build the first log cabin. Here the first log cabin became a part of the nrst State capitol. Here was laid the foundation of a nation of freemen, which has extended its dominion and its millions across the Continent to the shores of another ocean.

We want to combine the sentimental with the material! we are going to make requisition upon the orator and the poet, and we intend to make a grand exhibit of the present industrial resources of our State.

Now, my friends, in conclusion let me say that we do not live altogether on antiquities. When the war between the States terminated, that people didn't sit down in ignoble and inglorious ease and fold their arms. No; they went to work with a resolute purpose and an indomitable will worthy of the heroic race from which they sprang. Instead of calling upon Hercules for help, they went to work to help themselves; and I undertake to say—it is due to the truth of history—that no people have ever exhibited greater recuperative energies since the beginning of time. They have made more corn, more wheat, more tobacco, produced more manufactures, built more miles of railway, than they ever did in the same number of years before. And the growth of our cities is indeed marvelous. Take the magic City of Roanoke in the southwest. A few years ago I knew it as a vast wheat field; now it has a population of 25,006 and is a great business centre. Take the City of Newport News. When I was a candidate for Congress in 1874, and landed at Newport News upon the steamer from Norfolk, I saw two old dilapidated buildings there, and nothing more. Now it is a city with a population of 27,000. It has the finest dockyard on this hemisphere, which built last year six large steamers, put upon the waters the fastest battleship afloat, and according to the late returns from the Treasury it is second to New York as an export city.

Now, my friends, I mention this in no spirit of vainglorious boasting, but to remind you that we are not content to live altogether upon memories. We are proud of them; but the old State, God bless her (Applause), crowned with the traditions of history, and bearing in her hands the precious trophies of the past, has fixed her eye upon the morning of a new existence; a morning with glorious sunshine, sweet with the dew of flowers; a morning that betokens a day of strenuous effort, industrial growth, commercial greatness, peace and prosperity, now and forever. (Applause.)

TOASTMASTER HILL: Your Hosts of the District of Columbia thank you, compatriots, who have honored us with your presence here, for your visit and for your companionship. We bid you Godspeed, as you go from us. We will now join in a parting song, which will close the banquet. (Applause.)

"Auld Lang Syne" was sung by the quartet.

Compatriot:

It is the painful duty of the President-General to announce the death of Compatriot Charles Waldo Haskins, Secretary-General, from pneumonia, on January 9, 1903, after a very brief illness.

Mr. Haskins was unanimously elected to the office of Secretary-General at the annual Congress held in Washington last spring. He had been for a number of years a member of the Board of Managers of the Empire State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution; and from 1893 to 1899, inclusive was Treasurer-General of the National Society. By his death we have lost a patriotic and zealous worker in our noble cause.

(Signed) EDWIN WARFIELD,
President-General.
